Three-Ring Ceremony As Luci, Pat Married

WASHINGTON (AP) — In one of Washington's social affairs of the age, Luci Baines Johnson became Mrs. Patrick J. Nugent today. A proud president looked on.

The vows between the 19-year-old daughter of President Lyndon B. Johnson and her 23-year-old groom were taken in the giant shrine of the Immaculate Conception, national church of Roman Catholicism. Present was a select congregation of 700, including both notables and hitherto obscure folk from Waukegan, Ill., Nugent's hometown.

Luci shook slightly as she said "I do." During the ceremony she had her gaze alternately fixed on Patrick and on a tremendous mosaic of the Saviour behind the high altar.

The exact time of the wedding was 12:42 p.m. EDT. Rev. John A. Kuzinkas of Chicago administered the vows. The couple knelt before him on white pillows at the edge of the altar platform.

The bride's long, starched illusion veil spread out behind her. Her long-sleeved gown was of white rosepoint alencon appliques, lightly embroidered with pearls.

Toward the end, before the recessional, Luci made a short detour. In a little ceremony dear to her heart, she walked to a chapel near the chancel and laid one of her two bouquets before a mosaic of St. Agatha, a patron saint of nursing.

Then the walk back down the aisle and off to the feast and reception at the White House. A big tent had been erected on the south lawn, decorated with paper pink poppies looking real. Gilt chairs, and tables bearing silver punch bowls, dotted the greensward. Giant red roses of paper were wired to holly hedges.

CAKE 7 TIERS

Inside the mansion, a seven-tiered wedding cake towered between portraits of George and Martha Washington.

It was not only a double-ring wedding — it was a triple. Luci, with slight of hand only a determined bride could perform, ended up with her engagement ring sandwiched between two wedding circlets.

She did this without ever taking off the engagement ring. The feat is performed by putting the ring fingers of right and left hands together, end to end, and sliding the engagement ring from one to the other. Patrick got only one ring.

Wedding Picketed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group protesting the war in Viet Nam began picketing the Roman Catholic National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception today hours before the scheduled noon wedding of Luci Baines Johnson.

Early Election Call Draws Opposition Fire

Couple Found on Drifting Boat

RCMP Probe Deaths

RCMP are investigating the deaths of a young couple whose bodies were found aboard a drifting boat in Georgia Strait early today.

The 34-foot gillnetter was discovered at the mouth of Jervis Inlet at 2:45 a.m. today by the tugboat Monarch II from Campbell River.

A Powell River RCMP spokesman said there is no indication of foul play, but an autopsy has been ordered on the bodies of the young man and woman.

Their names and the name of the boat cannot be released until next-of-kin have been notified.

It is understood the boat is registered in Vancouver and was on its way back from the fishing grounds at Rivers Inlet.

Capt. W. J. Lebans of the Monarch II reported he came across the drifting boat while towing a log boom up-Island.

When he discovered the bodies he put a line on the boat and notified Powell River RCMP. A police boat intercepted the tug and the boat was towed to Powell River this morning.

Jetliner Pilot Dies at Controls

TOKYO (UPI)—The pilot of a KLM Royal Dutch Airways DC8 jetliner died at the controls early today seconds before the big jet was to touch down at Tokyo airport. A fast-thinking co-pilot wrested the controls from the dead man to avert an almost certain crash.

Officials said the plane, en route from Amsterdam to Manila with 56 passengers aboard, was only three to four seconds from touch down when the pilot, Capt. G. H. De Groot, died of an apparent heart attack.

LANDING ABORTED

In one lightning move, the co-pilot, C. G. De Jager, 37, applied full power and aborted the landing.

De Jager took the plane back up to 3,000 feet, had the crew pull the dead pilot from his seat and brought the big jet in for a perfect landing with the aid of the navigator.

The co-pilot said the jet had passed the final landing approach beacon and was less than 150 feet in the air when De Groot slumped across the controls.

Authorities said the pilot, who had passed a required physical examination June 27, apparently died of a heart attack.

Jeer Negroes

HOPEWELL, Va. (AP) — About 40 Negroes held a protest march and grievance meeting on the steps of Hopewell's Municipal building today amid the jeers and shouts of Ku Klux Klansmen.

There was no violence but tension ran high in the downtown area of this southside Virginia manufacturing city as the Negroes, including a sizable number of children, marched about two miles to city hall and mounted the steps between ranks of robed klansmen.

HIROSHIMA REMEMBERS

HIROSHIMA (Reuters) — Hiroshima, a bustling city carved from shattered ruins, stopped all activity for 60 seconds today to observe in silence the 21st anniversary of the dropping of the first atomic bomb. Of an estimated 420,000 persons in the city when the nine-foot cylindrical bomb fell, only 176,987 survivors were accounted for.

Complicity In Viet Protested

OTTAWA (CP) — A group of 35, mostly university students, paraded on Parliament Hill today in what had been billed as a mass demonstration against the war in Viet Nam.

Their march began at the Supreme Court of Canada building a half-block west of Parliament Hill where organizers had a large stack of placards on hand bearing slogans of protest against the United States' intervention in the war and "Canadian complicity."

About half of the large signs had to be loaded back into a car because of the small turnout.

The demonstrators handed out pamphlets to tourists gathering for the changing of the guard.

VOTE RECORDS TO FALL

Records in number of voters, size of legislature and election expenses will be set in the Sept. 12 provincial vote.

The current registration drive — which closes officially Saturday, Aug. 13 — is expected to see the largest number of British Columbians in history recorded on the voters' lists.

●

A total of 873,140 voters were registered for the last election and 69.7 per cent of them turned out to elect 32 Socreds, 14 New Democrats and five Liberals.

At dissolution Friday, there was only one vacancy, caused by the death of George McLeod (SC — North Okanagan).

There will be three more seats, to make a record 55-seat legislature, filled by the present election campaign as a result of redistribution which went into effect automatically Friday. Under it, the southern end of Vancouver Island has been altered with Victoria reduced from a three-seat to a two-seat riding.

●

The new house will mark a historic departure in which urban MLAs will outnumber those from predominately rural constituenciees.

The coming campaign also is expected to break expense records.

The drain from the public treasury is expected to soar above the 89-cents-per-voter cost that saw the total reach $539,446 in the last election, because of the massive registration drive, and the larger returning staff needed.

●

Up to 8,000 persons will be involved in supervising balloting and counting the votes, it has been estimated.

Parties are bound to spend more on campaigns because of the larger number of seats at stake. Last time the Socreds reported campaign expenditures of $292,000; Tories $83,000; Liberals $57,000; and NDP $49,000.

Oil Depots Bombed

SAIGON (UPI) — U.S. warplanes winged through Communist Sam missile attacks to pound North Vietnamese oil depots and radar installations in 105 hard-hitting missions on the second anniversary of the first U.S. attack on the north.

Bennett Sets September 12

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

Political opponents today labelled the Sept. 12 provincial general election as Premier Bennett's "unnecessary election."

The premier announced the vote—his fifth election writ since coming to power in 1952—at a press conference in the Hotel Vancouver Friday night.

New Democratic Party spokesman Alex Macdonald today blasted the call as "an unnecessary election" that proved the premier put politics first.

He lashed at the lack of any issue and claimed the administration had two more years with an uncompleted program.

The Vancouver-East MLA spoke in place of Opposition Leader Robert Strachan, who was on his way back to Nanaimo from a holiday in a remote area near 100 Mile House in the Cariboo as a result of the election call.

Liberal Leader Ray Perrault and Pogressive Conservative Association President Stuart Fleming also criticized the premier's election call as totally unnecessary.

Mr. Perrault said that recent surveys show a vast majority of the people are opposed to an election at this time and they well could "give Premier Bennett a shock" with their resentment.

Most Registration Ready

Mr. Bennett, in announcing the election, said completion of most voter registration efforts in the wake of the redistribution bill was one of the main reasons for calling the election.

The election will be the fifth since Premier Bennett's Social Credit government was first elected in 1952. The last one was Sept. 30, 1963, when the Socreds elected 33, NDP 14 and Liberals five.

Mr. Bennett said that though the government could stay in office five years, it was traditional to hold an election every three years or so.

Although there has been speculation in B.C. since March that there would be an election Sept. 12, Mr. Bennett said the date was set only Friday afternoon and the proclamation of dissolution signed by Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes later Friday in Victoria, in the premier's absence.

So far, there are 25 NDP candidates nominated and 35 Liberals either nominated or about to be. No Socred or Conservative candidates have been chosen yet.

The actual campaigns are not expected to get underway until after next week.

Mr. Bennett said he would start his campaign in Campbell River at an unspecified date. Mr. Strachan is expected to announce his plans next week.

Mr. Perrault said he would open his campaign after returning from the scheduled Aug. 12-13 meeting of the four western Liberal provincial leaders in Saskatoon.

Stuart Fleming, president of the Progressive Conservative Association, did not say whether he would campaign but indicated the Tories will field only a token contingent of nominees.

"Premier Bennett has proved again that he puts politics first," Mr. Macdonald said.

'Let Province Down'

"He has called an unnecessary election in the early days of August when the people of B.C. are on holiday and enjoying the summer, while Mr. Bennett is hoping to tip-toe through the flowers into another term of office before it's too late.

"He has his majority and two years to complete a program—if he had one. Instead he's spending the people's money on an expensive election as he did when he bought a toy for the minister of highways in the form of a Lear jet."

Mr. Macdonald said Premier Bennett already has let down the province badly "by attending a strawberry social of the Socred

DR. MARTIN KING FELLED BY ROCK

Frenzied Whites Attack Negro Marchers

CHICAGO (AP)—Racial violence wracked an all-white neighborhood Friday for the second time this week and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., felled by a rock, said the eruption was fostered by the worst hate he has ever seen.

King promised the marchers would return to the area.

More than 6,000 frenzied white residents of the southwest side Chicago Lawn neighborhood rioted during and after a march by 800 civil rights demonstrators.

The civil rights group is demanding open housing. The Chicago Lawn residents say they had built up the neighborhood and that Negroes would degrade it.

A 19-year-old white youth was wounded in the shoulder by a knife thrown towards King during a march. The youth was released after hospital treatment.

Police arrested 39 white persons, including three women. Hospitals said 28 persons were brought in with injuries, including two persons on stretchers, an unconscious man, a little girl whose eyes were cut by flying glass and three policemen.

"It hurts, but it's not an injury," King shouted above the cursing, screaming, mob in Marquette Park after he fell to one knee when a rock hit his head.

"I've never seen such hostility in a demonstration before and I've been all over the south," King said.

"I have to do this—to expose myself—to bring this hate into the open," King shouted to reporters. "I have never seen such hate—not in Mississippi or Alabama—as I see here in Chicago."

King, chairman of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, got to his feet, ripped off his tie and began forming the demonstrators into a line for the march.

The violence occurred in a Polish - Irish - Lithuanian middle-class neighborhood. The residents are mostly Roman Catholic.

The demonstration began in the racially-tense area when four groups went to separate real estate offices to picket. When the demonstrators milled into Marquette Park, a scenic, recreation area, to form for the march, they were met with jeers, catcalls, curses, rocks and bottles from the white residents, mostly youths.

When the demonstrators—white and Negro men and women, priests and nuns—knelt to pray, firecrackers were thrown into the kneeling group, and the crowd screamed obscenities and waved banners.

INSIDE CITY HALL

Why Did City Pick on Little Company First?

By JIM HUME

City council, with one "smoker's" scalp tucked away in its belt, may now consider going after the big boy.

Hume

Captial Iron and Metal, wincing a little after being fined $400 for violating the city's anti-smoke bylaw, (the company pleaded guilty to the offence) isn't the only company churning out a grey haze over Canada's most beautiful city.

A funny thing happened after Capital Iron got the chop. Quite a sprinkling of telephone calls arrived at city asking "why the discrimination? We have no love for any firm making smoke, but why pick out the smallest of the offenders."

A good question and one we hope will be answered somewhere around Tuesday afternoon of next week.

Extension

The guess from this corner is that B.C. Forests Products, having been given six months to tidy up their smoke hazard, will be given an extension, say for a few more months, to rectify the problem.

After that it's Ringleman charts and prosecution.

Well, it's a pretty fair guess.

While in the forecasting business — and the crystal ball is very clear these bright summer days — let's hazard a couple of guesses on skytowers and hotel-motel developments in the Inner Harbor area.

First: the Capital Improvement District Commission will turn thumbs down on the proposal to build a motel-store-clock tower complex on the CPR property on Belleville.

Instead the commission will recommend to the provincial cabinet that the property be expropriated at a fat sum and converted to nice open green lawns.

On the skydeck the CIDC also looks askance.

Borderline

Wether it has the power to say "no" or whether it can just make a recommendation seems to be in doubt at present for the zone in question is borderline.

But if the CIDC has its way no skydeck will grace (or otherwise) the foreshore fringes of the harbor area.

Other forecasts should include the big battle coming up at city council on Thursday next.

That's the day the august city fathers consider the problem of a medical building on Yates just beyond Cook.

Torn between fairness (there is already commercial development opposite) and holding the Cook Street line on the downtown core boundry council is in a quandary.

Third Time

Earlier this week the advisory planning board, after taking a third close look at the situation, decided that maybe the development could go in. The board has our sympathy for the problem is not the easiest to solve.

With development already in the area some board members said "how can we justifiably hold back other development."

Other board members took the line: "okay what's outside the Cook Street boundary is outside, but let us not permit the sprawl to get away from us."

Thursday the hour of truth comes for council for that is the day the seven aldermen (Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow will be out of town) vote yes or no on the issue.

My forecast: The development will be permitted but by a close vote.

And on that one I could be wrong for the vote will be close. All it needs is one alderman to switch camps and the decision could go either way.

Enough serious stuff for the weekend.

'Knee Look'

Chatting with Ald. Clyde Savage the other day before he left for Shawnigan Lake and a session with the carpenter's saw sans slacks but in trim shorts.

Said I: "Too bad we can't have a photographer on hand to record the sight for posterity."

Said he, blue cigar smoke wafting to the ceiling: "I agree. I have the finest set of legs on city council, and you can quote me on that."

Note the quote. Maybe later this year we can have a city council leg contest, to be judged by a gaggle of pretty secretaries from city hall.

After all if we can't get the Follies to pack Centennial square, maybe the knees of eight aldermen would be equally attractive.

Canoeists Start Race to Victoria

Special to The Times

FORT ST. JAMES — A shotgun blast sent 10 dugout canoes skimming across Stuart Lake today on the first leg of a 600 mile race to Victoria.

The sun was shining and scarcely a ripple disturbed the glassy waters as paddles strained to send the sleek craft skimming across the surface.

The race, part of B.C.'s centennial celebrations, will finish in the Inner Harbor Aug. 15.

Only provinces without a team in the race are Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island. The Yukon and Northwestern Territories both provided entries.

The first day was scheduled to end around 4 p.m. at the mouht of Stuart River.

On Sunday the canoes will head down the river towards Prince George, where they will enter the Fraser River.

Before entering the Inner Harbor next Friday, the canoes will assemble off the waterfront for a final five-mile sprint.

The race, started by centennial chief L. J. Wallace, is a prelude to the 1967 voyageur canoe pageant from northern B.C. to Montreal.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Skies will be sunny over the weekend for most of B.C. as a ridge of high pressure covers the province. Skies will be cloudy with a chance of rain on Sunday along the north coast as a weather disturbance moves northward offshore to the west of the ridge of high pressure.

FIRST CALL with Ben Wicks

"In sickness or in health, Republican or Democrat . . ."

Ailing Health Forces Martin to Sidelines

Health Minister Eric Martin is the first casualty of the provincial election writ.

Mr. Martin will not run again because of ill-health, Premier Bennett announced Friday to a press conference in Vancouver.

Mr. Martin will remain at his post until after the election "and a re-organization of the cabinet."

Mr. Martin has held one of the two Vancouver-Burrard seats for Social Credit ever since it came to power in 1952.

Speculation has been current for several days that Dr. Lawrence E. Ranta, medical director of Vancouver General Hospital will be the front-runner at the Socred nomination meeting to replace Mr. Martin.

Dr. Ranta currently is out of the country but is expected to return soon.

TWO DOCTORS RUNNING

If he is nominated, the Socreds would have two doctors in the campaign as Dr. Charles Ennals is considered a certain repeat as the party's nominee in Oak Bay where he ran a close second to Liberal MLA Alan Macfarlane in his first effort in 1963.

Two other members of the last legislature also will not be in the running again.

Both Liberal MLA Gordon Gibson (North Vancouver) and deputy New Democratic Leader Arthur Turner (Vancouver East) both told the last session that they would not be back if an election was held this year.

Socred Don Robinson (Lillooett) also indicated at the same time it was unlikely he would be a candidate but he made no formal statement.

22 YEARS IN POLITICS

Mr. Martin bows out after 22 years in political life, the first eight in the wilderness as one of the original stalwarts of the Social Credit League at a time when it was an unknown and tiny group in B.C.

He was among three persons who played key roles in persuading Premier Bennett to join the party after he left the Conservatives to become an independent not long before the 1952 election. Mr. Martin also played a major part in helping Mr. Bennett become leader.

He has been for several years the dean of Canadian health ministers, holding the portfolio for 14 years.

Mr. Martin has been ill for some time with a lung ailment and, although he dodged questions whether he would retire soon, he did admit Thursday that his condition was "worse."

Plane Found, 2 Safe

WINNIPEG (CP)— Two men, missing in northern Manitoba since Tuesday, were found by an RCAF Dakota aircraft Friday evening.

The pilot, Ed Dinolovitch and passenger Mat Bzuba, both of Lynn Lake, were safe and uninjured when a private aircraft picked them up a short time later.

. . . ELECTION

party last Monday when he should have been on duty at the provincial premiers' conference.

"He has no issue to take to the people at this time and doesn't want one. I've always admired the straightforward way in which he dodges the issues, but this time his political skill has failed him.

"People resent power-hungry politicians and he should have thought that what happened to Jean Lesage in Quebec, Walter Shaw in P.E.I.

Mr. Macdonald said the NDP "has never been in better fighting shape. We are ready and we are going to give Mr. Bennett the fight of his life.

Liberal chief Perrault also claimed the election was "unnecessary and uncalled for" but should surprise no one because Mr. Bennett had a record of political expediency.

"There is really no visible issue," he said.

"Redistribution is important but the premier has tolerated monumental injustices in representation too long for him to be able to claim a passionate desire to be democratic."

Mr. Perrault said the election will cost between $2 and $3 million and will bring "the total estimate of the costs of Mr. Bennett's elections to $10 million since 1952."

"Mr. Bennett fears a levelling out of the economy next year so he has called this election even though there is no issue—that's the simple fact of the matter," Mr. Perrault said.

"He has demonstrated that he is more interested in political power than in proper administration of the province by his refusal to attend the provincial premiers' conference this week in favor of the political Socred orgy at Kelowna."

"He's going to try to slide by again with an incomplete voters' list and, in view of the redistribution of ridings, he should at least have extended the 38-day campaign period for the sake of British Columbia.

"He could have called it for later in September if he was desperate to have one this fall.

"For him to say that all parties were informed of it at the same time is political hogwash because we know that Socred headquarters was told two weeks ago and that about six days ago the election poster-making equipment began going out to the constituency associations.

'Public Let Down'

"The indications are that we will contest every seat and certainly there will be an articulate campaign by the Liberals in every region of the province."

"I honestly believe there is going to be a great deal of public impatience with this election and the voters may well give Mr. Bennett a shock.

"This probably is his last campaign and I fully expect to see Mr. Bennett retire within the next couple of years.

"What we need is a new direction in this province. We've had Bennett for 15 years and a lot of people think that not only is enough but too much."

"We will do what we can," said Mr. Fleming in an interview Friday night. "But we are not in a position to run a full-scale campaign.

In the last provincial election in 1963 the Conservatives won no seats in the legislature. They have been without a provincial leader since Davie Fulton returned to federal politics in 1965.

Fleming, former MP for Okanagan-Revelstoke, said Conservatives will need "a little time to decide which constituencies they would contest.

The premier said it was felt Sept. 12 was "a good date—Everyone is back from their holidays." His announcement came just four days after a Social Credit celebration at Mr. Bennett's home town of Kelowna, marking the party's 14 years in power under his leadership.

His press conference statement dealt mainly with the record of his government—its building of highways and power projects, introduction of the homeowner grant and the provincial medical insurance, and measures which brought "explosive development" to the province.

Bennett Carries On Untraditional Mark

Premier Bennett, who has toppled a series of records in the B.C. political archives, made another Firday when he issued his fifth election writ.

Only other premier close to him was Sir Richard McBride—the man whose 12½-year record in office Mr. Bennett also broke—who was involved in four election calls during his regime.

Although some eyebrows were raised because Premier Bennett made the announcement in a Vancouver hotel instead of the government seat here, he was following his personal tradition in being untraditional.

Aug. 23, 1963, the premier sprang a surprise election announcement at a press conference here — after carrying the signed election writ around in his pocket for two days, including one day when he held another press conference but said nothing about it.

On Aug. 3, 1960, he announced an election from his hometown in Kelowna.

On Aug. 13, 1956, he announced another surprise election, this time in a late-night radio broadcast that was fed to a network from the capital.

March 27, 1953, he announced an election after his newly-elected minority government was defeated on the floor of the house.

Mr. Bennett's decision to hold a 38-day campaign this time, the legal minimum, also is characteristic. In all the previous elections he has called, 40 days was the longest campaign period.

The shortest campaign in B.C. history took 12 days in 1875 and the longest was 94 days in 1933.

Pilots Receive Walkie-Talkies

B.C. coastal pilots have been equipped with walkie-talkie radio sets to assist in guiding ships through B.C. tricky waters.

The portable sets allow the pilot to pass and receive instructions to and from the tugs and pilothouses.

In the past they have had to use the ship's radio to keep in touch with shore and escorting tugs.

HITCH-HIKE TO SAFETY

CAMPBELL RIVER — An air and sea search for a couple who disappeared in a rented pleasure craft was called off Thursday when the couple walked safely into the rental dock.

The owner of the 14-foot boat they had rented, Ken Forde, said Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Lindgren had hitch-hiked back to Campbell River after the craft had broken down several miles up the coast.

They returned at 2 p.m. Thursday.

Police launched the search Thursday morning around Quadra Island, off Campbell River, which the couple had given as their destination.

A team of researchers at Cornell University have decided that our bathroom fixtures are out of date.

They claim, after five years of study, that wash basins are installed too low and are of the wrong design, anyway.

The researchers suggest that in future all wash basins should be of triangular design to accommodate flopping elbows, thus eliminating the elbow trickle which wets many a bathroom floor.

The experts didn't stop at wash basins. They came up with sweeping recommendations for just about everything in the bathroom from toilets to medicine cabinets.

Over the years, no doubt, many of their design recommendations will be incorporated at the factory level so that, in the years to come, the face of the good old bathroom will change completely.

One thing will not change: the quality of the skilled workmanship required to install plumbing fittings, old or new.

Whether we get three-cornered wash basins, warm water flushings bidets, contoured bathtubs or not, the Journeyman Mechanic will always be required.

33 STRIKERS PLACED UNDER ARREST

Violence at Steel Plant

HAMILTON (CP) — Some arrested wildcat strikers threatened today to break up a mass union meeting scheduled for 10:30 a.m. Sunday unless the union seeks to have all charges dropped against 29 held after violence at the strikebound Steel Co. of Canada plant here. The 29 now are out on bail.

The number of arrests in the strike mounted to 33 early today when four men found in the company's main plant by security guards were turned over to police.

The 29 out on bail also want firm undertakings by the company that no reprisals will be made against the members of Local 1005, United Steelworkers of America (CLC).

The general membership meeting was scheduled at Civic Stadium when union leaders will ask the wildcatters to return to work. Their walkout, protesting slowness in contract negotiations, has made idle some 17,000 at Stelco and other plants.

Motions proposed at a union meeting Friday also demand that a contract be set up within seven days of any return to work or the men will walk out again.

STRIKERS SPLIT

The wildcat strikers are divided into two groups, those who think the men should return to work Monday and those who feel that the strike should continue until a new contract is signed, said a spokesman for the former group.

"We don't like this talk of violence but we can't stop the radicals from saying what they please," he said. "I don't think that they will cause a riot, although they have one disturber who could cause trouble."

A spokesman for the more radical group said the men arrested are not in themselves strong enough to begin any violence.

"However, I am sure the membership will be worked up for this meeting. It will be difficult to control them," he said. "It should be a rough session."

Meanwhile, a move is under way to form a women's auxiliary picket force which would surround all entrances to Stelco during the Sunday meeting.

The four men arrested today were charged with trespassing.

BAD DAY FRIDAY

The strikers behaved Friday night after a day of violence during which 500 fighting steelworkers battled about 70 policemen.

The strikers were released on $100 bail each. Most of them had been charged with obstructing police, creating a disturbance or assault.

The report that 15 men were arrested in the evening for throwing stones at a truck entering Canada's largest steel plant was denied by police.

To avoid any recurrence of the day's skirmishes police had their day staff work overtime to complement the night staff. By 11 p.m. when the pickets changed, about 80 policemen were on duty at the main gate of the Hilton Works, the largest plant in Stelco's vast operations.

PUB CLOSED

In another attempt to curb violence, the brightside House, which stands beside the plant, closed at 5 p.m. The spot is a handy drinking place for strikers and police advised the owner to close the bar, which he did willingly.

A crowd, estimated at 1,000, milled around the main gate late in the evening, but only about 500 were steelworkers. The remainder were spectators.

The pickets, members of the United Steelworkers of America (CLC), showed their antagonism by cursing passing motorists and walking slowly in front of traffic which the police were trying to keep moving.

By midnight, when it appeared there wouldn't be any fighting, most of the crowd went home at which time the police force was reduced to about 20 men. About 70 pickets remained.

The main clash, which flared just before 3 p.m. when a striker called a company supervisor "scab", followed these events:

- An attempt to move a train loaded with scrap metal into the plant failed when 200 strikers rushed a police line. At least two officers were knocked to the ground and five strikers were arrested.
- A mass sitdown by strikers on Burlington Street near the plant's main gate blocked traffic.
- Police arrested 11 pickets during the morning after a gap was opened in the picket line, clearing the way for supervisory and office personnel to enter the plant.

The afternoon fight started after a union official announced a general membership meeting Sunday afternoon at Hamilton's Civic Stadium in an effort to end the wildcat walkout which has put some 17,000 men out of work.

One striker said "I think we will be asked to go back to work Monday and give the company seven days to come up with a new contract.

"If we do go back, then the company will be forced to come up with the contract we demand because if they don't we will walk out again and it'll cost them millions."

A company official estimated Friday night that Stelco is losing $1,250,000 a day in sales and the workers are losing $250,000 in wages.

The contract between Stelco and the Steelworkers expired July 31 and the workers walked out Wednesday night, complaining of the slow pace of contract negotiations.

Eight Fires Doused By Victoria Crews

Area firemen doused eight grass and bush fires Friday before any reached serious proportions.

City firemen attended to bush blazes in the 700 block Moss, two at Beacon Hill Park and two Dallas Road beach fires, one near Cook and the other near Howe.

In Saanich, firemen extinguisdhed a bush fire at 2494 Sinclair and also fought a car fire at Carey and McKenzie.

In Central Saanich a crew put out a bush fire at the intersection of the Pat Bay Highway and Keating Crossroad. Langford firemen mopped up a bush fire at Jacklin Road.

There was a marked increase during the week in outbreak of new forest fires throughout the province and the fire hazard continues to climb.

The provincial forest service reported today that of 155 new outbreaks 145 were in the Vancouver, Kamloops and Nelson forest districts. Cool, wet weather in the Prince Rupert and Prince George districts helped hold down the number of outbreaks in the north to 10. But drying conditions are expected to return in those areas.

The service said 131 fires were extinguished during the week at a cost of $25,000, bringing estimated firefighting costs so far this year to $454,000, compared with $1,494,100 for the same period last year. Of the 72 fires still burning in the province, none are of a major nature.

Salvation Army Area Commander Off to Hong Kong

Lt.-Col. and Mrs. John Nelson—a Salvation Army couple well-known in Victoria—have been posted to Hong Kong.

They will take up their new post later this month.

Col. Nelson has been divisional commander with headquarters in Vancouver. He operated the Red Shield canteen on Broad Street, Victoria, during the Second World War. He is a brother of D. H. Bert Nelson of Esquimalt.

In Hong Kong he will be officer commanding the Salvation Army corps.

Bogus Bill Handed Out By Bank

VANCOUVER (CP) — John M. Cooper, a newly-arrived British immigrant, received a quick lesson on Canadian currency Friday.

Cooper, arrested after trying to pass a counterfeit $20 at a Vancouver bank, was released when he told police he had just arrived from Britain and had received the bill in exchange for stirling at Barclays Bank in London.

He said he didn't know the money was counterfeit and that he wasn't familiar with Canadian currency.

Police said this series of counterfeit bills has been circulating all over the world.

Group Planned 220-yard Tunnel Under the Wall

BERLIN (Reuters) — A 22-year-old waiter told the East German High Court today he worked for a West Berlin organization that planned to build a 220-yard-long tunnel under the Berlin wall from the West to smuggle out East Germans.

Hans-Juergen Hanke, one of three Germans accused of working for the West, said he was arrested at the border between East and West Germany July 10.

His car was found to contain a secret compartment big enough for a refugee.

It was planned that day to smuggle a 25-year-old East German girl to the West.

He decided to abandon the attempt when his car was thoroughly searched on leaving West Belin.

But the empty secret compartment built into the car's front was found during the check at the East-West German border and he was arrested.

The waiter said he discussed a plan by the organization to build a tunnel under the wall and other plans to get East Germans to the West over the Czechoslovak and Bulgarian borders.

The East German girl, shapely blonde cosmetician Barbara Rudolf, told the court 10,000 marks ($2,500) was paid to the West Berlin organization for her escape.

Clearer Picture Expected Monday

The confusion surrounding the contractors lockout against carpenters abated for two days today.

Saturday and Sunday normally are days off.

By Monday, it is expected to be clearer just how effective and how many companies have refused to hire carpenters in the current contract dispute.

By Friday, 184 of the 322 contractors represented by the Construction Industry Joint Negotiating Committee had served the necessary 48-hour lockout notice on carpenters.

Harmac Workers Warn Of Possible Walkout

Workers at the Harmac operation of MacMillan Bloedel are prepared to walk out and stay out until they get the union of their choice.

The warning was issued Friday by Gordon Wickham, president of the uncertified local of Pulp and Paperworkers of Canada. He led a 30-man delegation attempting to see Labor Minister Leslie Peterson Friday to protest the refusal of the Labour Relations Board to certify the Canadian union.

Earlier the 400 day-shift employees at the plant had refused to go to work. After an hour's delay the men settled for the protest march.

"We had to do considerable talking to persuade them to go back to work while we came down here," Mr. Wickham said.

"The feeling back at the plant is that the workers are prepared to stay out indefinitely or until our Canadian union is recognized," he said.

The Canadian union claims the support of 98 per cent of the plant's workers. They applied May 13 for certification of the Canadian union to replace the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, Local 695.

The application was finally heard Aug. 2 and rejected on the grounds that the union had not received a charter and had not elected officers at the time of application.

"They threw us out on a technicality despite our overwhelming support by the men," Mr. Wickham charged.

"They stalled until it was too late for us to re-apply with the technicalities straightened out and then held clearly biased hearings," he said of the LRB.

"Our interests can only be protected by a Canadian-run and Canadian-controlled union with its headquarters in Canada, not in the U.S.," he insisted.

When the labor minister was unable to see them they spoke for an hour with deputy minister William Sands, the chairman of the LRB. "He listened but could do nothing," Mr. Wickham said.

As matters stand the union will be unable to re-apply until next summer for certification under the Labour Relations Act.

When the Time Seems Ripe

PREMIER BENNETT HAS ended months of speculation and provocative queries as to when he would call a provincial election, but he has not yet answered the question of why.

There is no major reason why he should decide to go to the people when his five-year term is little more than half over. But it is his constitutional right to set the date of an election whenever he wishes, and September 12 must be accepted by all parties and the public — which will pay for the balloting — regardless of the lack of apparent need.

Mr. Bennett will be wise to avoid any specific issue and fight the election on the generalized theme of his party's record and his personal popularity. The more than a decade of boom conditions which this province has enjoyed coincides with the Social Credit administration's period in office. The government will naturally take credit for this, although it should rightly claim only a guiding influence on the progress of one of the most richly endowed areas on the continent. The general prosperity has been a large factor in keeping Mr. Bennett in power for the last 10 years. Provincial revenues have been so high that almost every type of public project could be given substantial appropriations — and this despite some reductions in the individual's tax burden.

It is on specific items that Mr. Bennett will run into his sharpest opposition on the hustings. His refusal to open the pressing matter of municipal financing has been a standing cause of criticism and resentment. His personalized Santa Claus technique of annual individual home-owner grants has tended to tie voters to him, but it is a poor alternative to a proper system of providing municipalities with needed funds. His open battle with hospitals needing funds for expansion and improved operation has earned him rightful criticism, as has his government's deliberate procrastination in regard to provision of mental health needs. The steadily mounting provincial debt commitments and the prolonged pouring of money into his vast hydro-power schemes raise the prospect of potential problems which Mr. Bennett's early election call may well be designed to avoid — as an election issue—for five more years.

The government's often tardy handling of welfare programs, its only partial answer to the heavy demand for educational expansion, its policy of permitting commercialization in the large public parks — such items all contain the seeds of discontent that can sprout at the polls.

But the government's main danger may lie in the hazards that afflict any regime that has been in power for fourteen years without an opposition strong enough to place its programs in doubt. Inevitably there has been a growing arrogance, as reflected in the actions of a number of Mr. Bennett's ministers; an increasing feeling among its own members that the government can do no wrong; a rising tendency to ignore public requests and public criticism on the grounds that the government knows best.

There is an indefinable point at which the public begins to feel this: a point at which the government's greatest asset — the lack of effective opposition strength — can start to become the cause of its ultimate downfall.

Mr. Bennett may be gauging this, too, in his early election call. Harder for him to assess — but perhaps most important of all — is the trend in public opinion that has been demonstrated in the last few federal and provincial elections in Canada. That is a drift toward resentment and confusion on the part of the voter at large, an illogical but nonetheless real urge to "throw the rascals out," to rebel against the status quo but also to distrust all promises, whether of the ins or the outs. Such a tendency has resulted in minority governments, stalemated polls and a loss of direction and purpose throughout the nation.

For Mr. Bennett the question is: can he outride this turbulent recalcitrance — if indeed it is as strong in British Columbia as elsewhere — in what may be his last personal appeal to the voters of this province? Or will the national trend show up in a notable loss of Social Credit seats?

Steel Sets the Pace

ADMISSION BY A FRUSTRATED President Johnson that he is powerless to roll back the latest round of steel price increases may be the signal other basic industries have been waiting for to join the higher-price parade. And the President has a diminishing arsenal of weapons with which to hit back.

At the same time it is becoming increasingly evident that the presidential guidelines on wages are not going to hold up. The airlines settlement proposal which Mr. Johnson endorsed, only to see it rejected by the union rank and file, was well over the amount suggested by administration advisers as suitable for the economy. With this example before them, other labor groups are unlikely to be willing to settle for the guideline increases.

Thus the United States, its economy swollen with a heavy domestic demand and further buying pressure from the Viet Nam war, is obviously rolling toward the heights of inflation. The remarkable period of nearly six years of unprecedented growth accompanied by comparatively stable prices is evidently at an end.

The steel price increases were a particularly bitter blow for the President since steel is so basic to the economy. The boost will be reflected in consumer goods, industrial machinery and in war material. The last time the industry attempted to move its price structure upward, eight months ago, the President, to achieve a partial roll-back, was able to use the government's steel stockpile and threats to halt government buying from firms which raised prices.

He was able to halt increases in aluminum prices, and just recently in molybdenum, by using the same techniques. But the war and domestic demand have worn the stockpiles down, and threats to cut government buying are limited when the government cannot do without vital supplies for its armaments program.

Additionally, the very modest monetary measures utilized by the administration to cool off the domestic boom have had very little effect on industry in general. Mr. Johnson's refusal to consider tax increases several months ago at a time when they would have been most effective may seem now to have been the wrong decision, one taken for political reasons despite the possible economic results.

Canadians wrestling with their own problem of cooling off a boom which threatens to become dangerously inflationary will be apprehensive about developments in the United States. Economic pressures in that country spill over into ours all too easily. It could well be that Ottawa will have to take sterner steps than it has so far to curtail consumer and industrial demand.

Excellent Appointment

APPOINTMENT OF DR. KENNETH Wright as director of the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory in Saanich, to succeed his close friend and admired colleague, the late Dr. R. M. Petrie, should be warmly approved in this community and in scientific circles throughout Canada.

His capacities have been proved on many occasions. His familiarity with the work conducted at Little Saanich Mountain stems from long association with that institution.

The selection of Dr. Wright, in addition to acknowledging his own abilities, and accomplishments, should guarantee continuity in the important fields of astronomy carried out here and maintain the widely recognized value of the observatory's works.

U.S. MILITARY AID

By RICHARD PURSER

A Little Choosier in Handing Out Guns

THE United States government spends the better part of a billion dollars a year on the military assistance section of its foreign aid program. The money is officially spent "to promote the foreign policy, security, and general welfare of the United States by assisting people of the world in their efforts toward internal and external security."

Purser

American legislators are of several minds about what those words mean. To some they mean fighting communism by training and equipping anti-Communist armies and police forces abroad. To others, they mean playing off foreign countries against each other through arms deals, for example by supplying arms to both Israel and Jordan, to both India and Pakistan.

To Make Program Palatable

In administration requests for funds, the military aid program has for years been included in the same bill with the economic aid program, for foreign nations. This was to make the total program more palatable to the many congressional opponents of foreign economic aid, who might vote against a purely economic aid bill but would vote for a separate military aid bill on the grounds that it, and not the other, would truly help fight communism.

This year, the administration suggested splitting the program into two bills. This was accepted by the foreign relations committee of the Senate, where support of the economic aid program (at least in principle) is strong, but not by the corresponding committee of the House of Representatives, where opposition to it is strong. The whole House has not yet acted on its committee's bill.

The Senate committee—after hiving off the economic section of the administration's aid request for separate consideration — found itself facing a $917 million dollar military aid request. (This does not count $636 million in military aid for South Viet Nam, handled under defence rather than foreign aid appropriations.) The committee knocked the figure down to $892 millions.

Sliced $100,000

Then, on July 27, the bill with the committee's already reduced figure came to the Senate floor. Sen. Frank Church (Democrat —Idaho), just two days past his 42nd birthday, rose at once and proposed an amendment in a few simple words: "Strike out '$892,000,000' and insert '$792,000,000'."

Within a few short hours despite the strongest efforts of both Democratic and Republican Senate leaders, both the Church amendment and the amended bill were overwhelmingly passed. The administration found itself with $125 million less than it felt it needed for military aid abroad, and the Senate had staged yet another successful revolt against President Johnson.

Proliferation

What was bothering the senators this time. Sen. Church, who looks even younger than he is and who has become an effective voice of moderate dissent during his ten years of Senate service, explained. The foreign relations committee, of which he is a member, has been trying for years to taper off the proliferating military aid program (this year's administration request was $39 million over last year's), yet "it continues to grow like crabgrass." At the height of the cold war in 1950, 14 countries received U.S. military aid. Now 67 countries receive it — "The policy of arming the indigent," as Dr. John Kenneth Galbraith called it in committee hearings.

This growth of military aid had little to do with opposing communism, as Sen. Church saw it. His proposal was for a modest deceleration in spending, to match the committee's proposed reduction to 40 in the number of countries receiving military aid. The $792 million would be more than ample for aiding legitimate defence needs of countries on the communist periphery, and the few real — "as distinguished from a good many imaginary" — problems of internal security in countries elsewhere.

But he hoped it would not be sufficient "to shore up regressive regimes, to burden poor countries with military establishments they cannot afford, or to contribute to regional arms races or local wars."

Sen. Church dismantled official justifications for heavy military assistance to Latin America. "Castro has been a godsend," he said, "so useful that if he did not exist, he might have to be invented." On one occasion the Pentagon sent the committee a document justifying military aid to Uruguay because of Uruguay's role in the defence of the Panama Canal.

Answered by Map

"We have not heard any more of this argument since we sent back a map."

No Latin nation has gone Communist since Castro came to power, but eight legitimate Latin governments have been overthrown by their own military. The weakest official argument is that if the U.S. doesn't give arms to Latin America, somebody else will. By "somebody else," Sen. Church cracked, "is meant Western Europe."

The senator drew wide support from his colleagues, who provided numerous examples of military aid inanities in other parts of the world, and he won the vote. It was a signal to President Johnson, Secretary McNamara and Co. to be a little choosier about the recipients of U.S. weaponry.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

At this time of the year we seem to be pestered with wasps or hornets, often called bees by children.

This little animal is perhaps one of the very few "dangerous" animals of our countryside.

The wasp is a social animal and lives in colonies; some are in the ground while others are found in trees or on bushes.

The colonies exist for only one season; the males and the workers die in the fall. The queen hibernates and starts a new colony in the spring.

Do you know that the male wasps do not sting? But as they are hard to tell from the workers it best to avoid them all.

Wasps make their nest out of paper composed of wood that is taken from posts or logs. They do not use decayed wood, but the fiber that they take is made into a paste by the action of their jaws and gradually built up to the nest we see. Wasps were possibly the first paper makers in the world.

They are first class architects and engineers, for their nest is made up of layers that form an air-conditioned home.

The combs are made of the same material and are six-sided. There is no waste space and the columns are very strong. The cells are in layers, so perhaps wasps were the first high-rise builders too.

Social wasp are predators and feed upon other insects, especially flies which ~~they~~ masticate and feed to their young. They are very fond of sweet thing; and will raid an orchard in search of decaying fruit.

If the colony should have to be enlarged they will tear away the inner layers of the nest and build new ones on the outside, or if living in the ground they will enlarge the hole.

If you are hiking along a woodland trail at this time of the year, take an onion with you and if stung apply the juice of the raw onion to the sting. It will help relieve the pain.

FIRST PRINCIPLES IN SCHOOLS

By ART STOTT

Concentrating Again on Cultivation of the Intellect

UNTIL very recently British Columbia's educational system accepted, among other obligations, a certain duty to develop "the good citizen" in and through its schools. To this end programs were devised lending emphasis to the stimulation of social consciousness among pupils, with due recognition of their differences in ability, but faith in their potential to become useful and productive members of a stable society adhering to accepted concepts of community and other virtues.

When you discuss the aims and purposes of education today with provincial leaders of our school system, you sense a subtle change in attitude. The ideal of "the good citizen" is still highly respected. But ideas on the means by which children may be encouraged to achieve that status through the school system vary from those of recent practice.

Sensitive Human Beings

The authorities are always conscious of the fact that the students are not cold statistics, groups of numbers to be moved here or there, inanimate material to be shaped and formed without regard to sensitivities. They know the students are warm human beings with all the emotions of human beings.

The educators keep this in mind as they rethink the role of the school—from kindergarten to graduate studies — and try to determine just what the school should be doing and what should be left to other agencies, some of them not yet in existence.

The analysis is natural at this point in time. Our society has shown an inclination to turn over to the schools more and more of the obligations formerly shouldered by the family and other institutions whose influence on the young people has waned as the young have rejected old and often cherished values—or at least the forms those values have held.

Easy Course

Turning responsibilities over to the schools was the easy course. Schools are accessible, trustees are easily approached, the parents are voters with the ability to apply political pressures on school boards and senior administrations. These influences have certainly altered the structure of formal education in the last quarter-century.

The official educators, those in charge of the system, now seem to be returning to first principles.

"We are trying to produce educated individuals from those who enter the system at one end and leave it at the other," says a spokesman. "Our task, as we see it, is to communicate the best in modern knoweldge to the oncoming generation and teach its members to use that knowledge — teach them how to think. We are hammering away at the cultivation of the intellect, believing that an intelligent society will take realistic action for its own survival."

The provincial authorities want to "provide superlative education at the lowest possible unit cost." They are well aware of difficulties in reaching that objective. There are not enough superlative teachers for the task. There are other deficiencies, including those of finance. But even if funds were unlimited, they would not expect to purchase perfection.

They have a full understanding of the gigantic volume of knowledge available today, the need for selecting from it what is essential and of presenting the essential in a form which the individual can absorb.

"We would like to produce the cultured person," runs the current attitude, "but the image must be modern. Today we have to give our students an appreciation and some understanding of modern developments and modern techniques."

This does not mean that today's school will tailor the student to be immediately efficient in the operation of the most recently invented machine installed by industry or commerce. It should, on the other hand, through communication of a selection of basic information, concepts and methods at a level geared to the student's ability, help him to increase the use of his intellect in mental and manipulative skills.

Not Giving Answers

The purpose here is not to give the answer to a specific problem — because the problem may not yet have been posed — but to develop the intelligence to cope with the problem, or the task, when it emerges.

The significance of the new trend in official educational thinking is obvious. It is not to try to draw road maps into the unknown land of the future based solely on projections from known country of the past, but to develop the capacities and the resources to surmount the obstacles, as yet unseen, which lie ahead.

This places overwhelming faith in the cultivated intellect. And obviously not all individuals are endowed with the same intellectual equipment.

Recognition of the latter fact suggests that schools of the future will follow the course of the ungraded class. In it — and the swing is well under way in British Columbia — the child will advance at his own pace. This, in itself, requires a special stimulant to encourage the student to be a self-learner. The stimulant, it appears, will be the development of all possible appetizing elements in subject-material and presentation, involving the employment of all useful aids.

Casualties

In practice the changing attitude toward formal education will leave casualties in its wake. The classical image of the traditional scholar may fade. Much of the activity calculated to mold citizenship and social consciousness may be pushed into the background.

The emphasis appears to be on the intensive cultivation of the intellect in a way to give practical use to the assimilation of knowledge. This does not mean devotion to the "trade school," nor to the limitations of vocational education.

But it does imply concentration on the nourishment of the intellect in the conviction that a thinking individual will have the best chance of adjusting to the problems of life in the home, on the job, in the community, in the nation, in the world.

"We are not in business to promote tariff preferences or to establish a discriminatory club to form a larger market to make us richer, or a trading block to further our commercial interests. FLEUR DE LIS AND JACK

Some acquaintance with Canadian history and with the words of the men who built Canada would do much to clear the minds and soothe the feelings of your many irate correspondents who reacted with such fury against the sentiments expressed by the youngsters from Quebec who visited Victoria recently and spoke too loudly about the many "flags of England" they saw here.

A light reading of our history would show clearly that the French element in Canada puts this country, their own nation, ahead of France, while the British element here still puts England ahead of their own country. This historical disparity of national sentiment is the source of the continuing friction between the two great cultural elements of Canada.

The disparity is not at all surprising, in the light of history. The French in Europe broke with their history, and changed their flag from the ancient fleur de lis on blue standard of France's kings to the present tricolor. The British still have their monarchy, and their flag. But note that it is the flag of ancient France that is flown in Quebec. There, it does not represent France as the Union Jack which our young visitors saw here represents England.

This is the explanation for their quite natural reaction, and for the bitter fury which they provoked. — F. B. Cahill, 2199 Neil.

A Voice From Quebec

Granby La Voix de l'Est

The provinces have adopted a favorable attitude to the meeting of the Canadian committee on fiscal matters next September. This committee met last in December, 1965, and since then has been collecting information on the expected revenues and deficits of the federal and provincial governments during the period from 1967 to 1972.

But will it be possible in the course of this meeting to work out a new formula for dividing up revenues between the federal and the provincial governments during these five years? . . .

Quebec's claims are already looked on as a manifestation of separatism in the province or as the result of a racial conflict. But this is false. Her demands are justified by the enormous expenses placed on the provincial government by the necessities of education, health, social security and road construction.

The provinces of Ontario, Manitoba and British Columbia now are following Quebec's example. They are making stronger and more urgent demands for a larger part of the fiscal pie. They hold, as does Quebec, that their constitutional responsibilities are growing and demand greater revenues.

But at the same time a stiffening has become noticeable in the attitude of the federal government towards the provinces. Its intention seems to be to modify its former conciliatory attitude, particularly in areas where expenses are shared between the provinces and the federal government.

NEWS HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

Reviewed by Peter Murray, Times Wire News Editor

The war in Viet Nam escalated another step during the week and posed a special problem for Canada.

U.S. bombers made a series of raids on the demilitarized zone along the 17th parallel dividing North and South Viet Nam which the Americans allege is being used as a staging area by the Communists for the infiltration of troops.

The North Vietnamese government protested the raids to the International Control Commission which is supposed to supervise the neutral zone under terms of the 1954 Geneva agreement. Canada is one of three members of the commission, with India and Poland.

The ICC sent two field teams to investigate reports of violations by both sides in the zone, and reports in Ottawa said Canada was pressing for a full-scale probe. India was reported to favor such action.

However since the war itself amounts to scrapping of the Geneva agreement it seemd unlikely that much could be done about specific violations in the demilitarized zone.

Canada is in a ticklish position because of its tacit approval of the U.S. role in Viet Nam, despite membership on the ICC.

●

The ICC was also investigating claims of violations along the frontier of South Viet Nam and neutral Cambodia, and Communist reports said team members, including a Canadian delegate, were caught in an attack by U.S. planes during an inspection visit.

Yet another protest to the commission by the North Vietnamese alleged U.S. planes hit residential areas of the port of Haiphong during the latest raid. The U.S. confirmed Haiphong was bombed again, but said only military targets and oil depots were hit.

For the second time in just over six months the government of Nigeria was overturned.

The new ruler of Africa's most populous nation is Lt.-Col. Yakubu Gowon, 31-year-old British-trained army officer who was chief of staff in the last regime of Gen. Johnson Agulyi-Ironsi.

Ironsi, who came to power in another military coup Jan. 1, was kidnapped by tribesmen and his fate was unknown.

His downfall was brought about by his insistence on ending Nigeria's federal system of government and introducing a "unitary" state.

Leaders of the country's numerous tribal and religious blocs feared the loss of autonomy under the planned new constitution. Some are already threatening to rebel against Gowon's assumption of power and the country faces the possibility of civil war and complete breakup.

A meeting of provincial premiers in Toronto threw a possible monkey-wrench into Ottawa's plan to introduce a national medicare program by July 1 next year.

The premiers of Ontario and Quebec said federal grants to the provinces for medicare should be given without any conditions. Ottawa intends to pay half the per capita costs of provincial plans which meet certain conditions.

Prime Minister Pearson said it was up to the individual provinces to decide whether they want to enter the plan, but added that another conference could be held in the fall if requested by the premiers.

The federal legislation has already been introduced in Parliament and will be debated after the summer adjournment.

Meanwhile a 20-day strike of 32,500 non-medical hospital workers in Quebec was ended after Premier Daniel Johnson placed the hospitals under a provincial administrator and threatened to call a special session of the legislature to deal with the walkout.

●

Speculation in the West that Premier Alexei Kosygin was about to retire was dispelled when the Supreme Soviet re-elected him for another four-year term. Other leaders including Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev were also returned.

In Austin, Tex., a deranged student took a position atop a 27-storey tower building on the University of Texas campus and fired down on passersby below. Including his wife and mother slain earlier in the day, Charles Whitman, 24, killed a total of 15 persons before he was gunned down by a policeman. It was the highest toll in the annals of U.S. crime.

THE GALLUP POLL

Canadians List Grievances On Erosion of Freedoms

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

One-third of the Canadian people say that our democratic rights and freedoms are in danger today.

In a follow-up question to that group, Gallup Poll interviewers asked what rights they had in mind. A wide scope of answers were forthcoming, with governments high up on the list, as infringing on personal rights.

Here is a digest of the answers:

1. Government secrecy, curbs, controls, taxes, dictatorial governments.
2. Injustices, unfair court charges, one law for rich, another for poor, little man cannot afford good lawyer.
3. Freedom of speech and press threatened.
4. Personal liberty and freedom of choice being whittled away.
5. The right to earn a living, to work, to security, small business being harrassed and overtaxed.
6. Civil rights for Indians, Eskimoes, for the Negro and other minority groups.
7. The right of privacy.

Spotted all across Canada were cries against expropriation, as an infringement on private property. Also, there were demands for labor rights ("the right to picket") and, on the other hand, warnings that unions are becoming too strong. There were demands for the right to divorce, the right to bilingualism and from French Canada the right "to equality with English Canada."

Finally, from a young man in Halifax, who felt our personal rights and freedoms were not being fully protected, came this terse answer.

"'This Hour Has Seven Days' is a real example."

'Smell of Truth' To Indian Nuclear Explosion Rumor

By WILLIAM R. FRYE
Times UN Correspondent

Frye

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.—Pakistani intelligence sources claim to have evidence that India is on the point of her first nuclear explosion — an "atoms-for-peace" explosion, but one that would demonstrate a weapons capacity.

The story has been denied. But UN people with access to independent information think it has the smell of truth to it. And they are profoundly disturbed by the implications.

The threshhold between five and six atomic powers is vitally important—perhaps more important than any since one atomic power became two.

Once it is crossed, the lid will really be off the atomic Pandora's box. It is quite possible that internationally agreed limitations on A-bomb manufacture and dissemination will thereafter be a practical impossibility.

India will represent an atomic breakthrough by the "third world," the world apart from East and West where nuclear weaponry has always been considered evil and unthinkable.

Respectability

It will give new respectability to the atomic club in scores of capitals which previously have associated it with "colonialist," "imperialists," and Communists.

It will prove that extreme poverty — India being one of the world's desperately poor nations is not a barrier to possession of the bomb, even where communism is not arbitrarily allocating scarce resources.

Pakstan, which hates and fears India, will certainly scramble frantically to catch up. Indeed, Indian sources hint darkly that Pakistan already has obtained, or has arranged to obtain, atomic facilities and know-how from Red China.

Whether she has or not, there will be immense temptation for Pakistan to rely on Red China in the future a temptation which Karachi had just begun, it seemed, to throw off in the wake of the Tashkent accords.

Those accords, reached last January after the Kashmir war, have led to slow, highly tentative Indo-Pakistani reconciliation efforst. A fire-eating Pakistani foreign minister has been eased out of office. The alliance with China which he advocated has been shelved.

Out the Window

But all that will go out of the window quickly if India demonstrates a nuclear weapons capability. The respective bargaining positions of India and Pakistan on Kashmir and other issues will be so fundamentally out of balance that real negotiations, and hence a real settlement, will be virtually impossible until the balance is restored.

The only place Pakistan could realistically hope to get commensurate military power would be in China. This fact would give China immense influence and leverage on the subcontinent. India herself might be tempted to pay a considerable price to dissuade China from helping Pakistan.

Neither the United States nor the Soviet Union could or would stand by while China gained such influence on the Indian subcontinent. To prevent just such a development last year, during the Kashmir crisis, they separately issued virtual ultimatums to China to keep hands off.

The effects of an Indian bomb, therefore, would be convulsive. Just as an imbalance in Europe France possessing and Germany being denied the bomb—has had far-reaching repercussions on NATO and on East-West relations, so too an atomic imbalance on the subcontinent would be an Asian earthquake.

Not Just Asia

And the shock wave would by no means be limited to Asia. Other nations, fearing a similar disadvantage vis-a-vis their own hostile neighbors, would hasten to avoid Pakistan's plight.

Israel, Egypt, the two Germanies, Thailand, and perhaps even some Black African countries (the latter fearing South Africa's potential) might apply for admission to the club. Canada, Sweden, Switzerland and other countries advanced in atoms-for-peace technology might we remember their position.

Once begun, the stampede would be difficiult to stop. Atomic weapons would tend to become conventional, and the world would have taken a long step toward the precipice.

This is, of course, precisely the kind of development the Geneva disarmament parley has been trying to avert. But progress there has been disappointingly slight.

For many reasons, including the Viet Nam war and the French-German imbalance, which Germany is reluctant to see made permanent without some kind of NATO compensation, a nonproliferation treaty is still a long way off.

Perhaps the Soviet Union will recognize the dimensions of the peril in time. There have been hints of late that Moscow's dogged preoccupation with Germany may be giving way to a broader perspective, so that compromise on NATO atom-planning might become possible.

These hints have been ephemeral, however, and the time is short. One of history's major watersheds may well be in the making.

Federal-Provincial Rift Seen in Taxes, Medicare

By PETER NEWMAN

LESTER PEARSON . . . really angry

OTTAWA — This week's sudden escalation in the fiscal cold war between the provinces and the federal government has left the Pearson cabinet deeply split over the future of its $680 - millions - a - year medicare program.

The fact that six provinces came out against the present form of medicare at the premiers' conference in Toronto has strenghened the anti-medicare faction in cabinet.

Newman

This group, led by Robert Winters, maintains that the federal government simply cant's afford to get in the scheme at this time. Fighting to retain medicare at the top of the government's fall legislature priorities list is Allan MacEachen, who has strong support from Jean Marchand.

Although the Winters group commands a majority in cabinet at the moment, the prime minister himself has so far been backing MacEachen. The pro-medicare faction argues that the government is already firmly pledged to implement medicare by July, 1967, and that any change would leave it open to justified accusations of yet another retreat. Most of Ottawa's senior civil servants have been advising the government to go slow on medicare, partly because of the cost, but also because they hesitate to see the federal spending power imposed in a field of provincial jurisdiction when there is no concensus for the move among the provinces.

"The other important outcome of this week's premiers' conference was the disclosure by Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan of the new tax equalization proposals for 1967-72. (Pearson has seldom been as angry as he was with Thatcher. The prime minister regards Thatcher's leak as a betrayal of co-operative federalism, which depends on confidential pre-consultation with the provinces.)

Raises Level

Equalization is a financial formula which seems to bring government income in the less wealthy provinces to a level that will allow them to finance public services equivalent to those in the richer regions. Per capita income in Canada still varies widely. In 1965 it ranged from $1,073 in Newfoundland through $1,754 in Quebec, to $2.290 in Ontario and $2,280 in B.C.

As more and more provincial revenues are equalized, the total payout by Ottawa will increase. The jump is expected to be about $110 millions, moving next year's equalization total to nearly half a billion dollars. Quebec will get the largest share of the increase.

The new equalization formula is only one of the four main concerns of the tax structure committee. Other radical suggestions have been made to the provinces in the fields of tax-sharing, the use of shared-cost programs, and improvements in the liaison between the levels of government in fiscal and economic matters.

The tax structure committee meets again early in September to prepare for the full-scale federal-provincial conference in mid-October. One new factor this fall is expected to be a dramatic change in Ontario's role. As the premier of a province with one-third of Canada's population and more than half of the nation's purchasing power, John Robarts has in the past taken the position that what's good for Ottawa is good for Ontario. But, from now on, he will be adopting a much harsher posture, based partly on the fact that he'll have to fight a provincial election within 18 months or so.

All Tougher

The provinces will all be tougher to deal with, but Ottawa still has most of the money.

Ross Thatcher expressed this situation in a phrase at the premiers' conference in Toronto this week when in one of the secret sessions, he bitterly complained about his province's loss of equalization payments under the new formula. He ranted that Saskatchewan might have to secede and ended his speech, flushed with anger, repeating, "We won't stand for it. We won't stand for it." Then, noting the quizzical looks of his fellow premiers, Thatcher added, "That is, unless we have to," and sat down.

The Two Germanies Are Growing Apart

By FRED MANOR
(Last in a series)

Reunification has suddenly become the principal topic of discussion in West Germany.

For the past year or so the importance of this issue has been steadily rising until it has now reached the point where, according to the latest opinion polls, the majority of West Germans believe that the reunification of Germany is the most urgent problem facing the Bonn government.

This represents a revolution in German thinking, a revolution that has swept both parts of Germany. In the West, it is being realized that the two Germanies are rapidly growing apart. There have been no intermarriages for the past 20 years and the blood ties are becoming tenuous. The East Germans may use the same language, but already their vocabulary has assumed a different meaning. A prominent Hamburg theatre producer, who came to the West from East Germany not long ago, pointed out to me that the East Germans give an entiely different interpretation to theatre from that given to it in West Germany.

Come to Terms

It is also realized that East Germany is no longer a mass of oppressed people anxiously awaiting liberation. Many of the East Germans — and this applies particularly to the intelligentsia — have come to terms with the regime. The professional people are largely apolitical.

A young man in East Germany cannot count on a change in the regime. He thus faces two choices: either to risk a bullet at the Wall in trying to escape to West Germany, or to accept the regime and make his career at home.

The regime, too, realizes this, and it woos the intelligentsia, particularly the young scientists, with every possible means.

Indeed, the East Germans have become proud of their own achievements, their own economic miracle.

But there is a burning interest in an all-German dialogue on the other side of the Berlin Wall also. Junior Communist party officials are anxious to renew contracts with West Germany. These are mostly young men who have been infected with the polycentric bug that has swept the satellite empire; and who do not see eye to eye with the doctrinaire, old Communist Establishment.

The remarkable thing about all this is the sober attitude with which most West Germans view this problem. Few believe that reunification can be brought about through a form of "liberation" of East Germany.

There is much intellectual curiosity, informed with a realistic grasp of political facts, about the future of Germany. The ferment is as noticeable at the universities as among politicians, and particularly among the youth. It is a healthy sign of a new democratic society, which is ready to explore new ways with which to overcome the tragic cleavage that has split Europe.

Historian Puts Checkrein On Canadian Nationalism

By DOUGLAS FISHER

Fisher

OTTAWA—I was refreshed and excited by Ramsay Cook's volume of essays, Canada and the French Canadian Question. Prof. Cook is an historian and takes the long view. In recent years we've tended to lose this kind of insight because the flaring discussion on Confederation has revolved around specific points of tension.

Politicians deal with real, not theoretical situations. English-speaking Canadians want to look only at those larger problems which are kept under their noses so long that a conviction develops that they won't go away. Pragmatic on most matters anyway, we seem to be evolving a special kind of pragmatism for Quebec.

Ramsay Cook is sympathetic to the French-Canadian, perhaps becuse he is so knowledgeable about our history. It is hard for me to relate the author to the slight, fairish, mild-seeming man with whom I've had brief encounters. In person, the professor's tentativeness hardly seems the right complement to his youth. In print there is such authority, a certain magisterial tone proclaiming: "This is the true story of our intertwined fates."

The last of the essays is titled: The Meaning of Confederation. It's an antidote to thoughtless, rampant Canadian nationalism. The theme is simple: Canada is composed of two national communities within one nation-state; therefore, we must think about preserving the nation-state, not in terms of encouraging a Canadian nationalism.

★ ★ ★

Nationalism in English Canada along the lines of 19th century nationalism in Europe is bad. So is nationalism in French Canada along the probable 20th century line of its development as though in reaction to old French and British colonialism and systems.

Each strain of nationalism magnifies the tension between the two basic linguistic and cultural groups. Each kind of nationalism propounds a different idea and intensifies a predictable reaction. We rail at the prospect of our nationalism being frustrated by the defensiveness and inward look of the French-Canadian's nationalism. They point to the assimilating menace of ours.

Against these trends the more prosaic cultivation of the nation-state will serve to accommodate within a surviving Canada the major interests of both communities. Prof. Cook presents this thesis as the primary lesson of Canadian history and the major continuing agreement which has fed the roots of a century of Confederation.

He says ". . . among the several objectives of the architects of the Canadian Constitution, none was more important than the effort to accommodate the needs of the two cultural communities that had been made co-habitants of British North America by the Seven Years' War and the American Revolution.

"In the minds of the men of 1867 that accommodation was to be achieved by the founding of a new nation. But the important question relates to their definition of the form of that nation."

It was not to be a "nationalist state" with all the implications of cultural homogeneity.

Rather it was to be a "nation-state" within which French-Canadians could work out a distinct existence. As it was put by John A. Macdonald (who should be accepted as an authority on what the intention was): "Treat them as a nation and they will act as a free people generally do—generously. Call them a faction and they become factious."

★ ★ ★

Federalism was chosen as the device by which this clear intention was to be realized but, as many have forgotten, federalism with the bulk of the power in the hands of the central government. The reason for favoring the centre was to assure the survival of the new nation-state within which was assumed there would be la survivance of the French-Canadian nation.

As Cook puts it: ". . . the unceasing responsibility of Canadian political leaders since 1867 has been to ensure that the equilibrium between survival and la survivance, between the legitimate goals of Canadians and French-Canadians, should not be destroyed."

Cook pinpoints the main threats to this simple proposition. First, there is the danger "that an ambitious or frustrated politician will attempt to build his fortunes on stimulating antagonisms." Second, there is the vexatious issue of French-Canadians living outside Quebec. Finally, there is the inevitable conflict between central and provincial governments in any federal state.

★ ★ ★

All these variants of a single threat to the meaning of Confederation. "Two nations could survive and grow inside a single nation-state, provided each nation refrained from claiming an exclusive national-state."

Recently, in our pragmatic way, there's been fashioned some substantial accommodation of the French-Canadian nation in matters of shared jurisdiction. We need an even more substantial accommodation on the Ottawa level and in the other provinces, especially New Brunswick, for the French-Canadian beyond Quebec.

At the same time the economic and political environment of North America demands the defence and expansion of the role of the central government in a wide range of economic activity. Here French Canada must do its snare of accommodating.

WRITER RECALLS

Julie at 11 Was Shy Girl

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Julie Andrews at 11 was a fair anticipation of Julie Andrews as she is today.

I can see her now — a slender child with deep, serious blue eyes and a kind of elfin-like dignity, stepping forward shyly to greet a strange man from the press.

At that time I had no reason for interviewing Julie except that she was the daughter of Ted and Barbara Andrews, then popular on the London music halls, and had been acclaimed for her singing at a local concert.

The Andrews then lived in a rambling Tudor-style house at rural Walton-on-Thames — about 20 miles from the London theatreland they courted.

At the interview, Mrs. Andrews sat at the piano and asked Julie to sing. It was One Fine Day from Madame Butterfly and she sang it in a small true voice rather like a silver bell. Somewhat embarrassed at being a one-man audience, I blurted out something complimentary.

Julie inclined her small head, very deferentially, and said "O thank you" — as if surprised. It seems she had a very tough singing teacher at that time, which may have accounted for her modesty. I suspect, too, that she had already been trained in how to meet the public.

She had two small brothers who liked her to sing pop songs but made faces when she tried the classics. It seemed a very healthy, homelike atmosphere.

I heard no more of Julie until about seven years later, around 1953, when she turned up as Cinderella in one of those pantomines the London theatres put on for children at Christmas.

After the show I called on Miss Andrews for a second interview. She had grown surprisingly tall, but the personality had changed little except that she now was obviously a very determined young woman who knew what she wanted and was going after it.

"I don't know if I'm good enough for the top-line musical shows," she said, "but I'm going to have a darn good try."

We were interrupted by a phone call and Miss Andews evidently heard something she didn't like, for she expressed herself in the kind of robust terms we heard from her later in My Fair Lady.

Dialogue A Little Rough

A new book, Cariboo Cowboy, is to be published in Victoria next month.

It is a tale of the Cariboo Road by Harry Marriott, an English pioneer who came out to British Columbia around 1910 and who now lives at the Big Bar Lake ranch near Clinton.

Sidney publisher Gray Campbell is launching the new work and he says it is "rich in atmosphere and a true feeling for the period."

B.C. Surveyor-General Gerald Andrews has written a foreword in which he describes it as an important contribution to the history of British Columbia.

Sonia Cornwall of 150-Mile House on the Cariboo Highway has drawn 25 black-and-white sketches which will be used as illustrations.

NARRATIVE

Mr. Campbell decided to publish Cariboo Cowboy after reading the contents of 25 school exercise books in which Harry Marriott wrote his narrative.

"For a man who has lived outdoors most of his life, Mr. Marriott has a wonderful style," Mr. Campbell said. "Certain revisions were necessary, but we carefully avoided spoiling the freshness of the original.

"The dialogue is a little rough in places, but it is the language of the cowboys of those days — and we left it that way."

Gordon Gibson, MLA in the B.C. Legislature and well-known logging operator, is keenly interested in Mr. Marriott's book and has offered to promote it.

Mr. Campbell said the author came of an old English family. At the age of 18 he was given 10 pounds (then about $50) and told to "pick his colony."

"He came out to B.C. on the old Canadian Pacific railroad and took the stagecoach to Ashcroft. He got himself a job on the famous Gang Ranch, then decided to work on the Cariboo Road.

"His book is a salty narrative of his experiences in the Cariboo."

Mr. Campbell left Victoria Thursday for a tour of the Cariboo. He expects to meet Mr. Marriott at the Big Bar Lake ranch and discuss future plans for the book.

North Breezes . . .

There have been a great many more fishermen going out than there have been fish coming in, this summer. The lucky ones all tell you, "Fishing's good. I got a ten-pounder the other night. You just have to know how to fish."

Or they meet you fishless at the floats—obviously skunked—and they show you a beauty and ask smugly, "How many did you get?"

If you're tired of the needle, our maitre d' Leslie has the answer — spring salmon en papillote, boned whole, stuffed with mushroom dressing, baked in individual servings, with the rosy richness sealed in—and you land it in our poolside dining room.

And then you'll brag, too.

Lectures On Ballet To Start

People who love ballet and want to know more about the art will have a chance again this summer, to learn from an expert.

Franklin White, whose second summer course in ballet in Victoria opens Monday, will continue last summer's immensely popular series of lecture demonstrations in the auditorium of Norfolk House School, 801 Bank Street.

Mr. White, a principal of the Royal Ballet for the better part of two decades, has specialized in teaching and giving lecture-demonstrations and this spring accepted the appointment of artistic advisor to Ballet British Columbia.

He left the Royal Ballet last year in order to give more time to teaching and lecturing.

DISAPPOINTED

Last summer his lectures excited so much interest that it became a matter of "standing room only," and many people were disappointed in being unable to hear him.

This year's lectures will be given on the evenings of Aug. 9, 16, 23 and 30, starting at 8:15.

Single admissions for adults are $1.25 and for students, $1. For the series of four tickets are $4.50 and $3.50.

The ballet school and lectures are sponsored in the city by the Victoria School of Music, Ballet Division, Women's Committee.

Psychiatrists Study Juliet of Spirits

By DAVID M. ALPERN

NEW YORK (UPI)—Federico Fellini is the Italian moviemaker who has perfected the new cinema guessing game: "Can You Analyze This?"

His is a genius for creating with actors, sets and inventive photography the forceful symbols of modern man's innermost fears, desires, delights and decadence.

Take a group of people to a Fellini film and out they will come afterwards, scratching their heads and debating what each character, each scene represented. And for each there will be subtle differences—like their reactions to an inkblot test.

A private screening of Fellini's latest production, "Juliet of the Spirits," brought considerably less fine tooth-combing than would have been expected, considering the audience consisted of psychologists, psychiatrists and psychoanalysts and considering they talked it over later with Fellini himself.

The famous director, who naturally prides himself on a sensitivity to the psychological, had asked his American distributors to set up the seminar so he could see what the experts said about his attempt to portray an emotionally inhibited, frustrated and betrayed wife trying to find a new freedom of living.

The Beach Boys to perform here

The Beach Boys, who for the past five years have been perched right at the top in the precarious world of rock and roll, present an interesting phenomenon.

The Boys, who appear in concert on Wednesday, Aug. 17, at the Memorial Arena, do not rely on echo chambers for their sound; do not conclude their numbers with "yeah, yeah, yeah" and dress in neatly tailored matching costumes.

Yet, in spite of all these disadvantages they have managed to establish themselves rather firmly with the record-buying and concert going public.

Their albums have achieved the distinction of the million-dollar sales level on eight separate occasions, while one after another of their single releases have reached hit proportions.

Although they made their name with their innovation of "surfing music," The Beach Boys have not restricted themselves to that small musical area.

They have branched out in all directions, embracing songs for varied segments of youthful activity.

Even more important than their sallies into other musical subjects has been their experimentation with sound and harmonics as evidenced in their album, Pet Sounds.

In addition to soaring record sales, they have been asked to appear all over the world in concert.

Although they toured Japan at the beginning of this year, they have been asked to return in early fall, and perform in Formosa, Hong Kong, Singapore and Australia as well.

Promoters in England and in Europe are bidding for their services for this year, and colleges throughout the U.S., once the province of ethnic comics and folk singers, are now clamoring for The Beach Boys.

Backstopping The Beach Boys at Memorial Arena will be the versatile English duo, Chad and Jeremy.

Chad and Jeremy met while both were attending classes at the Central School of Speech and Drama in London, and shortly thereafter joined forces as singers.

Their first jobs were at local coffee houses around the school, but their fame spread quickly throughout London, resulting in an eventual recording contract.

Their first disc Yesterday's Gone was an immense hit, not only in England but around the world, and the team of Chad and Jeremy was catapulted out of the coffee houses and into the concert halls.

The Beach Boys, along with Chad and Jeremy and the Sunrays, will put their talents on display at 8 p.m., Aug. 17.

Tickets to the show are now on sale at the Memorial Arena box office.

BITS AND PIECES

The Cage broke all attendance records last week when Victoria's only Rhythm and Blues group, Blues By Five, took the stage at the popular Oak Bay club . . . Colwood-based group, The Bakerloo Line, is booked at the PNE later this month in Vancouver . . . Watch for a big change soon on one of our local radio stations — we just might be getting that rock and roll station that we've waited so long for . . . Should be interesting to see if the Beatles' popularity changes any after John Lennon's comments about his group and religion.

Beatles-Are-Dead Concept Refuted

By PETE JOHNSON

A black-and-white collage of large Beatle head drawings with a multitude of photographed small beatles crawling among the hair strands graces the cover of their latest album — "Revolver" (Capitol ST-2576-T-2576).

The Beatles are far from dead — they have just been living in a yellow submarine recently.

Possibly goaded by an emergency financial directive from their Queen, the four singers have released their second album in a month and a half, yet despite its rapid-fire release it is the best they have made.

They have 11 new songs, including Yellow Submarine, an imaginative and joyous bit of deep nonsense which is haunting in its childlike simplicity.

As a central image, the vivid vehicle symbolizes the isolation between clumps of people, but the song is not a sad allegory of loneliness.

ROARING SEA

Instead, the yellow sub neighbors other underwater craft and even bobs along to the playing a Sunday-in-the-park type of band. Behind Ringo Starr's lead and his cohort's chorus, a free-wheeling engineer has blended some happily incongruous sound effects.

A roaring sea of green whooshes in back of their singing, the submarine takes an acoustic dive complete with clanging bells and muffled tubular vocal cries and an impertinent cockney voice distantly echoes Ringo's words at the end of the song.

Yellow Submarine is also on their newest single record along with Eleanor Rigby, also a song of loneliness but with a different, bittersweet tone.

LONELY PEOPLE

Paul McCartney, accompanied by a lilting set of strings, details the lives of Eleanor Rigby, Father Mackenzie and all the lonely people who surround them.

Eleanor Rigby starts from the church where she was married but dies by the end of the song with Father Mackenzie wiping the dirt from his hands as he walks from the grave. "No one was saved," mourns McCartney.

The opening song on the new album is Tax-Man, a subject of which the Beatles are well qualified to sing. It is bouncy, spiced humorously with falsetto references to Messrs. Wilson and Heath, the Labor and Conservative party leaders in Britain.

They have another little joke with their introduction to the song. A creepy voice intones "one, two, three, four" as people sniffle and cough in the background and someone squeaks his finger along a guitar string.

Other notable numbers are For No One, an almost Victorian ballad of broken love with excellent understated lyrics and Good Day Sunshine, a happy summery song by Paul McCartney with a catchy mid-tempo tune.

Final Recital for Boy Soprano

What will almost inevitably be the last opportunity Victorians will have to hear widely known local boy soprano Bill Dyson in a live performance, will be offered Monday evening, Aug. 15, at Christ Church Cathedral.

For Bill, now turned 14, the voice change is close.

This final recital is being undertaken on behalf of the National Association Teachers of Singing workshop being held in Victoria Aug. 14 to 19.

The unique program of boys' choral demonstration, vocal and organ solos, has been arranged by the Cathedral organist and choir director, Richard Proudman.

Music to be performed includes Let the Bright Seraphim, sung by the choir boys; Dowland's Weep You No More Sad Fountains, sacred airs and carols by Bill Dyson, and a Bach Fantasia, Brahms Chorale Preludes, Schumann Fugue and a Toccata by Reger played by Mr. Proudman.

Anyone interested may attend the demonstration-recital which begins at 8 p.m.

A collection will be taken.

Musical Score Gets Attention

Marge Adelberg, Vancouver writer-composer whose musical version of Moliere's School for Wives is Bastion Theatre's season opener Sept. 16, has just spent several days in Victoria working on her musical score for the show.

On her return to Vancouver, she goes into the University of British Columbia Revue "In the Rough" as musical director.

LOOKING AROUND AT ART

Bella Bella Displays Cunning of Painter

By ROBIN SKELTON

Skelton

The current exhibition at Pandora's Box is devoted to the work of a group of local artists, and provides yet another proof, if one were needed, of the strength and vitality of our Victorian painters and print-makers.

Perhaps the most rewarding and entertaining works are a number of new paintings by Herbert Siebner. He has always been known for his inventiveness and his bold use of symbolism, but in Bella Bella and Fetish he has surpassed himself.

Bella Bella consists of two reclining figures that have been so simplified as to suggest primitive forms of humanity or, perhaps, fertility symbols.

The buttocks are enlarged, and the breasts emphasized, in such a way as to echo the form of the head and to indicate the sexual nature of our most profound necessities. The torsoes are phallic in form also.

The signature to the painting, moreover, manages to reflect rhythm of the figures so that the painting is a superbly balanced and forceful totality.

This is one of the most impressive and immediate paintings Siebner has made; it looks very simple, almost naive, but it is, in fact, enormously subtle and made with great cunning.

Fetish and Hypnotic Face are equally powerful and have a similar immediacy. In the former the two faces overlap, each having one eye in common with the other.

At first I thought of childrens' drawings, and, indeed, there is something of childlike directness here. Then, however, the double visage reminded me of all those dualities which attend us, from the most trivial to the most profound.

Hypnotic Face is also apparently simple, but the huge eyes are so shaped and so carefully adjusted to the surrounding colors and forms that they are, indeed, almost hypnotic.

I have not seen imagery as potent as this for a long time. In fact, Siebner's combination of profound symbolism with satiric whimsy and outrageous fantasy places him alongside Klee, and I do not think Klee himself ever produced more powerful works.

Beside Siebner's other works often appear thin. Yet in this exhibition there are many works able to do more than hold their own.

Richard Ciccimarra's series of drawings are as superb as always; the images of solitude and concern are given his invariable touch of pathetic absurdity.

The figures, often almost silhouettes, are drawn with enormous economy and cunning. These are small masterpieces, and Ciccimarra, like Siebner, shows himself to be a man with an original symbolic vocabulary and an intense and powerful vision.

●

It is less easy to describe the excellences of Maxwell Bates because this artist uses many different styles, and even though he succeeds in giving each of them his own forceful stamp, he always appears to present himself as a variety of painters rather than as one.

Thus, in this show, we have the sombre, powerful, massy style, the style associated with his visionary portraits of kings and beggars, and also the vivid almost fauve-like coloring of Pilgrims.

I prefer, of all his works here, the deft and yet incisive landscape, Saanich. Here the vertical strokes and lines in many colors which make up the greater part of the composition are related to each other with such rhythmical certainty that the total effect is almost musical.

I mean that I find myself responding to the movement of the forms and the varying intensity of the colors in the same way that I respond to Bach or Vivaldi.

There is a sense of passionate structure which fascinates and delights. This is not as profound or monumental a work as some which Bates has created, but it is a most delightful and exciting work.

●

I have left myself little space to mention the excellent few Harveys, the good nude studies by Molly Privett, the fine Jorgensen landscape, Yellow Fields (one of his best landscapes), and the prints of Pat Martin Bates.

I must, however, say quickly that the work of the last-named has improved tremendously. Her new prints are bolder, stronger in composition, and surer in color than ever before.

All in all, this is a truly impressive exhibition. Go and see it. Go and buy.

These artists deserve our support, and their works are of such excellence as to make that support a most sensible investment.

Bolingbroke's Views Guided Early Tories

NOTE: The author, Dr. Jackman, is on the faculty of the Department of History, University of Victoria, and from time to time himself reviews books for the Times.

MAN OF MERCURY: An Appreciaion of the Mind of Henry St. John, Viscount Bolingbroke, by Sydney W. Jackman. Macmillan of Canada, $7.50.

Reviewed by Tony Emery

Disraeli called Bolingbroke "one of the ablest men who ever lived"; G. M. Trevelyan, greatest of modern Whig historians, has paid tribute to the brilliance of this Tory politician, especially in the handling of the Utrecht treaty negotiations.

Nineteenth-century Tory principles owed a great deal to a synthesis of the views of Bolingbroke and Burke.

If you enquire into the origins of the American constitution with a view to tracing the source of the notion of the separation of powers you will find the shadow of Bolingbroke behind the figure of Montesquieu; and if you look for the thought informing the apparently thoughtless actions of George III, there is Bolingbroke again, supplying the "Idea of a Patriot King."

It is Bolingbroke's mind as revealed in his pamphlets, letters and essays that has continued to exert some influence down to our own day.

Into this labyrinth of papers and correspondence Dr. Jackman has plunged with characteristic energy, and his book is the most lucid guide yet furnished to the intelligent student of the period which saw the infancy of the British two-party system.

It was not Dr. Jackman's intention here to provide the first-rate biography of Bolingbroke that still clamours to be written. What he set out to do was to elucidate the intellectual contribution to Bolingbroke to the constitutional and political theory of his time, and this he has very clearly done.

To achieve this aim he was led to an examination of Bolingbroke's basic philosophy, and his exegesis of his subject's views on religion and history form the liveliest and most rewarding sections of a very readable book.

The simplicity of Dr. Jackman's manner is a foil to the complexity of St. John's matter, and is well calculated to smooth the path for the reader whom the serried volumes of the Collected Works might otherwise daunt and baffle.

It is the university student of British history who will derive the most practical benefit from Dr. Jackman's latest book, but it could be read with profit by all who are interested in the history of political ideas in general, and, in particular, the idea of a constitutional monarchy as an inseparable part of democratic parliamentary government.

PICKING GREAT CANADIANS NOT AN EASY TASK

Great Canadians is the weakest of the three or four books of the dozen in the Canadian Centennial Library which have appeared so far.

It is an anthology of short word-pictures of 25 great figures of Canadian history written by 25 distinguished modern Canadians, with photographs and colored illustrations by Franklin Arbuckle.

The selection was chosen not by the Centennial Library's editors, Pierre Berton and Ken Lefolii, but by a special committee headed by Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey and including historian Hilda Neatby of the University of Saskatchewan.

An introduction by Berton records that the committee decided at the start to exclude political figures such as Macdonald and Laurier and a personal emphasis adds regret that the committee did not approve Berton's own choices, including Louis Riel, Norman Bethune and John W. Dafoe.

Some of the figures in the book are to be expected: Dr. Banting, Tom Thomson and Alexander Graham Bell.

Others are almost unknown these days, except to a specialist, but more are a kind of pleasant surprise: Alain Grandbois the poet, Emily Carr the painter, Lord Strathcona of the CPR and Dr. J. B. Tyrrell, the geologist and explorer.

The contributors to the book are highly qualified informants in their fields: Gen. F. F. Worthington writes about Gen. Sir Arthur Currie, pilot Grant McConachie writes about pilot Punch Dickin, M. J. Coldwell writes about J. S. Woodsworth, poet James Reaney discusses poet E. J. Pratt, and so forth.

WEAKNESSES

Arbuckle's illustrations are mostly copies of well-known photographs of the individual people. This makes them more recognizable but less interesting than might have been expected.

There are also weaknesses in the text, for example when Reaney says Ned Pratt described the muskeg of Northern Ontario as "a reptile asleep" — it was the rock formations he had in mind.

Arctic Ocean As World Pivot

The idea of the Arctic Ocean as a mediterranean sea, the centre of a world community, may surprise Canadians. Yet this is the theme of many of the papers contributed to The Arctic Frontier (University of Toronto Press).

The book is about the North as a frontier and about Canada's relations with the world beyond that frontier.

Edited by R. St. J. Macdonald, University of Toronto, The Arctic Frontier compiles contributions of 10 eminent geographers and historians. They were assembled in collaboration by the Candian Institute of International Affairs and the Arctic Institute of North America.

FAR PACIFIC TRAVEL GUIDE, by John C. Caldwell. Longmans Canada Limited. 379 pp. $8.75.

Reviewed by E. A. Keen

Canadians planning a tour of East Asia may find a large and important gap in this otherwise highly professional travel guide.

Written for the market south of the border, China and its brother people's democracies are largely ignored, except for brief treatment of the U.S. embargo on goods from China. This may seem out of place in a travel guide but any U.S. tourist shopping in Hong Kong will attest to its appropriateness.

Those who disagree with U.S. policy may be irritated by the author's defence of it. The defence is brief, however, and none should find it more than a passing irritant.

The sections on Japan, Taiwan and Hong Kong are especially good. Mr. Caldwell was born in China and worked in East Asia as a correspondent and diplomat before becoming a professional tour guide.

His knowledge of tourists and of these three areas is used to good advantage. The result is a sympathetic treatment for the inexperienced by an expert who knows his audience and his subject.

Other old Asia hands may cringe at the simplicity of treatment of oriental religions and culture, but the approach is realistic in light of the audience for which the author aims.

The average tourists' background or rather the lack of it, leaves the writer of a travel guide little choice. This unfortunately appears to apply to those of Canadian as well as U.S. origin.

Mr. Caldwell knows his tourist and obviously knows and appreciates the above three areas. He deserves a vote of thanks for his treatment of them.

As the author moves south and west, his treatment becomes increasingly limited to specific travel information and sightseeing highlights.

However, Mr. Caldwell writes here too with the assurance of a tour guide who has been through the mill. The mechanics of travel and sightseeing are covered with professional thoroughness from India to New Zealand.

Even the most avid armchair traveller will find these sections of little interest, although to the first-timer they should be of considerable help. The first-timer travelling first-class, that is.

Mr. Caldwell writes with his own tour groups in mind. Those expecting to do the area on five dollars a day will find his travel information of little help.

QUICK CANADIAN FACTS, published by Quick Canadian Facts Ltd., Box 699, Terminal A, Toronto; paperback.

If you need to know the name of the largest all-Canadian lake (it is Great Bear), or the annual pay of a Canadian Prime Minister (it is $37,000 plus a $6,000 expense allowance), or the date of the most recent Olympic hockey win by Canada (it was 1952, the Edmonton Mercurys), here is a quick source for all the answers.

Quick Canadian Facts is a 160-page pocketbook of facts about Canada.

Revised annually, it is now out in its 22nd edition and covers the whole range of Canadian affairs, from history and geography through business and industry to sports records and noted Canadians.

Whether you want to look up one particular date or statistic, or spend an hour or so in casual reading, it is an interesting volume.

Moreover, it fills a real need, and not only for settling arguments at the family dinner time or office coffee break. It is in extensive use in public libraries and newspaper and business libraries.

And high school teachers are finding Quick Canadian Facts an excellent supplementary text in social studies because it relates geography and history to up-to-date figures on industry, resources development and population trends.

Feathers Status Sign In Mexico

If you think some of the present-day women's styles are bizarre, you haven't seen the feminine costumes favored in some off-beat places in Mexico.

For centuries, distinctively colored fabrics, graceful tunics and strange decorative touches have distinguished the garments worn by Mexican women, according to Mexicana Airlines.

The region, climate and the occupation or the status of the wearer, or her husband all are factors in the design and composition of the dress.

For example, in regions noted for their hunting the women wear foxtails among the pleats of their skirts. In other areas, colored feathers denote that the family's occupation is hunting. The more flamboyant the plumage worn by the wife, the greater the husband's status is as a hunter.

Women in the state of Nayarit wear decorative arrows on their backs to symbolize the hunting ability of their men. The squirrel tails that dangle from their hat brims represent the rural life of the area.

All of the wildly colorful styles are on display during September when Mexico is en fete in celebration of Independence.

LEFT EAR

In Huauchinango, Puebla, women indicate whether they are single or married by the distinctive draping of their woollen skirts. The jarichas of Veracruz vary this custom in a manner similar to that of Hawaii by wearing a flower over the left ear if they are available, or over the right ear if they have been spoken for.

Emotions are at a high pitch during the Independence celebrations on Sept. 15 and 16, but highest in the little town of Dolores Hidalgo, Guanajuato, the birthplace of Father Miguel Hidalgo whose defiance of Spain paved the way for his countrymen's freedom.

On the night of Sept. 15, the president appears on the main balcony of the National Palace in Mexico City and gives the traditional "grito" or shout "Viva Mexico" to the crowd of half-million massed in the square below.

Also in Mexico City, colorful ceremonies on Sept. 13 honor the Child Heroes, the military cadets who perished defending Chapultepac Castle against invaders in the war of 1847-48.

LAST DAY

On the last day of the month, Morelia, Michoacan and Cuautla in Morelos hold celebrations commemorating the birthday of Jose Maria Morelos, the Independence hero. Delicious foodstuffs are served in stalls near the market in Morelia where the fete is highlighted by a fair, bullfight, rodeo and fireworks.

The Day of St. Matthew on Sept. 21 is marked by fairs in every place where San Mateo is the patron saint. At Merida on Sept. 27, a fair honors an image called the Christ of the Blisters, carved by an itinerent sculptor from a tree which was reversed after emitting weird lights on Good Friday during Lent in 1651.

'Pink' Lighting

TORONTO—Pink, the latest in street lighting, is being tested along with other unusual shades on one of this city's busiest thoroughfares. It is all part of a $5,000,000 facelifting for Bloor-Danforth in the wake of a new subway route and the removal of trams.

VIEW FROM THE TOP is grand in restaurant atop 620-foot Post Office Tower, which is Britain's tallest building. The restaurant rotates once every 25 minutes, permitting the visitor to see the entire city.

BARGAIN DAY FOR GOLFERS

Caddies Cheap in Europe

There are around 350 golf courses in continental Europe today, and more are being built every month.

There are many advantages to European golf and most of them are economic. Caddies are far cheaper, for a start — from a dollar to a maximum of three dollars a round; they are plentiful, too. Green fees are also low, the maximum being four dollars on weekdays and twelve on weekends, with few exceptions.

Many European courses have a halfway house where you can pause for refreshment — anything from a bottle of beer to green chartreuse. And golfing is such an international game that most clubs are known by their English names: le wedge or le putter for instance.

Charles Graves, in the August-September issue of Ventures magazine, cautions golfers to be prepared for some real differences as well. It will take at least four hours to complete a round during the high season on any championship course. Continental golfers have not yet learned the etiquette of allowing faster players to "go through."

Even if you do not bring your own golf clubs, bring balls — they can be very expensive in Europe and you cannot even get the large American pro ball in many of the pro shops.

Lastly, remember that the general standard of golf is much lower than it is in higher in the United States. You can safely concede at least a couple of strokes to any Continental golfer who claims to have the same handicap as yourself.

Stately Homes Urged to Enter 'Hotel' Trade

LONDON (CP)—Some of the stately homes of England may go into the bed-and-breakfast business to help Britain's tourist trade.

The British Travel Association has written to 50 owners of historic country houses drawing their attention to the money to be earned through conference business, which would include providing sleeping accommodation where necessary.

The group stresses that stately homes will be in deep trouble unless more money is found to keep them in private hands. The government's grant of £450,000 ($1,350,000) last year to the Historic Buildings Council will have to be increased to a minimum of £1,000,000 or many famous houses will fall into disrepair and have to be closed to the public, the report says.

Alaska Not Crowded in Winter

By FRED W. KLINE

The old misconception about Alaska being a land of perpetual ice and snow is still so prevalent that anything less than creeping ice fields threatening to engulf all is cause for rejoicing. Few people are surprised to hear that temperatures drop to 74 below zero, but many people don't realize that they rise well into the 80s and stay there for days at a time.

Henry D. Barrow, in Venture Magazine, gives a comprehensive look at Alaska, an unforgettable vacation spot, and suggest when and how to go, what to see and do.

Although the weather is unquestionably best from May 15 to Sept. 15, Alaska is crowded with tourists during this period. Unless you're on an organized tour or you make reservations well in advance, you'll probably find the most desirable hotels and lodges fully booked during this period.

WILD FLOWERS

The winter visitor misses many attractions — the midnight sun, wild flowers, and fishing, but he certainly avoids the crowds.

Most off-season travellers arrive by plane, but others drive the Alaskan Highway. Those who have made the drive in both seasons almost unanimously agree the winter trip is better.

There are four ways to get to Alaska — by car, via the Alaska Highway or the combination highway-ferry route through southeast Alaska; by plane; by cruise ship, summer only, or by bus, organized summer tours and year 'round regular service.

Within Alaska, literally all parts of the state, inhabited or not, are served by air transport, either on a chartered or scheduled basis.

FIRST CLASS

The average Alaska hotel or motel is just about the same as its counterpart in the rest of the United States — with one difference. You rarely have much choice in accommodations, except in Fairbanks or Anchorage, and must sometimes pay first-class prices for third-class rooms. An average single with bath will cost $8 to $10, a double, $12 to $14.

There is no "Alaskan food," in the sense there is "French food" or "German food." Alaska is one of the 50 states, and its food is the usual American food—good, bad and indifferent.

A few years ago, Alaska had the highest per capita consumption of alcoholic beverages in the United States, and there's been nothing to indicate that things have changed. You'll have no trouble in finding bars in any populated area of Alaska. Nightlife, however is nonexistent. Whenever Alaskans crave it, they simply fly down to Las Vegas or Reno.

OLD MASTERS FEATURED

A new museum featuring such masters as Rembrandt, Rubens, El Greco, Corot and Cezanne has opened in San Diego's Balboa Park.

The bronze and marble Timken Art Gallery is a $1 million gift to the city.

It now contains 40 paintings in its five galleries. Plans call for purchase of two old masters each year. The magnificent collection can be viewed by visitors free of charge.

Faith Tensions Fading

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (CP) — "Pagans." "Frauds." In such caustic terms, members of Roman Catholic and Masonic fraternal orders have sometimes regarded each other in the past. But distrust is disappearing.

"Those days are gone," says John McDevitt, supreme knight of the Catholic men's order, the Knights of Columbus.

"We're encouraging closer rapport."

"The change has meant not only a fading away of the mutual aspersions, once uttered in the separate organizational quarters, but has also brought about joint discussions and prospects of co-operation.

Welcoming the new friendlier relations, Wendell Walker, Masonic grand secretary in New York State, said, "It's been so good so far, it seems likely to develop still further."

Across the country, Masonic lodges and councils of the Knights have met together in many communities at "brotherhood breakfasts" and similar affairs — for the first time.

With growing frequency, officials of both groups have been guests at meetings of the other.

Rev. John O'Brien, a Catholic theologian at Notre Dme University, has spoken at several Masonic gatherings lately in the middle western United States, stressing greater Catholic esteem for Masons.

He predicts the time is rapidly approaching "when officials of the Catholic Church will re-examine the causes and circumstances of its ban against Catholics joining a Masonic lodge."

That ban was first imposed by Pope Clement XII in 1738, the beginning of a long succession of papal condemnations, edicts and censures imposing excommunication of Catholics joining or promoting Masonry.

Pope Pius IX, in the mid-19th century, charactrized Masonry as insidious, fraudulent, perverse, "injurious both to religion and society." Other harsh charges also were hurled.

MUST BE BELIEVERS

Masonry, which bars atheists and agnostics, obligates members to broad religious principles and, in the works of early constitutions, "to be good men and true — by whatever denomination or persuasion."

It regularly has denied opposing Catholicism. But frayed fellings exited in both camps. The Catholic magazine, America, comments:

"Many a Knight will doubtless recall less fraternal days, when Masonry, particularly in the South, harbored a good deal of anti-Catholicism, and when Catholics rather commonly tarred all Masons with the same brush."

Pastor Arthur M. Spensf spoke on This is the Victory at the Saturday morning service in Seventh-Day Adventist Church today. His text was taken from First John 5:4.

REV. AND MRS. ALAN McLEAN
. . . from Calgary to Victoria

NEW MINISTER SAYS:

Creation Vital To Bible Story

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
Church Editor

The first eleven chapters of Genesis are the seed plot of the Bible, says Rev. Alan McLean, new minister of Victoria's Apostolic Church, at Blanshard and Queens.

"If you dismiss those chapters as myth and legend, you might as well throw away the rest of the Bible."

Mr. McLean was commenting on the New Curriculum of the United Church of Canada which says that the first 11 chapters of Genesis should not be taken literally, but rather as myth.

"We are strongly opposed to this reasoning," Mr. McLean said. "We accept the whole of the Bible as the authentic word of God."

Mr. McLean is open-minded as to whether church ministers should be put up as political candidates.

POLITICS

"There is nothing in the Scriptures against it," he said. "Moses and Daniel were both political figures in their day and age but it never interfered with their ministry for God.

"Whether a church minister should enter politics or not is a matter for his own conscience."

Formerly of Nanaimo, where he was pastor of the Apostolic Church, Mr. McLean has succeeded Rev. Rowland E. S. Toms, who retired last Sunday after 10 years' ministry in Victoria.

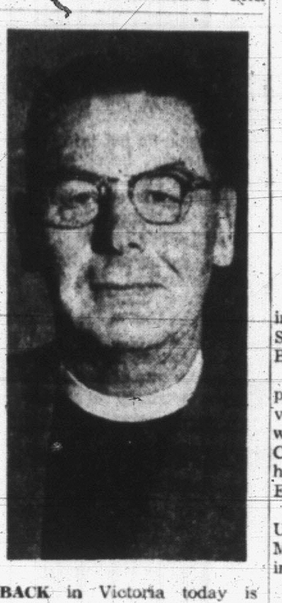
Mr. McLean will reside here with his wife, an organist and singer, and their children Gregory, 14, Marcia, 12, and Robin, 9.

Born at Bow Lake, Alta., Mr. McLean was educated in Nanaimo and served as pastor there from 1958 to 1963. Subsequently he ministered at Assiniboine, Sask., and Bowness Full Gospel Church, Calgary.

WILL PREACH

Mrs. McLean was born in South Dakota and met her husband in Nanaimo 17 years ago.

Mr. McLean will preach at the morning and evening services in the Apostolic Church Sunday.



BACK in Victoria today is Rev. A. I. Higgins, former minister of First United Church. Since 1963, Mr. Higgins has been in charge of Thornhill United Church, Toronto. He will speak at the Sunday morning and evening services in Fairfield United Church and again on Sunday, Aug. 14. Mr. and Mrs. Higgins are re-visiting their sons, Glen and Ralph, in Victoria.

Sanctuary Lamp To Be Dedicated

A sanctuary lamp and a funeral pall will be dedicated in the Anglican church of St. David-by-the-Sea Sunday at the 10:30 a.m. Communion servic.

They will be dedicated to the memory of Mary Josephine Wollaston (1885-1965), a member of the church furnishings guild from its inception in 1943 until her death in 1965.

"She and her sister, Mrs. Phyllis Aitkens, spent much time at Cordova Bay and have long been friends of St. David's," writes Rev. H. Gordon Walker, vicar.

The gifts will be presented by Mrs. G. V. Jarvis on behalf of the Furnishings guild.

Adventists Draw 3,000

An all-time attendance record was at Hope last weekend when 3,000 Seventh-day Adventists from 32 B.C. churches converged on the city for the annual summer Bible conference.

More than 200 Victoria men and women were present.

Mrs. R. O. Berry of Victoria said the increase was due to appearance of Dr. H. M. S. Richards of the Voice of Prophecy and his Kings' Heralds Quartet, now heard on some 800 radio stations, and Pastor W. A. Fagal, originator of the Faith for Today telecast.

Speakers at the nine-day conference included D. W. Hunter, general vice-president, from world headquarters in Washington, D.C.

NEWS OF CITY CHURCHES

Citadel Band Featured At Beacon Hill Service

Victoria's Salvation Army Citadel, under its new commanding officer, Major Robert McKerricher, will take over the Sunday evening gospel services in Beacon Hill Park.

Major McKerracher will give the gospel message. The Citadel Band under bandmaster Roy Cornick and the Citadel Songsters, led by William Hastings, will present a musical program.

Most Victoria Salvationists are expected to participate.

This will be the sixth in a series of nine open-air services sponsored by the Victoria Committee, Christian Businessmen's Committee International.

"We have held these services every summer for 23 years past," says committee chairman George Inrig, "and those conducted by the Salvation Army have always been highly successful.

"The Army's service and effort always has a strong appeal to the public."

Temperance Amid Our Decadence

What is temperance?

An evangelical understanding of the word will be discussed by Rev. David H. Metzger in Grace English Lutheran Church Sunday morning.

Says Mr. Metzger:

"Christ gives us the grace we need to lead temperate lives in the midst of the indulgence and decadence of our time. Christianity is not a message of abstinence, but the call is going out for more sanity in our living.

"Otherwise our society may be destroyed from within by moral and mental decay."

Portuguese Hoping For Papal Visit

LISBON (Reuters) — Portuguese Roman Catholics are hoping that Pope Paul may visit Portugal next year for celebrations marking the 50th anniversary of Our Lady of Fatima in 1917.

Record numbers of pilgrims from Portugal and abroad are expected to visit the shrine during the year.

Five-month-long celebrations will begin officially May 13, 1967 — the 50th anniversary of the first apparition of the Virgin Mary to three children minding sheep in a field at Cova da Iria, near the small village of Fatima in central Portugal.

Of the children, Lucia de Jesus, 10, and her cousins Jacinta and Francisco Marto, 7 and 9, only Lucia is still alive. She is a nun at the Carmelite convent of Santa Tereza, at Coimbra, in central Portugal.

The three children declared that the Virgin appeared to them on the 13th day of each month in 1197 from May to October inclusive.

Francisco died in 1919 at the age of 10 of pneumonia and Jacinta in 1920 at the age of nine of pleurisy.

Although pilgrims at once started to flock to the spot, it was only in 1930, after careful examination and investigation of all relevant data, that full ecclesiastical approval was given to the devotion to Our Lady of Fatima.

The record for the number of pilgrims visting Fatima at one time was set Oct. 13, 1951, when 1,000,000 people from many parts of the world gathered at the shrine to mark the closing of the Catholic Church's Holy Year.

The shrine can hardly accommodate a greater number of people than that at one time, but the total of pilgrims visiting Fatima in 1967 is expected to set a new mark.

Hope that the Pope may visit Fatima during the celebrations was voiced publicly last February by the vice-president of the anniversary committee, Rev. Jose Galambra de Oliveira, who said guardedly that "the Pope may be expected to come to Fatima. . . ."

Clergy Helps Get Blood

Victoria Council of Churches has asked all clergy to make an appeal on behalf of the Canadian Red Cross this Sunday.

Blood donors are urgently needed, and the council has issued this statement:

"The supply is NOT keeping up with the demand. Six thousand units or pints of plasma are needed every month in British Columbia. Last month only 5,000 were received.

"Victoria does NOT supply sufficient for its own needs. As the capital city, surely it is a matter of civic pride that we should not borrow from other centres.

"We should lead the province in our support of the Red Cross blood donor appeal."

Red Cross clinics will be open at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort Street, on Tuesday from 1:30 p.m. to 4 p.m., and from 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.

On Wednesday from 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.

A new clinic will open Wednesday at the Customs Building, 816 Government, Room 209, from 9 a.m. to 12 noon and from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

San Francisco Group Sings Next Friday

The Eight Singing Men of Simpson Bible College, San Francisco, will present a program of sacred music in Victoria Alliance Church, 1039 Yates Street, next Friday at 7:45 p.m.

The program will consist of hymns, gospel songs and Negro spirituals. The group is made up of eight college men and their accompanist, a Simpson College co-ed, touring California, Oregon, Idaho, Utah, Washington and Arizona.

"Members of the general public are welcome," says Pastor Ted Chapman of the Alliance Church.

High Tribute

"Who hath directed the Spirit of the Lord, or being his counsellor hath taught him?" Isaiah's tribute to the almightiness of God is part of the Bible Lesson-Sermon on "Spirit" to be read in all Christian Science churches this Sunday. Also included will be this passage from the denominational textbook, Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy: "Spirit blesses man, but man cannot 'tell whence it cometh'. By it the sick are healed, the sorrowing are comforted, and the sinning are reformed. These are the effects of one universal God, the invisible good dwelling in eternal Science."

Did Henry VIII Live Here? Asks Visitor

By GLEN ALLEN

"Where is your Canadian flag?"

"Did Henry VIII ever live here?"?

"Votre cathedrale est absolument sensationelle."

These are some of the comments written in the visitors book at beautiful Christ Church Cathedral.

Some of the handwriting is boyish, some spidery, most is neat and schooled.

They come from St. John's and California and Sussex and Montreal and Saanich and Walla Walla, Washington.

The notes say where they are from and what church they go to there and sometimes who is with them and then you can see them lifting their pen and looking up or listening to the silence — they write "Beautiful" or "Inspiring" or "Thank you."

Column after column. "Peace" writes a lady from Manitoba.

"So much like our cathedral" writes someone from Durham, England.

"You ought to do something with that grey wall over the altar," writes a hand from Calgary.

"Lovely Music," or "Disappointed with the music."

"Nearest thing to England."

People feel glad or sad and write the truth or don't write the truth about their feelings in the big book of the years.

Someone from Victoria writes, "I am home."

You see what they mean. The huge room is still.

Then the organ plays. The end of some hymn, over and over, the loud final part.

Only the sounding organ, and then from below, through the doors a ship's horn, the call of travel and leave-takings.

The great hall speaks with a small, calm voice of its own. It feels like an island or home.

SAVE-BEATLES DRIVE LAUNCHED

LONDON (CP)—The Beatles appeared headed for more trouble today as a ban on their records spread and a Save-The-Beatles campaign was launched.

The Beatles originally got into trouble because of a statement by John Lennon, who said The Beatles are "more popular than Jesus now."

Meanwhile, George Harrison, another member of the group, stirred up more trouble by commenting on the British government and its proposal to ban pirate radio stations which broadcast pop music from off the British coast.

Harrison was quoted as saying in a musical paper:

"Why don't they make the crummy BBC illegal as well? The government makes me sick. This is becoming a police state. They should leave the pirates alone. At least they had a go which is more than the BBC have done."

CAUSED CONCERN

A BBC spokesman said the article has caused the state-run corporation some concern, although there was no immediate reaction from the government.

Two American girls called today on Britons to support their save - The - Beattles campaign. They placed an advertisement in the personal column of The Daily Telegraph.

Beattles' manager Brian Epstein told newsmen in New York that Lennon's remarks had been misinterpreted. Their tour of the U.S. later this month is still on, he said.

BRITAIN WEATHERS BILINGUALISM TIFF

Welsh Dragon Breathes Fire in House

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP)—For the first time the Welsh dragon has managed to penetrate the lair of English lions, hurling the flag of bitter memories before the enemy and shooting out flames of nationalism and bilingualism in the Mother of Parliaments.

From the moment he stepped into the House of Commons, with his army of Plaid Cymru supporters held at the doorstep, Gwynfor Evans, first Welsh Nationalist member of Parliament, declared his true intention: He came not for truce or compromise but to make war against English dominance over his fellow Welshmen.

The image of Wales, land of beautiful hills and singing coal-miners, demanding independence and a seat at the United Nations is viewed by many Englishmen with twittering sympathy and sneering ridicule.

But after all, the Labor candidate in socialist Wales had been soundly beaten by the president of the 16,000 - member Plaid Cymru in the fight for Carmarthen. Welsh nationalism had finally won a voice in the 630-seat Commons and Evans, 54, and father of seven children, knew his duty.

His very first demand, that he be allowed to take the oath in his native tongue, plunged the House into controversy. The Welsh tongue is a recognized language in Britain. Why must he swear allegiance in English?

In quiet tones, Speaker Horace King, whose antecedents are also Welsh, tried to dissuade him. He was bound by the rules of the House and those rules declared the oath must be in English. Besides, the Hansard reporters knew not a word of Welsh. How could they record what the great, white hope of Wales had to say?

The thought of burdened minorities crushed by the power of Westminster — and perhaps the thought of a vote or two in Wales—brought members from both sides of the House to Evans' side. Surely it would do no harm, one insisted, to have the oath in Welsh since the Queen's assent is on occasion pronounced in Norman French in the House of Lords.

"I have a duty to the House to keep it to the rules and the orders," insisted Speaker King.

But what if a Welshman was elected to the House and could not speak English?

"The chair never rules on hypotheses," King responded, ending the debate after the government yielded a point by saying it intended to review the whole business with the help of all parliamentary officialdom.

Thus in a sense Evans had won his first battle for his "hen wlad fy nhadau" (land of my fathers). Outside the Commons his army of supporters, carrying the banner of the Welsh dragon, felt a sense of victory.

Now there are questions whether the unity of Britain is being split by regionalism. No one can ignore the growing strength of the nationalists, says The Scotsman. But is this healthy? Both The Scotsman and the London Evening Standard described Evans' attempt to take the oath in Welsh as "quixotic."

Plaid Cymru's demand for Commonwealth status gives the party a slightly comic opera air, says The Evening Standard. But it applauded Evans' election to Parliament. It would provide a new link with Wales "through which the bitterness of the Welsh nationalists may drain peacefully away."

Third Boy Dies After Blast In Gas Station

VANCOUVER (CP) — Daryl Paterson, 14, last of three boys burned in a service station fire at interior Merritt last weekend, died overnight in hospital here.

The two others burned in the fire, Edward Cruickshank, 16, and Brian McKenna, 16, died in hospital here earlier.

The youths had been using cleaning solvent on the floor of the Merrit service station owned by Paterson's father when the fluid exploded when it came in contact with a pilot light.

The boys were flown to Vancouver General Hospital, all badly burned.

Rhythm Method 'Causes Stress'

NEW YORK (AP) — A leading Roman Catholic psychiatrist, who had sought evidence to support the rhythm method of birth control, reports findings directly to the contrary — that it is a poor method.

"I must conclude that the use of rhythm is productive of serious psychological harm," says Dr. John R. Cavanagh, a professor in the theology school of the Catholic University of America.

Dr. Cavanagh, a member of the birth control study commission named by Pope Paul, reports his survey findings in the August issue of Marriage magazine.

Based on replies to a questionnaire from 2,000 "successful users" of the rhythm method, Dr. Cavanagh concludes that its use deprives "a woman of the conjugal act during the time of her greatest desire" and thus "causes severe frustration in many couples."

CAUSES DISCORD

Furthermore, he says, "disagreement over its use and quarrels over its failures cause marital discord" and "such marital disharmony with its attending symptoms may cause psychic damage to the offspring."

The survey was originated last fall by Dr. Cavanagh on the theory that the rhythm method had more detractors than supporters because the successful users, for the most part, were not being heard from.

Consequently, he asked for replies from only couples for whom the method had been successful in regulating births. The responses, he says, led to his negative evaluation of the method.

The rhythm method requires abstinence from sexual intercourse during a woman's fertile period. The church, so far, has disapproved contraceptive means.

"Many of the individuals are leading heroic lives of frustration," he says. "The letters made me wonder if God intended Catholics to suffer so."

In his preliminary report, he includes several typical letters that accompanied the questionnaire replies. Said one:

"We have calculated periods by thermometer, calendar' pains, desires, psychology, graphs charts, wheels, tables, luck, guess, math, estimates, sugarpaper, moods, secretions, elations, depressions and the moon. It is true that the time for desire for both is the unsafe time. The frustration is enormous. . . ."

Said another letter: "How misled I was about marriage! I worked hard to be a virgin for my husband. Then I get married and the church tells me I can show love eight or nine days out of 29. Sure I can show it when I want but we don't want 10 children. We both have ulcers — and only two children."

The pontifical commission reported to Pope Paul in June with its contents and reaction from him still forthcoming.

TEXAS KILLER SHOWED POLITENESS

YOUNG COUPLE UNHARMED IN BRUSH WITH SNIPER

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — "I am prepared to die," Charles Whitman wrote.

It was written only hours before the University of Texas sniper unleashed a barrage of bullets last Monday, killing 13 persons and wounding another 33.

In what appeared to be a sort of calm desperation, Whitman wrote down his thoughts. They were of what was to come and of what had been, reporters learned.

"After my death," Whitman wrote as if preparing his will, "I wish an autopsy on me to be performed to see if there's any mental disorder."

His wish was being granted.

"I don't quite understand what is compelling me to write this," one of Whitman's three notes said. "I have been to a psychiatrist. I have been having fearings and violent impulses. I have had tremendous headaches."

"I have decided to kill Kathy tonight," he typed out. Kathy was his wife.

Another note, written dispassionately, read, "I have just killed my mother."

Perhaps a twinge of emotion had crept into his mind.

"I love my mother with all my heart. If there is a heaven, she is going there. But if there is not a heaven, she is at least out of her misery."

In longhand he described "interrupted by friends."

He dropped down a space and wrote 3 a.m. Both dead, referring to his wife and mother.

The friends were apparently Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Fuess. Later they could not remember the architectural honor student acting unusual.

Later that day, hustling a heavy footlocker atop the 307-foot Texas tower Whitman entered history ignominiously.

But there was a macabre scene of politeness to come. When Don Walden and Cheryl Botts started down from the tower's observation deck they saw a husky, blond man bending over a couch.

Miss Botts, 18, of Rockdale, Tex., cautioned her date to watch out for some stain on the floor and told Walden to step around it. He did.

The blond man turned around, clutching two rifles.

"Hi, how are you?" Miss Botts remembered him asking amiably.

Walden thought it odd to see a man there with two guns, but did not say anything. Walden and Miss Botts left, unharmed.

Later behind the couch police found the first victim in the tower — the observation desk receptionist.

Rescuer of Injured Fired for Heroics

AUSTIN (UPI) — A 19-year-old carpenter rescued two persons wounded by sniper Charles J. Whitman during Monday's massacre at the University of Texas. In doing so, he disobeyed his boss' order and was fired from his job.

"He openly defied me before my men," explained Jim Carey when asked why he felt it necessary to fire Bill Davis. He conceded that Davis should be commended for his heroics, but that he lacked discipline.

"We had the responsibility of 25 to 30 men and didn't want anybody killed," said Carey.

In recalling what happened, Carey said Davis and another worker rushed down into the street to help the wounded shortly after the shooting started.

When they came back, Davis "asked me, there in front of the others, if I would fire him if he did go out again, and I said, 'Yes Bill, I'll fire you.' If I had said no, I wouldn't have been able to keep the others in."

On the rescue mission that cost him his job, Davis pulled one man into a jewelry store from the street and got an injured jeweler away from the rifle fire after he was wounded in the store.

Hit Mileage Cheaters

BOSTON (AP)—Gov. John A. Volpe of Massachusetts has signed a bill setting a $100 fine for turning back an automobile speedometer to misrepresent the number of miles on the vehicle. Under the law evidence that an automobile dealer had readjusted a speedometer would constitute evidence of intent to misrepresent.

CN Men Return To Jobs

MONTREAL (CP) — Handlers of CNR express freight have ended their wildcat strike with a vote to resume work — at least for 11 days.

The strikers voted for an immediate work resumption Friday night, ending a stoppage that had started Monday and helped snarl freight traffic between Montreal and Toronto.

The men had been reported filing back to their jobs throughout Friday.

Originally 1,200 in number, 400 of them participated in the formal meeting Friday night.

They said they will stick to their CNR duties until Aug. 17, when a strike following the filing of a conciliation report on a long-standing dispute will be legally possible.

The strikers are members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Transport and General Workers (CLC).

On Aug. 10, Mr. Justice C. A. Cameron of Ottawa, federal conciliator in a dispute connected with contract negotiations involving their union, is scheduled to bring in his conciliation report.

PROTEST DELAYS

The wildcat strikers walked out in protest against alleged delays in the handing down of the report.

A strike by the union would not be legal until seven days after the report is made public.

The CNR strike had spread to other company freight handlers in Toronto, where more than half the 425 express workers at the CNR's downtown terminal were off the job Friday. A wildcat strike by them had started Thursday.

With the work resumption in Montreal, the CNR announced the lifting of all embargoes on CNR freight shipments between Montreal and Toronto.

The Maritime region, which had also been affected, was back to normal too, the railway officials said.

Lower Earnings Becomes Habit And Market Prices Slip Down

By LARRY DWORKIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Industrials soured on Canada's stock markets this week as a number of large Canadian companies reported lower net earnings.

At Toronto, a slump by the industrial index to its lowest level since June, 1964, highlighted the week's trade.

The index was as low as 156.27 at mid week. It closed down 1.12 to 156.99.

Inco paced the decline, sliding 3⅞ to 92⅝. The stock touched a low of 91½ after the company announced lower net earnings for the first six months of 1966 to $73,630,000 against $75,846,000 last year.

Bell Telephone, down ¼ at 50½, touched a low of 50½ on news that second-quarter earnings dropped to $20,786,229 compared with $21,673,370 in 1965.

MOORE DROPS

Other issues to decline included Moore Corp., off 1½ to 82, Interprovincial Pipe Line and Texaco 1¼ to 76¼ and 57½.

A number of Bay Street analysts said because the New York Exchange slid below its expected floor level, investor confidence was shattered.

However, the Toronto market staged a strong rally Friday and the industrial index jumped .71.

Alcan, Canada's largest aluminum producer, sparked Friday's rally when it advanced 1⅞ on news of higher six-month earnings to $39,636,000 against $27,666,000 last year. The stock was down ⅛ to 33¾ on the week.

On the plus side of the ledger, Algoma Steel was up 1⅛ to 28⅜ and Stelco ⅜ to 23.

Western oils, paced by Home Oil, scored the largest gain of the session. The oil index was up 1.04 to 104.70.

HOME HITS HIGH

Home A increased 2⅛ to a high of 22⅜ and Home B 1¾ to 22. The company recently found a large pocket of natural gas in Yorkshire in north-central England.

JOHNSON WARNS FIRMS:

Hold Prices or Else

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Johnson has said it on the line for the nation's industries: inflationary price increases will be met with a federal buyer's strike.

Within hours of tacitly conceding defeat to the steel industry on its price increases, Johnson came back Friday with a pointed warning to other industries which might be tempted to follow suit.

RESPONSIBLE

"If we are to continue our space effort and continue to make the magnificent progress represented by our past achievements," Johnson said at a bill signing ceremony, "we can do so only if business and labor leaders will make their contribution by responsible pricing and bargaining decisions."

He made no specific mention of the industry-wide steel price increase, but he clearly had it in mind as he discussed the $5 billion space authorization bill he signed into law.

"This bill is in accord with our recommendation to the congress. I hope that we will be able to continue the program at the pace we proposed and which the congress has endorsed by this legislation.

"However, if particular segments of our economy continue to raise their prices and increase the cost of this and other programs, it will be necessary for the government to further reduce its expenditures, particularly in those areas where prices are rising in an inflationary way."

The space program would be a particularly apt vehicle for federal bargaining. It is considered desirable for, but not essential to, the nation's progress. It also carries political leverage. Many congressmen would deeply resent cutbacks in space contracts with constituents.

PULP MILL ANNOUNCED

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Premier Smallwood Friday announced a fourth pulp and paper mill for Newfoundland.

Mr. Smallwood said the $120,000,000 project would include a $10,000,000 chip plant to be built near Happy Valley on Labrador's Lake Melville.

Noranda Seeking Piece of Brenda

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Stock Exchange has been asked to approve a deal by which Noranda Mines would purchase 1,000 shares of Brenda Mines for $8 a share, the exchange disclosed Friday.

Brenda sold in the $10 range this week.

The transaction is designed to provide cash for Brenda and would give Noranda a position in the company now developing a low-grade large-scale molybdenum-copper deposit near Peachland in the Okanagan.

As of June Brenda reported that of 5,000,000 shares authorized, 2,150,000 were issued. At that time the company reported it had $1,300,000 in the treasury.

It was reported that the Noranda deal would be conditional on acceptance of a feasibility report expected in late November or early December.

Mine Boom Boosts Trading at Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — The value of shares traded on Vancouver Stock Exchange in the first seven months of the year jumped to $233,770,751 from $139,191,945 a year ago, exchange figures disclosed today.

The increase was led by the mining section which has recorded a $79,000,000 gain in the January-July period.

The same section has also been mainly responsible for increased trading this year. At the end of July over 220,000,000 shares had changed hands as against 142,000,000 last year. Mines were the reason for 66,000,000 of this gain.

In July, value of mining stocks traded this year was double that of 1965.

Altogether 16,200,000 mining shares were moved for a value of nearly $15,000,000. In July, 1965, 8,300,000 shares traded on the mining section for a value of $5,700,000.

In the January-June period industrials traded 3,136,474 shares worth $36,889,017 compared with 2,573,441 worth $32,290,406 in the same period of 1965.

Oils traded 29,420,326 shares worth $19,522,038 in the period compared with 19,536,000 worth $8,847,040 in the January-June period of 1965.

CPA Eyes Planes

PENTICTON (CP)—Canadian Pacific Airlines is considering buying up to $25,000,000 worth of new jet aircraft for its B.C. and Yukon routes. CPA President J. C. Gilmer, said the company is at present evaluating new aircraft for its domestic routes. Included in the survey are the Douglas DC-9, the Boeing 737 and the Boeing 727.

Food Price Drop Expected

OTTAWA (CP) — Food prices are expected to fall after a rise in July resulted in another record for the Consumer Price Index which jumped to 144.3 from 143.8 in June.

The July figure, reported by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, was almost five points above last year's level of 139.5. The index is based on 1949 prices equalling 100.

Although the seasonal rise in food costs was the main trigger, a small advance in housing costs also occurred between early June and early July to contribute to the index jump.

Expressed in percentages, the July price index was three-tenths of one per cent higher than June's and 3.4 per cent above July, 1965.

Food prices usually rise in early July, the period between heavy spring meat movements and the arrival of the first local vegetable crops. Imports dominate the markets.

A drop in food costs can be expected this month.

DAIRY ITEMS RISE

DBS said its July survey of food prices showed increases in most dairy products, all fats except lard, most beef and pork cuts, tea, coffee, grapefruit, oranges, apples, frozen orange juice, turnips, tomatoes, celery and lettuce.

Those gains more than outweighed scattered price declines for sugar, pickles, jelly powder, evaporated milk, eggs, chicken, turkey, lard, hamburg, smoked ham, sausages, bananas, grapes, strawberries, most processed fruits, potatoes, carrots, cabbage and tomato juice.

The effect was to move the food sub-index, which along with housing accounts for half of the main index, to 146 from 144.2 in June and 139 in July, 1965.

The Consumer Price Index has been on the rise for 10 straight months starting from last September when it was 139.1. It is the main barometer of living costs in Canada.

There is no wage index available for exact comparison. Closest is the DBS survey of average weekly industrial wages, based on 1961 equalling 100. This stood at 121.8 in March, the latest month available.

The July housing sub-index, reflecting costs of shelter and household operation, rose to 144.8 from 144.4 in June.

Five other categories that make up 41 per cent of the main index showed only minor changes between June and July. Clothing dipped to 125.2 from 125.3 and health and personal care slid to 181 from 181.2. Figures for transportation, recreation - reading and tobacco-alcohol remained static.

BROTHERS
... new problem

Obviously We're All Wealthy

VANCOUVER (CP) — An economist from eastern Canada said in an interview Friday he sees prosperity on the streets of B.C. cities.

Dr. Anthony Wintermans, associate professor of economics at St. Francis Xavier University in Nova Scotia, said: "The difference in affluence between B.C. and the Maritimes is very, very obvious and you can even see it in the people on the streets."

Dr. Wintermans said B.C.'s development is staggering. He said his own province has a "retarded economy" but is developing methods of dealing with its problems.

Agencies such as Industrial Estates Ltd., Atlantic Development Board, Area Development Agency and the Federal Department of Industry are all working toward a more prosperous Nova Scotia, said Dr. Wintermans, here as an economical adviser to the Vancouver-based Commonwealth group.

Commonwealth group is a number of companies headed by Commonwealth Trust Co., involved in the finance business.

Shipping Act 'Inadequate'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for the Seafarers' International Union of Canada (Ind.) said Friday a federal government official has admitted the Canada Shipping Act is inadequate in its present form and changes will be made in the near future.

Norman David, west coast vice-president of the SIU, said the R. R. MacGillivray, director of marine regulations for the department of transport, told a joint meeting of management and labor here, however, that his department cannot give regulatory powers to a proposed manning board which would rule on the number of men required on certain-sized vessels.

The meeting of federal, union and B.C. tugboat officials, was held Friday to discuss the manning report of the joint consultative committee of the B.C. towing industry.

RECLAIMING OLD MINES

Every Pit a Butchart

By AB KENT
Times Business Writer

Wasteland created by increasing use of open-pit mining in B.C. will be a reclamation problem as the province booms, Mines Minister Donald Brothers said Friday.

In an interview Mr. Brothers said his department and the mining industry have discussed the matter of restoration where mining has laid open large tracts of land.

But to date there is no legislation or regulation compelling a company to carry out any restorative measures for mined-out pits.

Such measures could include landfill, reforestation, grass seeding or drainage.

So far there are only one or two worked-out mine pits in the province, Mr. Brothers said. These are no problem by themselves and one of them — the old Phoenix mine near Greenwood — is mostly overgrown now.

Existing open-pit mines are acknowledged as an economic way to recover coal or metal ores, especially if the grade is of marginal value.

REMOTE

They are mostly in remote or rarely visited areas such as Brynnor iron mine near Kennedy Lake, Endako molybdenum mine west of Prince George or Wesfrob Mines iron-copper operation on Moresby Island in the Queen Charlottes.

But open pits are also located closer to civilization, such as the limestone quarries at Cobble Hill, on Texada Island or in the Fraser Valley at Cheam Lake.

As the province develops, as the population expands and communities stretch out and roads are extended, as open pit and strip mining become even more economic than underground mining, the scars on our mountains and across valleys and forests will multiply.

BIG CAPACITIES

Where open-pit mining was once a long, slow process, today it is possible to use machines with gargantuan earth and rock-moving capacities.

One such monster developed for strip coal mining in the state of Illinois is able to swallow up 250 tons at a bite, requiring 10 railway cars to take away each load.

Open-pit mining at that rate becomes a quick process and the prospect of wholesale wasteland as ore bodies are removed become easily imagined.

NOW IS THE TIME

Mr. Brothers said such widespread open pitting where conservation and beautification would be at stake remains some time in the future, but he agreed that now is the time to plan ahead.

Mining companies have indicated willingness to co-operate in general terms, he said.

"It is something I can take up with the mining association," he added.

He also noted that where vast open-pit mines have been dug in easily accessible areas they have been a powerful tourist attraction.

In some parts of the U.S., he said, open pits have been flooded to create recreational lakes.

Closer to home there is Butchart Gardens, once a limestone quarry and now the area's most famous tourist attraction.

And at the same time in Kentucky there are hundreds of square miles of tortured, barren countryside, much of it sterile like a bomb-blackened battlefield where strip mining has left an irreparable mark.

Had there been legislation to ensure the mined-out areas would return to nature, the ruined land might look more like its neighboring green hills of Kentucky for ensuing generations.

Hal Malone LOOKS AT SPORTS

It's not often that we can deliver scoops, so sit down and gnaw on this one . . .

Gordon Howe, six feet, 201 lbs., born Floral, Sask., March 31, 1928, right wing, will retire.

In 1968.

You may not think this is the greatest bit of news since girls were invented. But for five National Hockey League goalkeepers, some 30 NHL defencemen and about 60 big-league forwards its enough reason to get stoned for a month.

Mr. Howe owns the all-time scoring record. As long as anyone can remember anything under a 30-goal season was a mistake or a terrible year.

He has played between 40 and 60 per cent of every game for Detroit. He does not look like a guy who needs a wheelchair or a cane. Detroit's Sid Abel runs a relaxed ship which is good for senior citizens like William Gadsby, 40, and Mons. Howe.

Now Howe was moving quietly among the press and radio types at a kaffee klatch thrown by a national department store which pays him to endorse its sporting goods.

He did not jump on a chair and bellow "I'm quitting hockey!" His style is more Gary Cooper than Jerry Lewis.

Somebody asked Howe how long he would play hockey. He said, "I have one year to go on a two-year contract."

Yes, but after that?

"Well," he said, very softly, "when I reach 40 I'll be squeezing it and I'm 38 now."

He said he was tired.

"I'm not tired of the work I'm doing—I enjoy it," he said. "I'm just tired of working."

Rocket Too Wide for Comeback

Since May 29 in Moncton, New Brunswick, Howe has been on a schedule that would stagger an elephant. Up at 7 a.m., breakfast at 8, personal appearance at 9:30, press coffee party 10:30, etc., etc.

On this western safari, his wife and children accompanied him. It was their first trip west of Saskatoon.

What did they think of Victoria? asked a chamber of commerce type.

"I don't know," Howe said. "They're in Vancouver. Fishing."

The chamber of commerce type gulped.

"I wish I was with them," Howe said.

If Howe was considering retirement, does that mean that Maurice Richard might emerge from it, a la Bernie Geoffrion?

"No chance," Howe said. "Have you seen pictures of the Rocket lately? He's this wide—," holding his arms far apart.

"He plays in the old-timers' game. Ted Lindsay asked me to play. I said I would if there was no hitting. 'Don't worry about it' Lindsay said.

"So in the second period the Rocket is hitting and Lindsay is hitting. And when Ted comes to the box I said 'You really want to win this?' And he said 'You bet.'

"I could see somebody could get killed. A few of those guys were turning beet red; they looked like heart cases. No more of this for me. I told Lindsay 'You play in your game and I'll play in mine—for money'."

More Than Blessings Go With Fame

Money is not something Howe appears in danger of being without.

The Red Wings don't release player salaries, but Howe would $40,000 grab you?

For petty cash there is the department store tie-in (seven more years to go); a hockey school he conducts; endorsations.

And an arena. His arena.

"Well, not mine altogether," Howe said. "Five fellows and me. Not pro athletes. Just businessmen of my acquaintance.

"We built this place in St. Clare Shores, about 20 miles out of Detroit. Cost $350,000.

"Never closes on holiday weekends. That shows how great the demand is for ice. Rents for $30 an hour. Heated? No. So cold in there you can hang meat.

"Last winter a woman was watching a hockey game. She could have sat in an enclosed area but she's out in the open bleacher seats. A puck comes over the board and socks her in the eye. Smashes her contact lens.

"The papers say 'Howe Sued.' But that's not right. Six of us own the place. How can Howe be sued alone?"

He's right. Howe's partners do not skate with Detroit, break records, endorse golf sticks or breakfast cereals. There's a curse to fame, as well as a blessing.

Best in Hockey Just Small Spuds

With all his interests does Howe have a business manager like Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus?

"It's funny you should ask. I play golf with Glen Johnson, the top amateur in Michigan. He told me I should have a manager. 'I know Mark McCormick,' Johnson said. 'I'll arrange a meeting with him'." (McCormick is a Chicago lawyer who handles the affairs of Palmer and Nicklaus among others.)

"I sat down with McCormick at an airport," Howe continued. "He listened while I told him about my affairs. He knows about hockey; he's not isolated from things about him."

Naturally, McCormick grabbed the chance to represent Howe, the greatest name in hockey, annual bread-winner of a cool $100,000 per year?

Howe shook his head.

"McCormick said I was small potatoes."

Awk! It's shattering to be underprivileged.

Canadian Teen-Agers Break World Swim Mark in Relay

KINGSTON, Jamaica (CP)—Canada's swimmers, with a gold medal and a world record already under their belts, continued to blaze through the British Empire Games pool here today.

Elaine Tanner of Vancouver and Louise Kennedy of London, Ont., won their way into the finals of the women's 110-yard backstroke.

The 15-year-old Miss Tanner broke the Games record along the way, but her new mark stood for about 15 minutes before England's mighty Linda Ludgrove took it right back in winning her heat.

In the men's events, Ralph Hutton of Ocean Falls, B.C., won his way into the final of the 220-yard men's backstroke but two Toronto swimmers were eliminated—Jim Shaw and Alex Fedko.

Gerry Moro of Trail, B.C., continued to advance in the tough 10-event decathlon and at the end of six events stood fourth.

In today's opening event, Alex Oakley of Oshawa, Ont., and Felix Cappella of Midland, Ont., ended fifth and sixth in the 20-mile walk.

Canada and Australia each smashed a world record Friday night to share the first two gold medals handed out at the British Empire Games pool.

The opening - day performances of the Canadian team, particularly the swimmers, was one of the best showings by Canada since before the Second World War, and it wound up with the Canadians grabbing four medals—one gold, one silver and two bronze.

Five championships were decided Friday and 15 more are on tap today in track and field, swimming and diving, women's fencing and weightlifting.

The first world mark fell to Canada in the women's 440-yard freestyle relay when Marion Lay, a Vancouver-born resident of Covina, Calif., outswam Australian ace Lyn Bell in a sizzling anchor leg to give the Canadians a time of four minutes, 10.8 seconds. This was two-tenths of a second off the previous mark, set by an Australian team including Miss Bell and Dawn Fraser at the 1962 Games in Perth.

Eight-Minute Barrier Shattered

The Australians replied impressively in the men's 880-yard freestyle relay, breaking the magic eight-minute barrier for the first time.

The Aussie men blazed home in 7:59.5, far ahead of second-place Canada and 7.8 seconds under the world record posted in Leipzig last summer by a German team.

The other members of the record-breaking Canadian women's team beside Miss Lay were Elaine Tanner and Jane Hughes of Vancouver and Louise Kennedy of London, Ont. The Australian team which barely missed the old mark at 4:11.1, included Jan Murphy, Jenny Steinbeck and Marion Smith.

Miss Tanner, the versatile 15-year-old who probably will swim another 10 races before the six-day swimming program ends, swam a 1:01.6 opening leg to touch about a second in the lead. Miss Steinbeck led Miss Hughes by about one-half length on the second leg but the Australian margin was down to the barest fraction when Miss Smith and Miss Kennedy touched.

Miss Lay and Miss Bell swam stroke for stroke for the first 55 yards of the anchor leg. But the Canadian girl opened up a narrow lead just after the turn and held it stubbornly to the finish.

The world record relays took the spotlight on a day that saw Canada win two third - place bronze medals in weightlifting on the efforts of bantamweight Chun Hon Chan of Montreal and featherweight Allen Salter of Ottawa.

England and Wales won the weightlifting gold medals, and England also made a clean sweep of the men's individual foils fencing. England has six medals to Canada's four while Australia has two after the first day.

NINE GAIN FINALS

Today Harry Jerome of Vancouver and Ed Hearne of Toronto moved into the second round of the men's 100-yard dash. Bill Crothers of Markham, Ont., goes in the 880-yard heats.

Friday a total of nine Canadians reached the finals in individual events and several boxers and badminton players won their opening matches.

The Canadian influence extended even to the women's springboard diving. Earlier in the day, Beverly Boys of Toronto, who wasn't supposed to be a threat, whipped into second place after the preliminary round ahead of Susan Knight, Australia's defending champion.

For Canada the big win in the swimming relay was its third in 32 years and, in the process, it stunted Australia's bid for a third straight swimming title. Canada had won the spring relay previously in 1934 and 1938.

Handshakes and kissing over with, the youngsters headed for home in the Games village when Simpson gently reminded them they had "a lot of work to do."

Miss Lay and Miss Kennedy had earlier qualified for today's final of the 110-yard freestyle. And, icing on the cake, Gilchrist and Kasting made it to the final of the men's freestyle sprint; Tom Arusoo of Montreal and Jacks qualified for the 110-yard butterfly final, and Gilchrist and Hutton will go Monday in the final of the 440-yard individual medley.

TICATS CRUSH ARGOS

TORONTO (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cats scored touchdowns in each of the final two quarters to register an 18-8 victory over Toronto Argonauts in Eastern Football Conference play here Friday night.

A crowd of 28,594 sat through a steady downpour during the first half as the clubs battled to a 1-1 tie. But the rain stopped in the third quarter and the Tiger-Cats came on strong to wrap up the victory.

It was the first game of the season for both clubs.

Halfback Bobby Kuntz and defensive halfback Herb Paterra scored touchdowns for Hamilton. Don Sutherin added a field goal and two converts. Hamilton's other point came when Toronto recovered a Hamilton fumble in the end zone in the first quarter.

Flanker Bobby Taylor scored Toronto's touchdown on a 46-yard pass from rookie quarterback Wally Gabler late in the third quarter. John Vilunas kicked a convert.

The other Toronto point came when Hamilton's Garney Henley was rouged on a quick kick by Bill Van Burkleo.

MEETING MAY DECIDE ROCKS' PLAYOFF FATE

Victoria Shamrocks' Inter-City Lacrosse League playoff hopes may die without a stick being wielded or a shot being fired.

An executive meeting Monday may decide it all.

League commissioner Tommy Gordon will convene the meeting to rule on New Westminster Salmonbellies' protested game with Vancouver.

Gordon has already stated that Vancouver's Wayne Pecknold was ineligible for the contest, which Vancouver won 11-8. If the executive decides to forfeit the two points to New Westminster, Shamrocks will be out of the playoffs.

Shamrocks trail Salmonbellies by five points. To make the playoffs, the Victoria club must win its last three games, including tonight's match at Coquitlam, while New Westminster loses its final two games.

Esquimalt Blanks Cowichan in Semi

Solid hitting by Al Vyner helped Esquimalt-Vic West down Lake Cowichan 6-0 at Hampton Park Friday night to move into the final of the Vancouver Island Little League baseball championship.

Vyner socked a three-run homer in the first inning, added a two-run double in the fifth, and scored the winners' sixth run.

Esquimalt will play Hampton in the Island final tonight at 6:30 p.m. Lake Cowichan will face Lakehill in a consolation game at 2.

The Island winner moves into the B.C. playoff next weekend in Vancouver, and the B.C. champion will compete in the Canadian finals at Hampton Park Aug. 18-20. The Canadian champ travels to the Little League world series in Williamsport, Pa.

Juniors Seek Island Crown

Five teams are competing this weekend in the Vancouver Island junior boys' softball tournament at View Royal's Centennial Park.

Games were played at noon and 2 p.m. today with other contests to follow at 4 and 6:30. Sunday's games will be at 10 a.m., noon, 2 p.m., 4 and 6:30 if necessary. Two clubs each from Victoria and Alberni are entered in the tourney along with a team from Nanaimo.

Hockey Fans Hit By Rising Costs

TORONTO (CP)—Four thousand of the best seats at Maple Leaf Gardens will be increased $1 each for National Hockey League games this season.

Harold Ballard, executive vice-presidnt of the Gardens, said the increase is "our response to rising costs."

Lacrosse Tonight

Victoria Junior Shamrocks will face Port Alberni in the last game of the Island Senior B Lacrosse League schedule tonight at Memorial Arena at 8:30.

Phil Failed to Sign; Two Share Golf Lead

CLEVELAND (AP) — Gay Brewer finished with three-under-par 68 Friday to tie Bob Goalby for the halfway lead in the $100,000 Cleveland Open golf tournament with a 36-hole score of 135.

It looked like a three-way tie for the lead when Phil Rogers also came in with a 68, but the La Jolla, Calif., golfer was disqualified for failing to sign his score card.

This marked the second time this season a tournament leader was disqualified for not signing his card. Doug Sanders was the victim after the second round in the Pensacola Open, where he held a four-stroke lead.

The 35-year-old Goalby, whose best finish this year was a tie for third in the New Orleans Open, shot a 67 Friday morning with the help of an eagle and assumed the early lead.

But Brewer, the tour's fourth leading money winner, rallied for a share of the lead. He and Goalby were seven under par for the 36 holes as the field of 144 pros seeking the $20,000 first prize continued its assault on par.

The front-runners withstood a brilliant 64 by veteran Julius Boros that set the course record over the Lakewood Country Club's par 36-35—71, 6,777-yard layout.

Boros' hot round, added to his opening 72, put him only one stroke off the pace and in a tie at 136 with Johnny Pott, who shot 70.

KINGSTON, Jamaica (CP)—Wayne Macdonnell, the wiry Vancouver department store executive who for several years has knocked on the door of world-class badminton ranks, was the sole Canadian survivor in the men's singles at the eighth British Empire Games.

Macdonnell, long Canada's top singles player, advanced into the singles quarter-finals Friday along with the favored Asians and a pair of leading players from the United Kingdom.

After an opening-round bye, Macdonnell defeated Yeo Ah Seng of Singapore to reach the third round.

Three other Canadians, Ed and Rolf Paterson of Vancouver and Yves Pare of Montreal were eliminated.

In the women's singles, top-seeded Sharan Whittaker of Toronto, runner-up in the United States and Canadian singles this year, Allison Daysmith, a promising young player from Victoria and Pat Espley of Montreal, all moved into the quarter-finals.

Judy Humber of Victoria was eliminated in the second round of the women's singles.

Play began Friday night in the preliminary rounds of the mixed doubles with Ed Paterson and Miss Daysmith and Rolf Paterson and Miss Whittaker gaining berths in the third round.

Not so fortunate were Macdonnell and Miss Humber and Pare and Miss Espley, as both Canadian tandems lost in the second round.

The current Games mark the first time badminton has been selected as an Empire Games event.

Mrs. Lovitt Wins Contest at Uplands

Mrs. G. Lovitt fired 83-10—73 to win a women's medal contest this week at Uplands Golf Club.

Victoria capitalized on errors to plate one run in the first inning but failed to score again off Strena.

Seattle was eliminated later Friday night. Today's final was between Tri-City and Hawaii.

ANNUAL SALMON CHASE . . . . . . ONLY TWO WEEKS AWAY

Don't Miss the Boat on Derby Day

Few fates are worse for a fisherman than being left on shore after planning for a day of chasing big salmon and derby prizes.

It will probably happen to an unfortunate few two weeks from Sunday when the annual Handicapped Children's Salmon Derby is staged at Saanich Inlet. Yet all it takes is a telephone call to one of the Inlet boathouses to ensure it doesn't happen to you.

All boathouse operators reported today they have ample numbers of boats still available for Vancouver Island's biggest and most famous one-day fishing derby on August 21, but they stress that reservations are being received steadily and potential derby entrants should act quickly in order to avoid disappointment.

No fishing event on the Island has met with better response from sportsmen over the years. While fishing for attractive prizes, anglers have also been giving a big assist to unfortunate youngsters.

All proceeds from the annual event — co-sponsored by the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association and The Daily Times — will be distributed between the Queen Alexandra Solarium, the Cerebral Palsy Association and the Handicapped Children's Clinic.

Since the event was launched in 1946 as the Solarium Derby, it has raised about $90,000 for handicapped children and developed into the Island's most popular fishing frolic.

Entry tickets cost $1 and all ticket purchasers will be eligible to win the "consolation" award of 14½-foot fibreglas boat equipped with a 35-horsepower outboard motor, trailer and water skis.

People who make the proper arrangements and get out on the water on derby day will also be competing for a flock of fishing prizes.

Tickets are available from members of the derby committee, city sporting goods stores and Saanich Inlet boathouses. The derby will start at dawn and finish at 2 p.m.

It's easy to obtain a ticket. And each ducat you buy means another boost toward a more normal life for some handicapped youngster.

But after you get an entry ticket, don't forget to make arrangements for a boat. It's no fun being left on the dock on derby day.

Susan Rallies To Gain Final

VANCOUVER (CP)—A bearded American who talks to himself while playing and a lithe English blonde are favored to win the men's and women's singles titles in today's finals of the Canadian lawn tennis championships.

Top foreign seed Allen Fox, 27, of Los Angeles, who tells himself to "concentrate" or "watch the ball" after missing shots is matched against Allen Stone, a 21-year-old Australian star and second - seeded foreigner.

The women's singles will pit Rita Bentley of Manchester, England, top foreign seed, against Susan Butt, the second foreign seed from Chicago who was born in Victoria.

Canada's hopes for a singles' crown were dashed Friday in semi-final play.

Bob Bedard of Sherbrooke, Que., fought a tremendous duel with Fox, but the 36-year-old Canadian was unable to match Fox's endurance in a match lasting three hours, 40 minutes.

Bedard watched his early two-set lead disappear in the 61-game marathon and lost 8-10, 7-9, 6-1, 7-5, 6-2.

Faye Urban of Windsor, Ont., top Canadian seed, appeared headed for a win in her match with Miss Butt as she won the first set of a best-of-three semi-final 6-4. However, Miss Butt rallied against the 21-year-old schoolteacher and sewed up the match with 6-4, 6-0 sets.

Miss Bentley, ranked fourth in England, took her first semi-final set 6-1 over Vicki Berner of Vancouver, dropped the next 3-6 but came on again for a 6-4 win in the deciding set.

The top two men's doubles teams were eliminated in semi-final upsets.

Bob Potthast of Los Angeles, beaten 6-4, 8-6, 6-4 in semi-final play with Stone, teamed with the Australian to upset the favored doubles team of Bedard and Don Fontana of Toronto 6-3, 6-1.

BROTHERS WIN

Mike and Keith Carpenter, brothers from Montreal, defeated second - seeded Fox and John Sharpe of Toronto.

Miss Berner and Miss Urban, favored doubles team, easily won 6-0, 6-1 over unranked Louise Brown of Toronto and Hedy Jackson of Portland, Ore.

In the other semi - final, Miss Bentley and Jean Wilson, also of Manchester, defeated Miss Butt and Brenda Nunns of Toronto 6-1, 6-3.

Surprise Tumble Ruins Nancy's Slalom Hopes

PORTILLO, Chile (CP-AP)—Nancy Greene, whose chances of bringing the women's world slalom ski championship to Canada this year were ruined Friday, says she doesn't know what made her fall.

"One minute I was skiing, and the next minute I was down in the snow," said the pretty 23-year-old from Rossland, B.C.

The tumble came in her second run when she was well on the way to the championship after a first run in 45.54 seconds. It was one of the few falls involving top-rated skiers. Miss Greene is ranked first in world slalom and giant slalom for women.

She had been given the best chance of beating the highly-rated French women and even with the fall she recovered and managed a 47.72, good for fifth place in the over-all standings.

The championship went to Frances Annie Famose of France who flashed through the 52 gates in combined time of 90.48.

Both winners and losers questioned the design of the women's slalom, saying it was more like a giant slalom course.

In the draw for today's downhill, Canadians went in this order: Scott Henderson of Banff, 26th; his brother Wayne Henderson, 33rd; Keith Shepherd of Waskesiu, Sask., 39th; Bob Swann of Winnipeg, 40th; and Peter Duncan of Mont Tremblant, Que., 45th.

The True Story of the Carpenters' Dispute

Carpenters' stories appearing in the press have created confusion and a wrong impression as to the situation which exists. Specifically, no Contractors represented by the Joint Committee have settled with the Union. All of these Contractors who are legally permitted to lock out are in the process of doing so.

The main issues are:

1. The Contractors are firmly convinced they should be consistent in their relations with all Unions—therefore the shorter work day demanded by the Carpenters cannot be granted.
2. The wage increase which was put into effect by the Contractors on June 1st will bring a carpenter's daily wage to just under $35.00. The actual cost to the Contractor is still higher, since Workmen's Compensation Assessments, U.I.C. allowance, and Canada Pension Plan assessments have to be added to this figure.
3. This proposed agreement of June 1st does not take away one single legitimate prerogative of the Union which has been in our collective agreements for years past. The disagreement is over such clauses as the hiring hall, the sub-contractor clause, and the attempt to take away the right of management to manage its operations efficiently.

Press reports emanating from the Union would indicate that the demands of the Union are very moderate. No mention is made of the demands for increased holiday pay, increased welfare payments, and the demand for the same pay (on an increased level), for shorter hours.

The plain facts are that the last settlement with the Carpenters raised costs by more than 20%. Two years later in the spring of 1966, the Carpenters' demands added up to a cost increase of almost 30%. Surely all Carpenters realize the effect of this on the cost of houses and schools, and the possible damage to the economy generally.

The Contractors would be irresponsible if they did not resist demands such as these, and we call on the Carpenters' bargaining committee to be realistic and return to the negotiating table.

HOME GARDEN

Easier to See Those Weeds

By JACK BEASTALL

Jack

The July sown vegetable garden that is to supply our fresh young vegetables through the fall and our greens for the winter, is now in its third week and making good progress.

The first things to come up were weeds, followed closely by the radishes, but very little weeding could be done along the vegetable rows because both weed and vegetable seedling look much alike in the early stages.

After the second week, the vegetables are more easily distinguished and weed removal has to be attended to promptly.

When using the hoe between the rows it often pays to set up two garden lines (of lengths of string) to mark the location of the vegetable seedlings and the width of the space between. Hoeing can then proceed rapidly without fear of cutting off the wrong plants.

PRESS SOIL

The actual rows themselves must be weeded by hand, and as each weed is removed, it pays to press the soil back close around the seedlings. This tight contact is important to the well-being of the small plants and helps them to become quickly established.

Radishes, at least, are ready for thinning out. It is not necessary to thin to one single line at this stage. All that is needed is to remove a few seedlings from those that have come up in a bunch, so the rest have more room to develop.

A few more can be removed next week, and possibly some of these may be large enough for eating.

It may be another week before the rest of the seedlings need attention. Since so many of these other vegetables can be used and enjoyed when quite small, it pays to do the thining progressively so that little is wasted.

SIX INCHES

First, give the seedlings a half-inch spacing, and when they touch remove the one in between to leave a one-inch spacing. Continue in this way, using the thinnings whenever possible, until the plants are finally four or six inches apart according to their type.

As the seedlings reach their third week and have the true leaves formed, they can be given a little encouragement by liquid feeding.

For this purpose we need a fertilizer that will be picked up by the roots and by the leaves, and at the same time supply a little of each of the essential plant foods — nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potassium.

We find these three elements in very low concentrations in liquid whale and alginure and these are possible safest for the amateur who has not yet acquired a working knowledge of fertilizers. Advanced gardeners will have their own feeding schedule which has proved satisfactory in the past and that should be used now.

FOLIAGE, ROOTS

The convenient feature of liquid whale and alginure is that neither will burn the foliage of the seedlings. Both can be poured over the leaves and the surrounding soil, and the plants will take it in through the foliage and the roots.

The amount of concentrate to use is not critical, and some guidance will be found on the labels.

At this stage it is better to feed little and often rather than a strong feeding that may be too much for such small plants.

A good mix is one or two teaspoonsful of liquid whale or alginure to one gallon of water, applied from a watering can while you walk slowly along the row. Of course, the rows should be well watered in advance so that the liquid food will sink to the root level where it is needed.

SATISFACTORY

To obtain the greatest success it is necessary to experiment, using different strengths of solutions to portions of each row and carefully comparing the results.

When this is done you find out first hand what is best suited to your soil and your conditions. But if you are not the experimenting type, the suggested dilution should be satisfactory.

For the next week or so, the main work will be weeding, thinning progressively, watering, and then cultivation as soon as the surface soil can be worked.

And there is a possibility of having a few radishes and some tiny lettuce leaves for a salad during that time as an incentive to keep up the good work.

WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL

First thought can be for planting the little corms of fall crocuses to bloom in September and October and the large bulbs of colchicums which put out first flowers later this month.

Check all plants of grafted roses and remove sucker growths coming from below soil level or below graft point.

Chrysanthemum plants may need a final tie and some of the taller perennial asters (Michaelmas-daisies).

If rockery plants were neglected after their spring period of bloom, it may be possible to re-condition them even now by shearing back, watering well and then mulching over root area with screened mixture of compost with a little sand. Try this with aubrieta, alyssum, arabis, phlox and dianthus.

As last of raspberries are picked, cut back the canes which bore fruit, allowing the new ones to take their place.

Sow lettuce and flowers of spring cabbage in slightly shaded spot to grow for transplanting and parsely seed thinly where it is to grow for winter and next spring.

Underground Wires

NEW YORK (UPI) — Underground wiring can now be obtained for the most inexpensive new home at comparatively nominal cost, say construction specialists at Allied Chemical's Barrett Division.

By using plastic conduits, telephone and electric cables can be buried for as little as $100 a house in some areas.

CAREFUL PLANNING helps housewife achieve best use of available space for storing china in cupboard. Slanted board is 18 inches high and has edges to prevent slips. Board is 26 inches wide, allowing for three rows of cups.

Slanted For Storage

By PAULINE GRAVES

Stacking chinaware in such a way that each item is within easy reach is a hope of every homemaker and all too seldom achieved.

Miscellaneous groupings, with small plates on large and cups topping all, seems to be the rule. Unhappily, not only is this inconvenient, but it leads to breakage through extra and unnecessary handling of the ware.

Shown here is an idea that keeps every cup separate from his fellow. The cups are lines up on a slanted rack that slopes from the back wall to the front of the cupboard. Strips of one-half inch molding hold the cups in place. The bottom strip is one and one-half inches up and back from the front edge, insuring that the door will not hit the cups when it is closed. As a safety measure, a strip along the side edge prevents the cups from being pushed off accidentally.

It is better to have more shelves and less stacking, than few shelves placed far apart.

Room Dividers May Help Solve That Need to Alter Layouts

CHICAGO (NFS) — If hunting for a house or apartment has you frazzled because you can't find one with a good room layout, don't be discouraged. Room dividers may solve the problem perfectly.

Walls can be "shortened" or "lengthened," jutting columns concealed, and windows beautified by new see-through dividers that you can put up with just a screwdriver.

"Dividers in effect let you create your own layout," said interior designer Mary Ann Wills, who advises Galway, inc., Chicago, manufacturer of decorative space dividers.

INVESTMENT

Ideal for those who move often and, therefore, must rent living quarters, this type of easy-to-assemble "wall" is a practical long-range investment.

Screw-on panels are supported by floor-to-ceiling tension poles in a choice of traditional or modern designs and in several finishes. Extensions are available to cope with high ceilings.

"And when it's time to move in another year or so, your 'wall' goes right along, without leaving any holes for landlords to complain about," Miss Wills added.

She mentioned numerous ways in which decorative dividers can aid in solving furniture arrangement problems and saving money, too.

For example, suppose you have a long sofa and a short wall due to a badly placed dining "L." With a single divider section, you can lengthen the wall and, at the same time, give the dining area a feeling of greater privacy.

If you run into an arrangement of windows that defies the use of standard draperies, as is the case in some older buildings, consider using decorative dividers instead to create a dramatic effect.

Galway screw-on panels, which are detailed reproductions of hand-carved original designs, may be found in a variety of styles.

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

By JACK BEASTALL

Q. Can you tell me why sweet peas have failed this year, is it the cool summer? T.D., Victoria.

A. While some gardeners report failure with sweet peas this year, I have seen some of the best plants and finest blooms this year, for sweet peas do best in cooler weather.

They have all be growing in either north-facing borders or east-facing, which makes me think too that the roots were not drying out like those in sunnier places. They have needed soaking at the roots at least once weekly, for the average soils are very dry this summer, as is usual every year.

Will Mrs. H.K.C., Oak Bay, please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope since her letter contains too many questions to be answered in this column.

Learn to Run For Fun, Health Sunday on Ch. 2

Distance running as a hobby for the physically fit and as a means to health for the unfit, particularly those with bad hearts, will be the subject of a 20/20 program, Diary of a Run For Life, Sunday, at 5:30 p.m., on Channel 2.

Regular, proper exercise will not necessarily ward off a heart attack in the over-30 age group, but it will, according to one Toronto heart specialist, reduce the incidence and help cushion the blow if it comes.

Dr. E. Maurice Heller, senior consultant in charge of cardiology at Northwestern General Hospital and attending cardiologist at New Mount Sinai Hospital, Toronto, will comment on running as a form of therapy for coronary thrombosis sufferers and as a preventative measure for those who may be vulnerable to an attack.

The 20-20 documentary looks at the sport from the point of view of those who run to increase the odds against having a heart attack, those who do so as a form of therapy following one, and those who do so simply because they like it.

Included in the program are scenes of cardiac patients running, walking and jogging at the YMHA, highlights of the 1966 10-mile Veterans Race at Northview Heights Collegiate, and a visit to the Metropolitan Toronto Physical Fitness Club.

Challenge

The Challenge panel will discuss "New Morality or Immorality" Sunday, at 6 p.m., over Channel 4.

In the light of this past fall's rush to entertainment spots which featured topless go-go girls, the panel probes the deeper meanings of this trend. Up for examination will be the apparent changing of moral standards, and a move to more "liberal" allowances.

This change, which has been labeled as the "new morality," is reported alarming to the traditionists, who believe the standards for moral and immoral behavior do not change.

12 for Summer

CBC-TV's 12 for Summer, a Saturday series presenting many top Canadian performers on Channels 2 and 6, has an outstandingly varied lineup of shows through the month of August.

Tonight at 7, A Summer Place is a musical evocation of a quiet, lazy summer day in the country, featuring Tommy Common, former star of CBC-TV's Country Hoedown and one of Canada's best-known popular singers; Patti Van Evera, lead soprano of the Billy Van Four, the Art Hallman Singers and other vocal groups; and Robina Beard, a promising young revue performer.

Sports Spectacular

The world ski-flying championships at Planica, Yugoslavia; the professional indoor diving championships at Grossinger, N.Y., and highlights of the Chicago Bears' 1965 National Football League season are featured on "CBS Sports Spectacular" Sunday at 2:30 p.m. on Channel 12.

The world's greatest ski jumpers compete in the dangerous ski-flying competition. Jumps of over 400 feet (twice the distance of normal jumps) are common in this sport, because of the size of the hill and unusual air currents. The jumpers are scored on distance alone.

Six of the world's top pro divers perform three optional and three required dives on both the three-metre and five-metre boards at the indoor diving meet. The contestants are Joe Gerlach, Eddie Cole, Ronnie Mumm, Al Coffey, John Candler and Joaquin Capilla.

Continental Show

A European musical version of the Roaring '20s in America and a Continental interpretation of tunes from the Broadway musical "Bells Are Ringing" will be featured on "Continental Showcase" tonight at 7:30 on Channels 7 and 12.

Host of the European-produced series, Jim Backus, takes viewers to a simulated wax museum, where the figures of Germany's Heidi Bruehl, and the Kessler Twins, Switzerland's Hazy Osterwald Sextet, and choreographer William Milie and a dance chorus swing into action in a slam-bang Roaring '20s medley.

Returning to the "Continental Showcase" spotlight are Esther and Abi Ofarim, husband-and-wife Israeli folk singers, who present "Cotton Fields" and "Go Tell It on the Mountain."

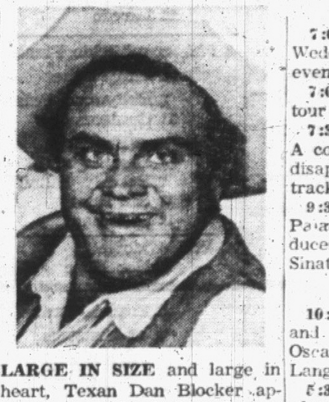
Look Up and Live

"An Evening with the Free Southern Theatre," presenting poetry, prose and music performed by the integrated group which appears in racially tense Southern towns, will be broadcast on "Look Up and Live" Sunday at 10:30 a.m. on Channel 7.

The presentation is the fourth in the six-part "Games of God" series examining church use of the theatre.

Songs featured on the broadcast include "Brown Baby" by Oscar Brown Jr. and two spirituals, "Rocking My Soul" and "I Heard Me a Sermonette."

Among the poetry and prose are several works by Thomas C. Dent, director of the theatre, and others by Susan Brown, Oscar Brown Jr., Langston Hughes, Charles L. Anderson, Roscoe Orman, David Henderson and Redd Fox.



LARGE IN SIZE and large in heart, Texan Dan Blocker appears every Sunday at 9 p.m. as Hoss Cartwright in the popular Bonanza series on the Channels 2, 5 and 6.

Ed Sullivan

Judy Garland, Peter Sellers, Jackie Vernon, Tom Jones, the Italian Mouse and the Marquis Chimps headline "The Ed Sullivan Show" in color Sunday at 8 p.m. on Channels 2, 6, 7 and 12.

The Swinging Lads, Leyte Filipiniana Dancers, Tony Hendra, Nick Ullett and the Swingle Singers also are guests.

The Swingle Singers, presenting classical music with a swing beat, and the team of Hendra and Ullett in a comedy routine are new segments of the show the other acts are rebroadcasts.

BEN ALEXANDER

Friday's Pal Drags Feet Back to TV

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Remember Ben Alexander, the fat cop who backed up Jack Webb in the old Dragnet series? Well, he's coming back to television in the fall still playing a fat cop.

As officer Frank Smith, Alexander was a side-kick detective to sergeant Friday.

This time around, he'll be a sergeant himself, sitting behind a desk in "The Felony Squad" for ABC-TV, co-starring with Howard Duff and newcomer Dennis Cole.

Curiously, Alexander hasn't worked as an actor since "Dragnet" folded almost 10 years ago. But a glimpse at his rotund physique unmistakably indicates he hasn't been starving to death.

He is the owner of two automobile agencies in southern California and four mortuaries in the San Francisco area.

"I haven't worked at acting because I just didn't have the time and I wasn't particularly interested in it," Alexander said during a lunch break on the new series.

IS BUSINESS MAN

"I was perfectly happy to walk away from acting because I am essentially a business man."

Alexander returned to show biz by the back door. He was called in as a consultant on the new series because of his background with the Los Angeles police department when he was working in "Dragnet."

"I worked in a technical capacity for weeks while they rearranged the format of the show," he explained. "Originally it was going to be a "Peyton Place" with cops, drunken wives, romantic affairs and all that kind of stuff.

"But they changed the entire idea and I ended up as the old cop in the station with my son (Dennis Cole) being trained by Duff as a member of the felony squad.

"So now I'm drawing two salaries — as an actor and as a technical consultant."

WHAT ABOUT BUSINESS

But what about his business enterprises, selling cars to people who help provide customers for his mortuaries?

"It's not a package deal," Alexander laughed.

"But I only work two out of the four shooting days and I have the weekends free to tend to my businesses. There is also a great deal of night shooting which leaves my working hours open."

According to Alexander, the show will bear no resemblance to "Dragnet." There will be more action, with each episode opening with a crime being committed.

Ben helped design the uniforms and badges for the series and some 15 guns are being used for props. Additionally he acts as liaison with the police department, hiring officers from time to time to add authenticity to the stories.

The show, however, is not set in Los Angeles.

"It could by anyplace," Alexander grinned, "even Gotham City. But, thankfully, our police department doesn't have to put up with batman."

Bit Parts: Phyllis Diller will substitute for Lucille Ball on Milton Berle's opening segment of his new show next fall due to a conflict in Lucy's schedule . . . Scott Brady will play the heavy in "Fort Utah" at Paramount

French Hit on English TV

Original Drama Seen With Sub-Titles In Network First

For the first time on the CBC-TV English network, a French language production will be seen in its original form but with sub-titles added. The production of Hymenee (The Marriage), a minor comic masterpiece by Gogol, will be telecast Wednesday, at 9:30 p.m., on Channels 2 and 6.

It is the second of two French drama productions to be presented on the English network this summer. The first was L'Indiscret, seen July 20. That production had English dubbed onto the sound track.

Gogol was a successful novelist and short-story writer when he turned to the stage. He believed that in writing for the theatre he could establish a contact between author and audience which he felt lacking in his books.

His first play was highly controversial. The Inspector General was received in 1836 by public uproar, a great deal of critical acclaim and condemnation — based mostly on political opinion.

After this apparent debacle Gogol left Russia, and it was while he was abroad that he tried again, this time producing the comedy Hymenee.

Hippodrome

Trini Lopez, internationally acclaimed singer-guitarist; the Dave Clark Five, British instrumental and vocal group, and American tenor Enzo Stuarti headline the Tuesday edition of "Hippodrome," comedy-variety-circus series in color to be seen at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 7.

Lopez is host.

Chrysler Theatre

"After the Lion, Jackals" — a drama about the disastrous marriage of a world-famous author to his ambitious secretary with its tragic legacy — will be colorcast on "Bob Hope Presents the Chrysler Theatre" Wednesday, at 8:30 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

Adrian Conover finds the glamor of the international set surrounding her former employer, writer C. C. Conover wears thin when her marriage to the cynical author proves without warmth or love. Driven into an affair with Mario an attractive Sicilian from the village near their villa, Adrian is bewildered by the continuing cruelty of the man she has wed. Her own shallow designs, clearly recognized by Conover, are utilized in bizarre scheme of revenge against the girl.

London Palladium

Roger Moore, star of the British-made TV series, "The Saint," will be host on the sixth and last of the "London Palladium Show" colorcasts Friday at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 5.

The program will mark the return to the series of Morecambe and Wise. As perhaps Britain's favorite comedy team, they have through the years amassed some 400 different comedy routines with which they have regaled British audiences. From these they have culled for the program several of their favorite skits, including one known as "Julius Caesar." For their hilarious bit known simply as "Boom, Boom, Rat-a-Tat-Tat" they will team up with both Roger Moore and Millicent Martin for the show's finale.

Miss Martin, the exuberant singer and dancer who will have appeared on all six Palladium TV shows this summer, will this time be seen in a "Limehouse Blues" production number with the Paddy Stone Dancers.

Exploration

"Exploration Northwest" visits one of the largest sheep ranches in eastern Washington at shearing time, in "Sheep Ranch" Monday at 7 p.m. over Channel 4.

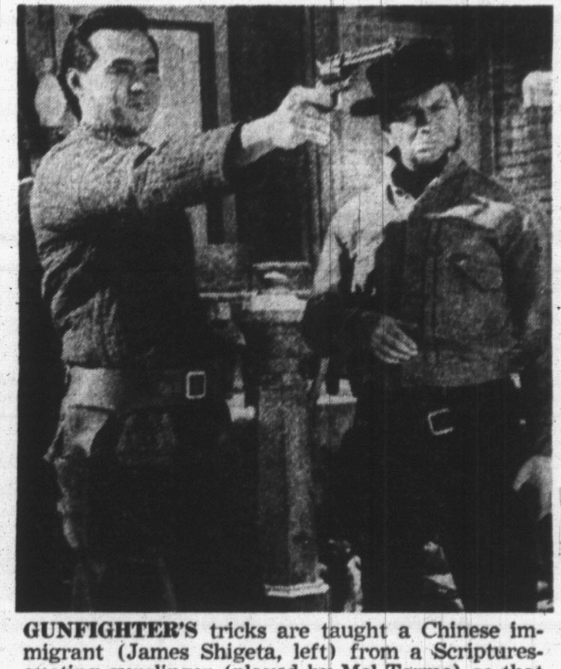
The cameras travel to the ranch country around Yakima, Washington, heading up into the Indian reservation which stretches between White Pass and Mount Adams, where Basque sheepherders roam with their flocks over hundreds of thousands of acres of grassland.

Viewers visit the George Hislop sheep ranch, founded by a Scottish professor who came to the University at Pullman from the University of Edinburgh to teach animal science, and who built one of the largest sheep operations in the state.

Narrator McCune tells the story of the Basque sheepherders who come to this country on a three-year visa and save their money to take back home with them. They come from the border country, high in the Pyrenees Mountains between Spain and France. They are neither French nor Spanish, in fact, their ancestry is clouded in mystery. Their language is their own, and only recently a Basque dictionary has been published.

N.W. Traveler

Seattle dentist and philanthropist, Dr. Vaughn V. Chapman, presents his colorful film of an extensive visit to Ecuador in "Assignment Ecuador" on "Northwest Traveller" Wednesday at 7 p.m. over Channel 4 in color.



GUNFIGHTER'S tricks are taught a Chinese immigrant (James Shigeta, left) from a Scriptures-quoting gunslinger (played by Mel Torme) so that he can fight for the girl he loves, in "Walk Like a Dragon" on "Tuesday Night at the Movies" Tuesday at 9 p.m. on Channel 5.

Dr. Chapman is the founder, organizer and director of an unusual international group, Missionary Dentists, Inc. This group goes to foreign countries to give free dental care to the natives and jungle dwellers and to preach the Christian gospel.

An expert motion picture photographer, Dr. Chapman's journey to Ecuador includes stops at:

Cuenca—Third largest city in the country, where fair day is being observed by various Indian tribes, each recognized by its own hat.

Macuma—Located deep in the jungle, where it rains between 200 and 300 inches a year.

Guayaquil—ecuador's largest metropolitan centre with a population of 400,000.

Playas—Resort town.

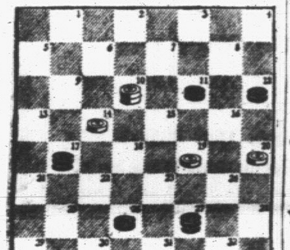
CHIP-DOWN CHECKER TEST



Despite diminished forces, White's in command here and is about to spring a trap. White side, moving upboard, to move first and win in four moves is the test. Can you meet the challenge?

Solution: White 19—15, Black 11—18, White 20—16, Black 12—19, White 10—15, Black 17—10, White 15—22—31—24—15—6.

THERE'S A KICK TO THIS

When you feel so satisfied that you have nothing to kick about just try this stunt.

Draw an L-shaped line on the floor, put your right heel inside the angle and take three steps forward, always placing one foot directly in front of the other with the heels and toes in contact. Next put an empty matchbox at the end of the foremost foot, the left, then bring your right foot back to its original position in the angle.

Now try to kick over the matchbox with your left foot without touching the floor, and bring it back beside the right.

CRAZY MIXED UP VEGETABLE

While making up a restaurant menu, the printer accidentally mixed up one word so that read: COCASTHUS. What was the dish? P.S. Think vegetable.

Answer: The dish is succotash.

WHAT'S WITH THIS BUNCH?

'Tis believed that winners can only gain as much as losers lose. But read this:

Four young men sat down to play,
And played all night till break of day;
They played for bread and not for fun,
With separate scores for every one,
Yet when they came to square accounts,
They all had made quite fair amounts!
Can you this paradox explain?
If no one lost, how could all gain?

Solution: The young men were musicians who played all night for a monetary fee.

BID TO THROW WEIGHT AROUND

In the course of an intercollegiate track meet, the hammer, discus, javelin and 16-pound shotput are thrown, or hurled, as the case may be.

Can you point out the relative order of distances involved? That is to say, which will travel farthest, next farthest, etc.? It is to be assumed that normal throwing distances are attained.

Answer: Javelin farthest, hammer next, discus and shotput.

LADDER WORDS

You may not think a HOOK could change to BALE or vice versa, but it can be done by the method of changing one letter each step to leave a complete word. Order of the letters is not altered in the process.

HOOK
BALE

Try effecting the change in a minimum of five steps.

Solution: One way is Hook, hook, hack, back, balk, Bale.

STAMP CORNER

By REG. NAIRNE

New Zealand's annual Christmas stamp will be placed on sale Oct. 3, which seems early; but as surface mail from N.Z. takes some time to reach certain parts of the world no doubt senders of Christmas cards have to start well ahead of time.

This year's issue will be a minature reproduction of "The Virgin and Child" by Carlo Maratta, in natural colors, the value being 3d. Maratta was a distinguished and successful painter of the 17th century. He had many commissions from Pope Alexander VII, and was the foremost portrait painter of the period.

Western Samoa will shortly issue a stamp for charitable purposes. A devasting hurricane struck the islands at the end of January, wiping out most of the crops on which the natives depended for a living. So the current 8d value is to surcharged with an extra 6d which will go towards a relief fund.

Samoa also recently issued a special set to mark the opening of the World Health Organization building in Switzerland, values being 3d, 4d, 6d and 1sh.

Similar stamps to publicize this occasion will be issued by Britain's 22 Crown Colonies and Territories. Each set will consist of two stamps, average face value being about 30c.

Two exceptions will be British Solomon Is. and Tristan da Cunha, which both include 5sh values.

●

On Aug. 27, Gibraltan will release a 4d, 7d and 1sh to coincide with the opening of the European Sea Angling Championships which will be held in the surrounding waters at this time.

●

The sale of lightly postmarked stamps of Christmas Island, Naura, and Norfolk Is. has been introduced by the Philatelic Sales Section at Melbourne. They are available singly, or in blocks or sheets.

This news may give rise to mixed feelings among some philatelists who specialize in used specimens from the remoter territories, for genuinely postmarked stamps are very difficult to find. When "cancelled-to-order" material is now obtainable wholesale, the incentive to collect them will be gone.

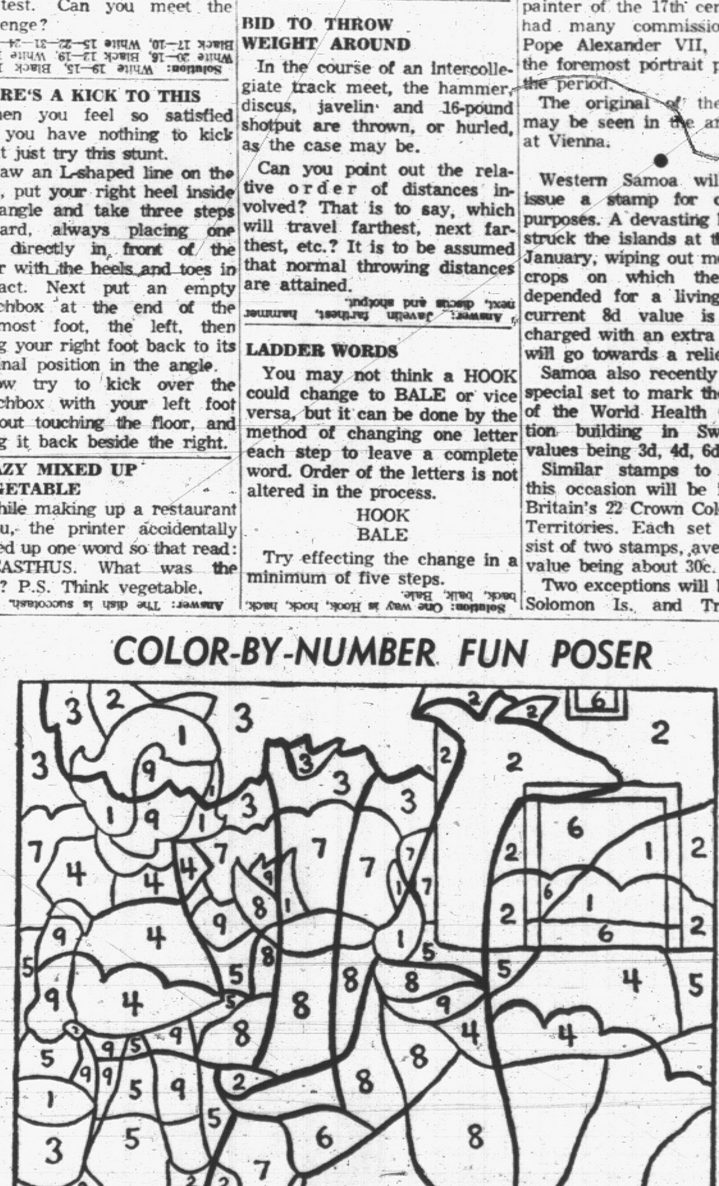
COLOR-BY-NUMBER FUN POSER



What animal do you see in the Color-by-Number Fun diagram above? Why, a giraffe, of course. But would you stick your neck out and say that this friendly fellow will remain in sight when missing colors are added to the scene? That could be the case, you know—but don't bet on it! To find out for certain what the hiddden picture will show, simply apply colored pencils or crayons thusly: 1, Yellow. 2, Red. 3, Blue. 4, Orange. 5, Green, 6, Purple. 7, Black, 8. Brown. 9, Pink. If pink is not handy, use your red crayon lightly instead.

INTOLERABLE SITUATION was claimed by a 30-man delegation from the Harmac, Nanaimo local of the Pulp and Paperworkers of Canada spending day off at provincial labor department demanding decertification of rival union. The men claimed the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers local 695 represents workers in MacMillan-Bloedel plant in Harmac despite support from only 2 per cent of the plant's 1,050 men. The LRB Wednesday rejected the Canadian union's certification bid "on a technicality." Charging the LRB with "stalling" and "rigging hearings in advance" the angry men promised the men were prepared to come out indefinitely until the Canadian union is certified. The labor minister was out and the deputy minister was unable to help them.

Tennis Playoffs Set for Tuesday

DUNCAN — South Cowichan Lawn Tennis Club is preparing for the 79th annual tournament to be played on the grass courts Aug. 9 to 13.

Local accommodation will be at a premium as tennis players and their families gather for the annual event on the courts at Corfield's Corner.

At stake will be the Vancouver Island championships, men's and ladies' singles and doubles and the mixed title.

The Pacific Northwest Sectional Championship will also be at stake.

Since 1949 South Cowichan, a member club of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association and the U.S. LTA, has been sanctioned to stage the event, drawing players from member clubs all over the northwest.

This becomes a tournament within a tournament and always produces some top tennis matches.

Gilbey's discover amazingly tall mixed gin drinks in Kenya

Gilbey's London Dry is used to make giraffe-size mixed gin drinks in Kenya.

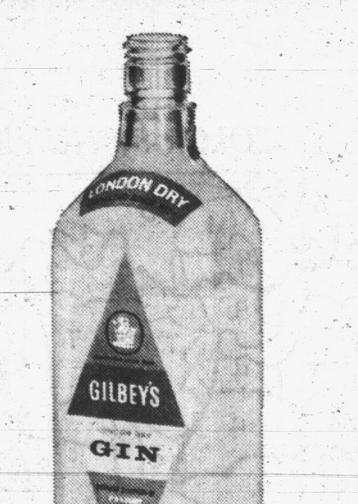
IN KENYA the sun scorches all year round. So wise Kenyans mix amazingly tall mixed gin drinks with Gilbey's London Dry. They choose this gin because its perfect balance gives a fresh, clean tasting drink. And perfect balance is what you need when you're sipping a Gilbey's Treetop Special perched atop a giant fig tree.

Gilbey's Treetop Special

In the Kenyan jungle near a waterhole there is a miniature hotel perched atop a giant fig tree. Guests are able to sip a Gilbey's Treetop Special while observing wild game drinking at the waterhole. The drink is a mixture of orange, lime and lemon juices along with Gilbey's London Dry Gin, sugar and soda water.

Khotso's Spell

Another long and very tall Kenyan cooler is named after an African witchdoctor. The reasons for this are somewhat obscure since the witchdoctor, Khotso Sethunza lives in Pondoland. But he is a millionaire which may have helped his case somewhat. The drink is a simple mixture of fresh orange juice and Gilbey's London Dry topped up with ginger ale.



You can rely on Gilbey's London Dry, a perfectly balanced gin that gives you a fresh, clean tasting drink. This gin is an international favourite, sold in 92 countries. It's been made by the Gilbey family for 109 years.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, AUGUST 6, 1966—PAGE 21

Arthur Mayse

The other day we got up extra early for some worthy purpose, and as a result, by 10:30 p.m. we were trading yawns at a great rate.

"Well," I suggested, "why don't we got to bed and get a good night's sleep for a change?"

So we switched off the TV, which had been babbling busily to itself while we dozed in our chairs, and turned in at least an hour and a half ahead of our usual night-owl retiring time.

We took a snack with us, and read for no longer than 10 minutes. Then we doused our lights and settled down for that good night's sleep.

I was adrift in the free-floating stage that presages slumber when the phone rang. We waited to see who would crack first. At the third ring, my wife, who is endowed with a sturdy sense of responsibility, got up and went to answer.

I had just begun to float again when she returned.

"For you," she said, a trace too cheerfully.

So I rolled out, knocking a glass of not-quite-finished milk off my night table and stubbing a toe on a chair which seemed to have shifted a yard or so from its usual position.

★

The caller was loud and hearty. There was music in the background, and someone appeared to be knocking glasses of non-milk off tables.

Where, the cheerful fellow at the other end wanted to know, would he find an old Catholic mission area beneath a Union Jack and near something to carry rain away.

I told him, amiably as the circumstances permitted, that he had scrambled his clues, and that if I had the least idea where any treasure-hunt Centennial ducats were, I'd be off like a rocket to find them.

That took care of him, but while I was on the phone, our dog had risen from his rug by the kitchen door, and tiptoed past me.

Also, we had forgotten to put our tough black cat Cleo in the basement. She rubbed against my ankles, giving me amiable little bites.

I opened the basement door to shoo her down, and our fat striped cat, Ilya, bounced up the stairs, hollering for food.

Cats, at least our two, are deliberate eaters. By the time they were finished and I was heading back for that good night's sleep, it was almost 11:30.

In the hall, I met Win. She had ushered Lancer the dog from our room, and was carrying a wadded cloth.

"I mopped up the milk," she told me. "Now, maybe we'll have better luck this time."

★

Thoroughly wakened, we read until past midnight, then turned our lights out again.

I called into play a sleep-inducer which, for me, is worth any amount of sheep-counting. There is this trout stream, a compendium of all fair waterbrooks I have ever fished. What I do is loaf along it, testing each likely pool and run.

I was well around the bend and coaxing a nice rainbow, when a car not of the newest announced itself on the drive. Our daughter Sue unlocked the front door and came in.

Our young are uninhibited door-slammers. That thunderclap sent my trout darting for cover.

Ron came home and slammed a couple of doors.

The dog quitted the kitchen by the door Ron had forgotten to slam, settled himself on a bedside rug, and promptly began to chase a dream-racoon with eager little yips and whimperings.

Win said plaintively, "I'm hungry."

What with all the action, I was too. We got up and fixed coffee and another snack, which we ate in living room armchairs with the curtains open to the waning moonlight.

It was very peaceful. We talked for a while, and watched the lights of a distant ship move along the San Juan Island shore. Finally, with the first daylight creeping into the east, we slipped away for our good night's sleep.

VOLUNTEERS DESPERATELY NEEDED

Her Cries May Be a Cure

By CANDIDE TEMPLE

A determined, young Victoria mother is pleading for volunteers who will help teach her child to walk.

Mrs. Janet Metcalfe requires two helpers, six times a day.

They must have the love, courage and stamina to exercise the tiny limbs of 18-month-old Caitlin even though she stiffens, tenses and protests.

They'll be fighting in the front line against cerebral palsy. The battlefield is at 636 Simcoe, Caitlin's home, 385-0143.

Caitlin has a smile bright as a sunrise, and huge hazel eyes that are searching for friends.

Like most babies her age, she likes bright colors, people she knows, and her pet kitten Tigger.

But her brain damage can never be completely repaired. The best Caitlin can hope for is eventually to gain control over her muscles, so that one day she may be able to walk, draw pictures, comb her hair.

And through a revolutionary new type of therapy Caitlin could win her chance for a normal life far quicker than many other children in her plight.

Six times a day, or as often as she has helpers, Caitlin's mother, 22-year-old Janet Metcalfe places her face down on the kitchen table.

Then with two people holding a small arm and leg on each side and one holding her head, Caitlin is put through her exercise, a sort of artificial crawling.

Five Minutes

The exercise goes on for five minutes. It's not easy — her little limbs stiffen, and tense, it requires three people, and it should be carried out with regularity, six times daily.

"It's simple really — we just try and get her crawling," said Mrs. Metcalfe, holding Caitlin in her arms after a "patterning" session.

"I do various other exercises with her every hour to strengthen this patterning. And since her right side is more damaged than her left, we make her use her right more."

Her chief worry is getting two other people to come to her James Bay home to form the threesome that makes patterning possible.

Limited Help

Her request has gone mostly by word of mouth and been answered by friends of friends, "but I even had a note up in our butcher's window," she smiled.

The response to her pleas so far has been "really gratifying," but she still has only limited help.

"I would never expect someone to come to help every day, but if they could just drop in for five minutes a week . . .

"If I could get a lot of people interested, like a church group, maybe — that would be fine," and her face showed hope.

"You don't have to be a trained therapist — that's the beauty of it."

If a five-minute session, or more than one, is missed in the daytime for lack of helpers, "we make up at night" — with Caitlin's father and grandmother filling in.

"But it's not the answer because at night she's too spastic, too tired. She stiffens and screams."

Janet and Eric Metcalfe have conducted a ceaseless search for a way to help their daughter, which ended with the patterning process, part of what is known as the Philadelphia method, which they first learned of from articles in national magazines.

Seminar

Since then Mrs. Metcalfe has attended a seminar on the Philadelphia method and written to Calgary, where between 50 and 60 children are on the patterning program, and to Vancouver and Seattle, where clinics are starting up.

"She may not progress at all," they say firmly, although already they think Caitlin is more limber from her patterning.

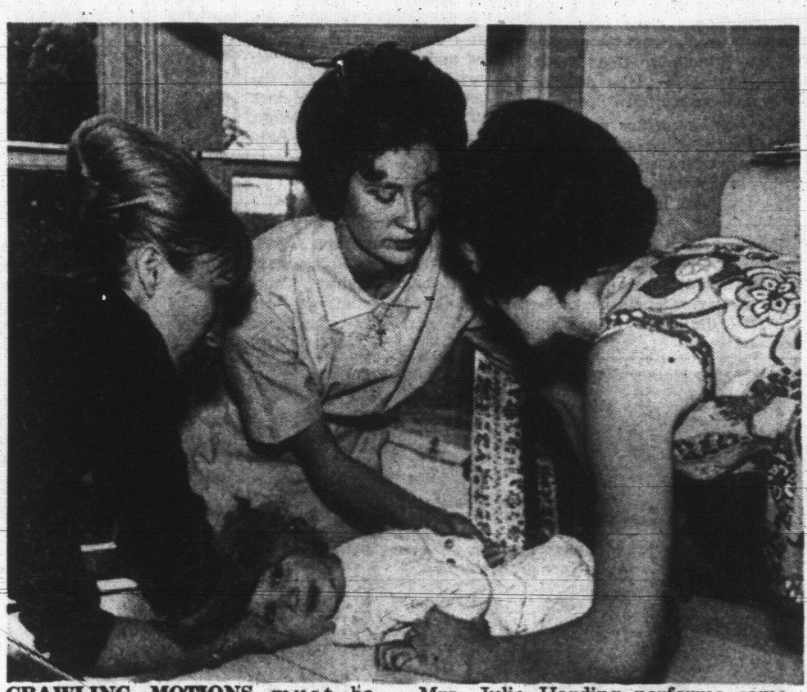
"She may be in the small percentage that don't benefit at all from it."

But you look on the positive side — you have to, when you're the parent of a child like Caitlin.

Even if it means asking strangers to help, you do it.

Any volunteer won't be long a stranger, anyway.

SOLEMN EXPRESSION covers face of young Caitlin Metcalfe, held in her mother's arms after strenuous five-minute exercise session. Helpers are needed to give Caitlin the ability to walk.



CRAWLING MOTIONS must be coaxed in 18-month-old Caitlin six times a day. Caitlin's mother (right) moves one arm, leg, while helper Mrs. Julie Harding performs same duty and Mrs. Sylvia Lapointe holds Caitlin's head. (Times photos by Bill Halkett)

Fines Hike Opposed

A Victoria businessman has launched a single-handed battle against a City Hall proposal to jump parking meter fines.

Harry E. Adams, advertising manager for a local grocery chain is taking a petition of protest.

He plans to present it at the next Victoria council meeting.

News that consideration is being given to boosting the usual $1 fine for over-staying a meter to $2, emanated from City Hall earlier this week. It goes to council Thursday.

It was pointed out by city manager Dennis A. Young that this would add $50,000 annually to the city treasury.

35 SIGNATURES

Mr. Adams said he got 35 signatures on his petition in a matter of hours. He hopes to obtain several hundred before submitting it.

His petition says the proposed increase is "unnecessary and uncalled for at this time or any other time, for that matter."

It adds, "We do not think Victoria is setting a good example in the fight to curb rising prices."

CONTROL PARKING

Mr. Adams says the original intention of parking meters was to control parking, not to raise revenue.

"It's not too long since the cost of parking was increased from five cents an hour to five cents for 30 minutes.

"Most parking meter violations are not because someone is trying to save five or 10 cents, but because they've been detained by an unexpected business appointment, or at a dentist's or a doctor's office," said Mr. Adams.

He said he isn't collecting his signatures because he is a constant violator but because of a sense of civic outrage.

He said he personally receives a parking ticket "only a couple of times a year."

Thieves Take $36

Thieves entered an apartment at 1301 Fort through a kitchen window Friday night and stole $36.

Mrs. Douglas McNeill told police the money was taken from a purse in her bedroom.

Expanding Viet War Forecast by Expert

An expert on Far Eastern Affairs sounded pessimistic this morning when he spoke in Victoria of the possibility of ending the war in Viet Nam.

Professor W. E. Willmott, of the University of British Columbia, said there is every likelihood the conflict will escalate and expand.

Prof. Willmott gave the opening address at a conference on Canadian responsibility in Viet Nam. The conference, held in St. John's Anglican Church parish hall, was attended by more than 200 persons.

Prof. Willmott, an associate professor of anthropology and a lecturer in Asian studies, said the war seems to be one that neither side can win.

He recalled that the last war in what was then Indo-China ended when the French were catastrophically defeated at Dienbienphu. Prof. Willmott said there is no possibility of any one battle deciding the present conflict.

POLITICAL DEFEAT

At the same time the American forces will not be able to defeat their Viet Cong opponents. Prof. Willmott said nationalism is the main inspiration of the Viet Cong and every U.S. victory therefore becomes a political defeat because it wins new support for the Viet Cong.

Prof. Willmott said the identification of the nationalist movement with the communist-led Viet Cong makes Viet Nam different from any other emerging Asian nation.

He said the U.S. claims to be fighting communism but in fact is in the position of fighting a nationalist movement.

The conference continued this afternoon.

Ask The Times

So long lives this, and this gives life to thee."

Passenger 'Insisted' Police Give Him an Answer . . . They Did

A man who interfered during a police arrest early today was fined $50 in central court when he pleaded builty to obstructing a peace officer.

Peter Fitterer, 3295 Exeter Rd., admitted challenging an officer four times after the car in which he was riding was stopped at Douglas and Bay Streets for a traffic violation.

Officers had arrested one of the other passengers for intoxication and the accused kept insisting that police tell him whether he was drunk as well.

He was ordered from the scene four times before he was arrested.

Catamaran Wins Kick-Off

PERFECT RACE WEATHER

Some 80 boats from the Pacific Northwest sailed into Esquimalt Harbor today to take part in the Royal Canadian Navy Sailing Association's annual regatta.

In perfect weather, the yachts began the first of nine races scheduled for large and small boats over the weekend.

Kick-off to the weekend was the annual long distance race from Cattle Point to Esquimalt Friday night.

Winner of the event was Ken Keith of the RCNSA in a catamaran Bearcat.

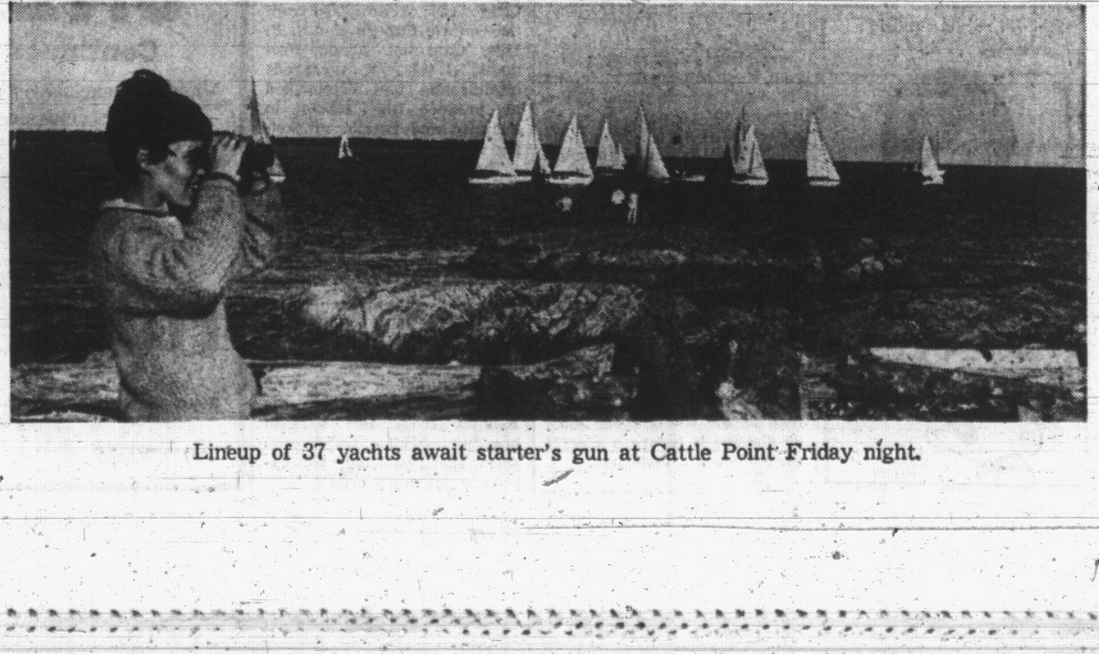
In winning the event, he established a new record, completing the 14-mile course in one hour, 52 minutes.

A second catamaran in the race wasn't quite so lucky, losing its centreboard on rocks near Trial Island.

Second man home was Dick James of Royal Victoria Yacht Club in Lalonga.

Third was E. Woodcock in Miramar.

The winner on corrected time — not yet established — will receive the HMCS Naden Trophy.



Lineup of 37 yachts await starter's gun at Cattle Point Friday night.

Three Way SC Fight

'Election Within Election' Forecast for City Seats

By ROGER STONEBANKS

A three-way fight by Social Credit MLAs for the two Victoria seats is shaping up for the September 12 provincial election.

Contacted this morning, Works Minister W. N. Chant and MLAs Waldo Skillings and J. Donald Smith all said they will allow their names to stand for nomination.

But because of the government's redistribution of constituencies earlier this year, the three-member Victoria constituency will be reduced to two MLAs.

One person close to the local Social Credit scene said Works Minister Chant is well established, a cabinet minister and has an excellent chance for the nomination.

But it was a 50-50 guess who will win between Mr. Skillings and Mr. Smith.

Victoria Social Credit president Hugh Ramsay announced this morning the nomination meeting will be held Thursday Aug. 18 at McPherson Theatre.

Provincial president George Dreidigger of Vancouver will be chairman of the meeting.

Mr. Ramsay said because of redistribution and the intention of the three present MLAs to seek re-nomination, the meeting will be "an election within an election." He expected a "terrific" turnout.

It remains possible that despite this morning's positive comments, one of the three might step down. The situation could become cloudy if other prominent Socreds decided to stand for nomination.

One person who announced he isn't a candidate is Millard Mooney, former city alderman and federal Socred candidate.

Big Scramble To Hold Meetings

Two other constituencies hold the limelight as officials of all parties scramble to call nominating meetings and get candidates for election.

They are the enlarged Oak Bay constituency and Saanich and the Islands, which extends from about the municipal hall north to include the Gulf Islands.

In Oak Bay, Liberal MLA Alan Macfarlane is expected to be a shoo-in for his party in the constituency he has held since 1960.

Long a thorn in the Socred government, particularly Premier Bennett, it is no secret the ruling party would like to unseat Mr. Macfarlane perhaps more than anyone else in B.C.

At the 1963 election, the Socreds ran live-wire Dr. Charles Ennals who was a good second to lawyer Mr. Macfarlane. The margin was about 700 votes.

Dr. Ennals said this morning he will be a candidate again for Social Credit.

The other interesting constituency is Saanich and the Islands.

Real estate salesman John Tisdalle was first elected in 1953 in the former Saanich constituency and at the last election held a 6,000-vote margin over runner-up John Windsor of the New Democratic Party.

But former New Westminster Mayor Mrs. Beth Wood has been repeatedly rumored as a candidate for the constituency. She lives on Salt Spring Island, the same island where Premies Bennett has a cottage.

Former Mayor Still Undecided

This morning, Mrs. Wood said she has made no decision whether or not to allow her name to stand for nomination.

Mr. Tisdalle couldn't be reached for his comment but it is unlikely he would step down.

Only two candidates have been nominated on southern Vancouver Island, both in Esquimalt.

They are John Bartunus of the NDP, who is chairman of Sooke School Board, and insurance executive David Elrix for the Liberals.

The Socreds have called a nominating meeting for Aug. 15 at 7:30 p.m. in Colwood Community Hall where MLA Herb Bruch is expected to be unopposed on renomination. He was first elected in 1953 and today confirmed he will run again.

Conservative Party spokesmen indicated there will not be any candidates in the two-member Victoria constituency because so far no one has offered himself.

But a spokesman for Saanich and the Islands said there will be a nominating convention.

Two rumored candidates said they are not allowing their names to stand for nomination. They are Conservative realtor Eric Charman and IWA president Murray Drew for the NDP.

At the last election, under the old constituencies, the Socreds held the three-member Victoria constituency plus Saanich and Esquimalt by good margins over New Democratic Party candidates.

Liberals and Conservatives trailed the field.

400 Qualify For Medals

Nearly 400 "pioneers" are on the Greater Victoria Centennial Society's list for the award of pioneer medals Centennial Year, 1967.

"And we feel there are many more," said society director Jerry Gosley this morning.

A "pioneer" is defined as any person who was either born in Canada or a resident of Canada prior to Jan. 1, 1892.

Those who qualify can apply at the society office, No. 14 Centennial Square.

Medals to be awarded will be in silver finish with a ribbon of muted navy blue. On the obverse side is a likeness of Alexander Mackenzie. The reverse side has a large 100, the centennial symbol—a geometric maple leaf, and the dogwood.

BLOOD BANK HIGH, DRY

Red Cross is out for blood—lots of it!

Vacationing blood donors have taken their blood out of Victoria, leaving the blood bank high and dry. Victorians are being requested to bleed to combat August shortages.

Blood donor clinics will be held at Red Cross House on: Tuesday, Aug. 9, 1:30 to 4.30 p.m., 6:30 to 9:00 p.m.; Wednesday, Aug. 10, 6:30 to 9:00 p.m. A clinic will also be held in the Customs Building, 816 Government Street, Room 209, Wednesday, Aug. 10, 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon, 1:00 to 4:00 p.m.

Youths Drop Loot After Being Spotted

Two youths who broke into a Saanich grocery store early today dropped most of their loot when surprised by the proprietor.

Police said the pair broke a window in the front door of Squire's Grocery, 530 Gorge West, to gain entry. They took a quantity of cigarettes and a dozen bottles of pop but dropped the soft drinks when the store owner appeared.

The thieves made off in a car.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Alan Bentley of New York announce the forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Bonnie Alison, to Mr. John Moreland Stenstrom, son of Dr. and Mrs. John D. Stenstrom, 2460 Cardigan Road, Victoria. The wedding will take place on Saturday, August 27 at 2 p.m. in St. George's Anglican Church, Willowdale, Ontario. Bonar-Waterhouse Vows Exchanged

TO MAKE HOME UP-ISLAND

Following a honeymoon motoring east, newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. Ronald James Bonar will make their home in Crofton.

The bride, the former Edith Elaine Waterhouse, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Waterhouse, 2507 Epworth Street, and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bonar of Ganges, Salt Spring Island.

Arrangements of white and yellow gladioli decorated St. Patrick's Church, Oak Bay, this morning for the service at which Fr. A. E. Leonard officiated. Mr. Waterhouse gave his daughter in marriage.

Organist Mrs. W. Gill played "Ave Maria" during the ceremony.

A gown of white organza over satin, fashioned on empire lines, was worn by the bride. The floor-length skirt was A-line, and the bodice featured lily point sleeves. Her veil misted to shoulder-length from a floral organza headpiece, trimmed with accents of rhinestones and seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses and gypsophila. Her only jewelry was the groom's gift of a gold cross and she carried a pure silk handkerchief, "something borrowed" from her grandmother, Mrs. T. Waterhouse.

SWISS LACE

Miss Joan Waterhouse was maid of honor for her sister in a gown of blue organza over silk crepe, styled with Swiss lace sleeves to the elbow. Her headpiece was a garland of white carnations, trimmed with net, and she carried carnations and gypsophila in her bouquet.

A similar outfit in pink tones was worn by bridesmaid, Miss Marion Johnston. Michael and Gerard Bonar were best men for their brother and the cousins of the principals, Don Waterhouse and Don Clabo of Vancouver, were ushers.

The bride's mother made the three-tier wedding cake for the reception which followed in the Tally-Ho Travelodge. J. Chapman proposed the toast to the bride.

For travelling on honeymoon, the bride chose a suit of blue and white which she topped with a three-quarter-length coat. She accented the outfit with white accessories.

Parents Here From South For Son's Wedding Today

Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Tedds travelled from their home in Mountain View, Calif., to attend the wedding, this afternoon, of Deidre Ann Simmons and their son, Sub-Lt. Leonard Stanley Tedds.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor James Simmons, 1231 Fairfield Road.

HMCS Venture Chapel-By-the Sea was decorated with baskets of yellow and white gladioli for the service at which Rev. D. A. Hatfield officiated. "Praise My Soul, the King of Heaven" was played as the bride entered the church on the arm of her father.

The bride's floor-length gown of silk was styled on princess lines and featured a row of buttons down the centre front. Her veil of silk illusion net misted to cathedral length from a Juliet cap of French wax flowers, originally worn by her mother at her wedding. The bride carried yellow garnet rosebuds, stephanotis and leather fern in her cascade bouquet.

Her sisters, matron of honor Mrs. Michael Shewchuk and bridesmaid Miss Vicki Simmons were in identical gowns of blue and green floral printed crepe. White marguerite daisies formed their headpieces and they carried similar flowers and leather fern in their bouquets. Best man was Sub-Lt. Ray Paquette and Sub-Lt. Gill Bowles ushered the guests to pews marked with yellow carnations and ribbon.

YELLOW ROSEBUDS

A silver vase of yellow rosebuds topped the tiered wedding cake which centred the head table at the reception following in the McPherson Playhouse. Michael Shewchuk, Port Alberni, proposed the toast to his sister-in-law.

The couple will make their home at 516 Dallas Road, following a honeymoon trip to California.

For travelling, the new Mrs. Tedds donned a pastel printed dress of cotton which she topped with a linen coat in a similar print. Completing the outfit were pink accessories and a nosegay of pink garnet roses which she wore on her purse.

HUNT-JONES VOWS

Bridal Gown of Lace Topped by Silk Coat

Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Hunt travelled from their home in Winnipeg to attend the recent wedding of Silvia Laraine Jones, and their son, Const. Robert Wayne Hunt, RCMP.

The bride is the daughter of Lt.-Cmdr. and Mrs. R. H. Jones of Camp Borden, Ont., formerly of Victoria. Rev. Brian Cowan officiated at the double-ring ceremony in St. Martin's-in-the-Fields Church, and Lt.-Cmdr. Jones gave his daughter in marriage.

A silk organza cardinal coat, trimmed with accents of lace, topped the bride's empire-line gown of Alencon lace. Her four-tier veil of French net misted softly from a tiara of pearls and she carried a bouquet of white gladioli, ivy and red roses. Jewelry was the groom's gift of a gold locket.

The bride's attendants, matron of honor Mrs. J. A. Swanson, Duncan, and bridesmatrons, Mrs. R. C. Edwards and Mrs. R. Grant, were in street-length sheath gowns of forget-me-not blue. The marguerite daisies in their colonial bouquets were echoed in their headpieces of ruffled net, studded with daisies.

The bride's godson, Richard Davis, wore a white silk suit and carried the rings on a heart-shaped lace pillow.

Best man was Const. J. A. Swanson, Duncan. Ushers were Const. H. P. Costello, Chemainus, and Const. E. G. Bohl, Duncan.

'CATHEDRAL' CAKE

A wedding cake, shaped like a cathedral and topped with miniature figures of a bride and groom, centred the head table at the reception following in the Carlton Club. Mrs. Boulderson, Chemainus, made the cake. William S. Jones proposed the toast to his niece.

The couple is now making their home at 954 Jenkins Road, Colwood, following a honeymoon trip to Washington.

Other guests who travelled from out-of-town for the wedding included the bride's grandmother, Mrs. B. M. Rudolph, Liscombe, N.S.; Archibald Atkinson, the Misses Gayle and Glenda Hunt of Winnipeg; Miss Lynn Hunt of Calgary; Mr. and Mrs. Leo Comerford and Gail of Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. B. Lawson of Warren, Man.; Mr. and Mrs. D. Luff of Vancouver.

Couple Make New Home On Mainland

Now making their home in Chilliwack, following a honeymoon trip up-Island, are Mr. and Mrs. David Robert Stuart Cutler.

Arrangements of delphiniums, Esther Reed daisies, snapdragons and miniature chrysanthemums decorated St. Mark's Anglican Church when Canon Robert Willis heard marriage vows exchanged between the former Barbara Jean Justice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robin Justice, 848 Swan Street, Victoria, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Cutler of St. Bruno, P.Q. Mr. Justice gave his daughter in marriage.

A blue lace jacket topped the bride's ankle-length gown of blue peau de soie, styled on empire lines. Her headpiece was a self-fabric coronet and she carried a colonial bouquet of pale yellow roses, blue cornflowers and deep yellow freesia.

The bride's attendants, her sister, Miss Pat Justice, and Miss Wendy Andrews, were in gowns of teal blue satin, circled at the waist by daisy appliques. Their headpieces of tulle and satin were en tone and they carried colonial bouquets of white carnations.

Best man was Mike McAvoy, and Tom Skinner was usher.

Harold Attwell proposed the toast to the bride at the reception following in the home of the bride's parents.

For travelling on honeymoon the new Mrs. Cutler chose a two-piece dress of blue linen. Complementing the outfit were white accessories and a white fur stole, the groom's gift.

Travelling from out-of-town were Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Attwell and Mr. and Mrs. F. Facer of Nanaimo; Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Justice of Duncan; Miss Cynthia Llewellyn and Mrs. R. Low of Vancouver; Mrs. C. Collins, Regina, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ranson of Mission, B.C.

Guipure Lace Appliques Trim Dainty Bridal Coat and Gown

Appliques of exquisite Guipure lace highlighted the floor-length coat which topped the gown of peau de soie worn by Marianne Lorna Johns, this afternoon, when she became the bride of Edward Toth, Vancouver. The coat was styled en train, and featured sleeves to the elbow. The gown was sleeveless and studded with accents of Guipure lace at the empire-line bodice. Her veil of scalloped illusion net misted softly to chapel-length from a coronet of Guipure lace, outlined with crystals and pearls. Gardenias and stephanotis were in her crescent bouquet.

Standard baskets of white gladioli, stocks and chrysanthemums were at the chancel rail of St. John's Anglican Church when Canon Grahame Baker heard marriage vows exchanged between the granddaughter of Lt.-Col. and Mrs. Squire Baxandall, 421 Cook Street, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Toth of Osoyoos.

A bouquet of white roses and gladioli in memory of the bride's parents, the late Dr. and Mrs. H. P. Johns, was also at the chancel rail. David Johns gave his sister in marriage, and Donald Woodworth was organist.

SEA BLUE GOWNS

Re-embroidered lace banded the empire waistlines of the sea blue chiffon gowns worn by the bride's attendants. They were maid of honor Miss Jane Gilliland; bridesmatron Mrs. William Ronald, and bridesmaids, the Misses Nan Gregory and Anne Sommer. All wore matching headpieces and carried cascade bouquets of deep red roses and stephanotis.

Little Debora Johns was flower girl for her cousin in a floor-length frock of rose chiffon. She carried a basket of deep pink carnations. The groom's nephew, Brian Toth was ring bearer.

Best man was John M. Stenstrom. Ushering guests were Stephen Toth Jr., Dennis Coates and Michael Stevens.

The University of Victoria Faculty Lounge was decorated with arrangements of white gladioli and asters for the reception which followed. White tulle and bouquets of gardenias and gypsophila surrounded the four-tier wedding cake which centred the head table. H. Drummond Dee proposed the toast to his goddaughter.

For travelling on a honeymoon trip through the province, the new Mrs. Toth chose a three-piece suit of coral tropicana silk, which she complemented with a beige feather hat and matching accessories.

Travelling from Vancouver to attend the wedding were the bride's aunt, Mrs. W. A. Butler, Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Broman, Grant Bennest, Robert Caldicott, David Edwards, Mr and Mrs. Peter Farr, Hon. Judge and Mrs. G. F. Gregory, the Misses Nan and Frances Gregory; Gorge Horwood, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Heywood, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Johns, Miss Debora Johns, Kenneth Johns, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Karagianis, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Leith, Mr. and Mrs. William P. Ronald, Mr, and Mrs. W. Y. Ronald, Verne Simpson, John Stenstrom, Campbell McDonald, the Misses Jane Leith, May Martin, Arn Sommer and Ilah Thompson.

Other out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Zuback and Shelley and Mrs. Robert Harvie of Lethbridge, Alta.; the groom's parents and Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Toth Jr. and Brian, Mrs. Mary Fritz, Colin Gableman, Warren Lethebe and Mr. and Mrs. John Pleva Jr. of Osoyoos; Miss Gladys Johns, Los Angeles, Calif.; Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Coates of Kamloops; Michael Stevens, Oliver, B.C.; Michael Alaric, Princeton, B.C. and Mrs. Cristopher Scott, New Westminster.

BE SMART—

A bride — or any bride for that matter—should have special everything, and that includes hosiery. Like a medallion of Chantilly lace at the instep, for example, sprinkled with rhinestones; or a pattern of seed pearls rising from the ankle—and fancy garters in white lace or "something-blue" satin.

New Residents

Former residents of Kelowna, Dr. and Mrs. I. A. N. Beadle have arrived in Victoria and will make their home at 307 Oak Bay Towers on Newport Avenue.

Announcement

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hawes, 4286 Caen Road, announce the marriage of their eldest daughter, Sheryl Ann Mason, to Mr. Gary Foster Bell, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Bell, 843 Old Esquimalt Road. The wedding took place Friday evening in St. Paul's Naval and Garrison Church with Rev. J. A. Roberts officiating.

Arctic Art New 'Hit' In Interior Design

By LESLEY GILES

The latest assault on the interior decorating field has been made by drapery fabric designs created by the Eskimos of the West Baffin Eskimo Co-Operative at Cape Dorset, Baffin Island.

The designs, at present available only to interior decorators, architects and contractors, are a 100-per-cent Eskimo effort. The Eskimos used $30,000 which they raised by the sale of soapstone carvings and sketches, to get the drapery business on its feet.

In the three years of preparation, the Eskimos learned the technique of silk-screening sketches from paper onto fabric from Olga Chagowsky, a designer from the Ontario College of Art. In 1964, Canadian Arctic Products, Ltd., a non-profit organization was established to produce the fabric in quantity and handle marketing arrangements.

The designs themselves are simple, but effective. The colors are bold, and the subjects handled with sensitivity. They range from Eskimo lovers rubbing noses to fish with shadows, from proud geese to spirits and whales.

"These fabrics will not be available for over-the-counter sales," says John C. Patton, the sales manager, "because we want to protect the Eskimo from the bargain basement. But 'though the sales are restricted, we expect to get many orders."

The fabric won the design award of the National Design Council last month. It is hoped that several Canadian exhibitors at Expo '67 will use it to decorate their pavilions.

Can a gentleman find happiness with Old Style Beer?

A very important question. Better consider it slowly and thoughtfully – over a glass of Old Style. While you're meditating, note the flavour. Bold, forthright. Yet there's nothing rough about it, is there? On the contrary, natural aging has made it mellow and mature. Gentle, in fact. That's it! Suddenly, the answer is clear and you realize . . . you're happy. This calls for another Old Style!

Island Fun

Sunbonnetted and smiling, apron stall conveners Mrs. Linda Horrocks, Ganges, at left, and Mrs. Stewart Bannister, Walter Hook, had as much fun as their many customers at this week's fete on Salt Spring Island.

Even the beauty of the harbor forming the background at this week's fete couldn't lure guests away from the many activities which included shopping, afternoon tea, tennis, a variety of games and friendly get-togethers with friends from on and off the island.

One of the summer highlights of this area is the annual garden fete, arranged by the six Anglican women's groups on Salt Spring Island. Warm sunshine, centennial costumes and a perfect setting made this year's party, held at Harbor House, Ganges, on Wednesday, a gala affair. The sum of $950 was realized and each guest went home determined to be present for next year's fun.

Many a little girl dreams of growing up and marrying a 'mountie.' Gail and Karen Horrocks, nine and 10-year-old daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Horrocks of Fulford Harbor have a suspiciously mischievous glint in their eyes as they persuade Const. Garry McLaughlin, RCMP, to pop their wishes into the wishing well.

Who says women belong to the weaker sex? With a hefty bang of the hammer, Mrs. Frank Crofton, Victoria, proves otherwise as Mr. Henry Giegerich, Ganges Harbor, supervises the nail-driving contest.

Alison, four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mouat, looks a little dubious as she inspects the carcass of lamb offered as a prize in one of the fete's numerous contests.

Even an archbishop can approve of a little gambling when it's for a good cause. Archbishop Harold E. Sexton takes a turn at guessing the weight of a scrumptious fruit cake, watched by, left to right, Mrs. V. C. Best, Mrs. Zenow Kropinsky and Mrs. Gerald Bullock, former Salt Spring Islander presently on a visit from Tunbridge Wells, Eng.

Every successful affair has its 'backroom boys' who organize and ensure that everything goes as it should. Committee members for this week's mammoth party included: Front row, left to right, Mrs. Cecil Springford, Mrs. George Laundry, Miss Gail Timbers, Miss Frena Aitkens, Mrs. Andrew Stevens, Mrs. E. M. Harbin and Mrs. Alan Perry. In the back row, left to right, are Mrs. Norah Minchin, Mrs. Edward Adams, Mrs. Edwin Worthington, Mrs. Archie Barber and Mrs. F. L. Jackson. Other conveners included Mrs. P. G. James, Mrs. Jessie Byron and Mrs. E. H. Gear, who was in charge of tea arrangements.

Three little girls from Salt Spring are we . . . Even Gilbert and Sullivan would have approved the appearance of this bonnie trio who won first, second and third places in the centennial costume parade. Left to right, they are Gill French, 14, and Linda Slingsby, 12, both of Fulford Harbor, and Roberta Malcolmson, nine, Vesuvius Bay.

IN STEP WITH STYLE

It's Question and Answer Time For Fashion Editor's Readers

Question and Answer Box:

Dear Mrs. Damaske:

I am to be married just before Christmas and my fiance and I are planning a Christmas and New Year honeymoon at a well known ski resort in the United States. I have skied for several years and have a fairly good idea of what I will need as far as regular ski clothes are concerned but I would like to have a few things that are colorful and different. Could you suggest anything new that would be a little unusual?

Damaske

Diana.

Dear Diana:

The brilliant bulky knits, flowered or printed parkas and well-fitted stretch pants will, I am sure, already be in your planned ski wardrobe. How about a poncho? These practical, Mexican-inspired garments are making a big noise in the field of sportswear this fall.

A clever and comfortable way to look when not actually skiing . . . great for wandering around the ski village or skating on a nearby open-air rink. Be sure to include a floor-length apres-ski skirt . . . very chic in pastel loosely-woven mohair with a vivid-toned turtle-neck jersey top.

Dear Mrs. Damaske:

I am in my teens and have a pretty skimpy clothing allowance. I swim a lot and need two bathing suits, not so much for now but this is the time of the sales and if I buy them now I can have two instead of having one at the beginning of a new season next year. My problem is that I always seem to bulge out where the suit fits around the top of my legs. I am not really fat but seem to have thighs that are out of proportion. Could you please suggest a style for me that is not too old looking?

A Teener.

Dear Teener:

Yours is a widespread (pretty corny pun, eh?) problem and I am sending you a pamphlet of exercises which include several for heavy thighs.

There are two swim suit styles which are youthful and will certainly camouflage your bulges.

Boy-shorts are good if you like a two-piece. The little inner panties are tight and secure but the leg opening of the shorts is comfortably wide. If the shorts are a little longer than a normal-type swim suit, so much the better. Good this season is the long torso top ending in a flattering skirt of tiny pleats. This suit is more feminine than the boy-shorts and will also keep the bulges under wraps.

Dear Nona:

I have always had short, fair, hardly noticeable lashes. Recently I invested in a pair of good-looking natural hair eyelashes and I find I am wearing them all the time. I manage them quite easily and they do a great deal for my appearance. I know they should be cleaned but I am terrified to wash them . . . is there some special method?

June M.

Dear June:

When the adhesive begins to "build up" on the base of the lashes, a little alcohol on absorbent cotton will soften it so that you can pull it off easily. Place the lash along the length of your forefinger, holding the hairs gently with your thumb. Then apply alcohol in short strokes away from the hairs. This method will prevent any stickiness from reaching the lashes themselves, merely cleaning the base. If your lashes straighten out slightly after many wearings and cleanings, just re-curl them around a regular lead pencil for a few minutes.

Dear Mrs. C.:

Since speaking with you on the telephone last week I have found two pictures of the crossover surplice bodice that I mentioned to you . . . if you would call again and leave your address I will send them along to you.

Nona Damaske.

Doing The Town

with DOROTHY FRASER

Fabulous Dresden ornaments at Sydney Reynolds . . .

Mr. Geoff Reynolds' eyes positively lit up when he marched us over to see two magnificent Dresden china objects d'art just arrived at the store . . . and ours literally popped with admiration . . . Not companion pieces, each one tells a complete story by itself . . . though if you're a connoisseur you might conceivably want both! . . . One is a group of figures called "Lady in a Sedan Chair" . . . the lady in the case being quite exquisite, and attended by two equally exquisite gentlemen dancing enrapt attention . . . The other is "The Chess Players" . . . a lady and gentleman intent on the noble game (yes, the gal's winning . . . has her opponent beautifully bottled up!) . . . These groups are a good size . . . figures set on the typically Dresden flower ornamented base . . . Hand molded and tinted . . . the detail is simply breathtaking . . . even each individual chess piece is perfect . . . They're show pieces by masters of the art . . . incredibly delicate and completely charming . . . And of course, no two pieces ever made are exactly alike! . . . Also newsworthy, a magnificent new shipment of Limoges miniatures (little plates of various sizes with stands) . . . powder and cigarette boxes, compotes, and brooches . . . all bearing pictures of famous paintings . . . and triple trays with gold etched designs . . . Not expensive, and worth looking at, with present and future gift giving in mind . . . Sydney Reynolds Ltd., 801 Government St., EV 3-3931.

Skirts are still short . . . but we keep noticing straws in the wind. For instance, in Edward Molyneaux's winter collection last week, skirts invariably covered the kneecap.

Conversation pieces from Ireland . . .

Two off-beat, decidedly original garments brightened our visit to Wilson's this week . . . We love all of Wilson's beautiful clothes . . . but when something like these come in . . . well, it makes us want to spread the word . . . sort of like a conversation piece! . . . The first hails from Eire . . . a cape with button-on hood a la Red Riding Hood . . . of the softest, lightest, hand-woven mohair imaginable . . . the color, a lovely blending of lilac and emerald . . . How perfect this would be to step out in of a winter evening! . . . And without the hood, you could wear it just about anytime . . . from over a suit, to over slacks and sweater . . . Nice offering from the Emerald Isle! . . . The second is also Irish . . . and you've never seen its like . . . Aran wool hand knit fisherknit slacks, no less! . . . No one in Wilson's has ever heard of such before . . . They have two zippers, one either side, and elastic going under the foot giving them the same effect as stretch slacks . . . Guaranteed to attract attention and admiration . . . so if you like to be firstest with the mostest . . . go try them on! . . . Another not-to-be-missed item at Wilson's . . . a beautiful classically-styled llama coat . . . detailed with handstitching . . . the color of pale honey . . . Mmmmm! . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Did you ever see an all-mink suit? Fur designer Alexandre has done one which is now obtainable in several large U.S. stores. . . . White mink skirt and trotteur jacket, natural beige mink shell . . . the latter sleeveless and white leather belted at the waistline. Very, very ultra!

Exclusive gifts in a delightful setting . . .

From the time you first poke your head over the open Dutch door of the Handloom, until you've "done" the entire shop, it's sheer delight! . . . Here's a gift shop entirely without gimcracks or gimmicks . . . a place you'll take to your heart and want to visit often whenever you're in search of something truly original . . . not to mention when you're planning to ply your knitting needles, because there's a wonderful exclusive selection of Cottage Craft yarns . . . And the Andrew Stewart knits from Scotland are very choice . . . hand-loomed skirt lengths, matching or blending yarns with patterns for two different sweaters, all needed buttons and ribbon . . . Gorgeous colors and skirt patterns . . . Needless to say, everything at Handloom is hand-crafted or hand-knit . . . There's a handsome patio stool . . . a candle lantern in the shape of a Siamese cat, and a standing lamp . . . hand thrown by Kakinuba . . . to give character to your patio . . . Hand-loomed fabric lengths to have tailored into men's sport jackets . . . Irish fisherknit sweaters for men and women . . . with the ancient, intricate designs that have been handed down for centuries in Aran . . . each sweater signed by the knitter . . . Unbrushed mohair scarves so light they almost blow away . . . Hand-knit Shetland sweaters . . . Daphne leather jewelry, hand molded and colored . . . completely different from anything you'll find elsewhere . . . Far, far more than we can tell you about here . . . but for a rewarding experience, visit . . . The Handloom, 18 Centennial Square, 384-1011.

Those adhesive strips we all use for covering scratches and sundry small wounds have, we learn, a new use; just great for holding hair together for pony tail or under bun or chignon.

Occasional tables to "make" your room . . .

We don't know about you . . . but one of the first things we notice when we go into a strange room is tables . . . Are there enough of them . . . properly placed . . . designed to do what they're supposed to do . . . and above all, are they handsome and important-looking? . . . The Gallery at Home Furniture has a large selection of completely beautiful occasional tables . . . any one of which would do any room proud . . . They're imported . . . reproductions of the best in old traditional designs . . . in solid swirl mahogany, beautifully banded or inlaid . . . Solid and handsome and crafted with loving care . . . Two or three sizes in Pembroke tables which, with their drop leaf sides, are so very versatile . . . Drum tables . . . coffee tables in a variety of shapes . . . natural wood graining that's out of this world! . . . There are low and high lamp tables . . . English butler's tray tables in two sizes . . . little tables to hold cigarettes and ash tray . . . console tables in many designs . . . A beautiful example of the latter is rich swirl mahogany with porcelain drawer pulls . . . When we saw this one we couldn't help thinking what a lovely grouping could be made in a hallway . . . with the console, a carved frame mirror behind it, and one of the Home's beautiful little Victoria chairs alongside . . . Really, your imagination will soar and you'll come up with some wonderful ideas for your home when you visit the Gallery at . . . Home Furniture Company, 825 Fort St., 382-5138.

Scarves will be seen everywhere in the season ahead. Heads and necks will be tied, draped, muffled in wool challis, silk twill, filmy chiffon. The "in" patterns include paisleys, foulards and geometrics.

Great big, beautiful bargains at Miss Frith's . . .

You probably know . . . as we did . . . that there's a sale going on at Miss Frith's . . . but we didn't realize how GOOD a sale until we got a close look at some of the choice imports from up on the mezzanine . . . and saw the downright ruthless price slashing they've been subjected to! . . . Anything from ⅓ to ½ off!! . . . Like the stunning black and tan cotton tweed suit with beige quilted silk lapels and shell . . . reduced from $85 to $42.50 (it's a size 12, if you're interested) . . . and the grey, white, tan and black diagonally-striped 2-piece dress (size 10) regularly $90 for a mere $45 . . . A beautifully-cut black boucle cocktail dress with sleeves and an embroidered front design in gunmetal heads, is half price . . . as is a similar dress without sleeves . . . There's a size 11 ensemble . . . pink and navy linen, the navy coat lined with pink polka dot silk . . . reduced from $115 to $57.50 . . . And a beige cotton lace and linen coat and dress ensemble which was $109 . . . now exactly half price . . . The beauty about most of these clothes is that they're not strictly summer, but could be worn most months of the year . . . Certainly this is a heaven-sent opportunity to acquire a really good dress at a budget price . . . Hats and all sorts of other things are reduced too . . . so drop in next week and see what treasure you can pick up! . . . Miss Frith Millinery & Fashions, 1617 Douglas St., 383-7181.

TODAY'S RECIPE

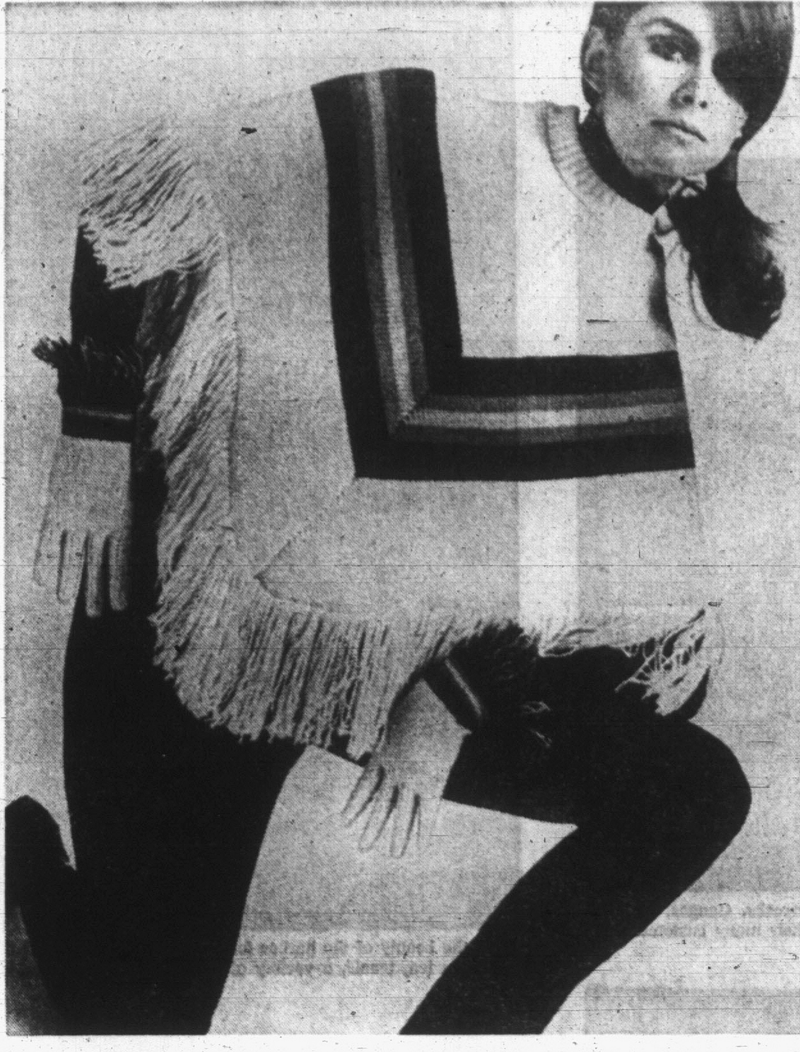
GOURMET STUFFED MUSHROOMS

Sixteen medium-sized caps, 2 tablespoons minced onion, 6 tablespoons butter, 1 (15½-oz.) can salmon, 3 cups hot Mornay sauce, 2 cups bread crumbs, 2 teaspoons lemon juice.

Remove stems from mushrooms; chop stems finely. Saute stems and onion in 2 tablespoons of the butter, until tender. Stir liquid from salmon into Mornay sauce and keep hot over simmering water.

Flake salmon. Saute bread crumbs in remaining butter until golden brown and crisp. Simmer mushroom caps in water, to cover, with lemon juice, for just 5 minutes. Drain throroughly. Combine mushroom stems, flaked salmon, toasted crumbs and 1 cup of the sauce. Stuff mushrooms with the mixture and arrange on serving tray. Place remaining sauce in bowl; let guests top mushrooms with a little more sauce, as desired. Makes 16.

MORNAY SAUCE: Prepare 1 cup recipe for basic thick white sauce. When cooked, stir in from ¼ to ½ cup thick cream. Add 2 tablespoons each grated Swiss and Parmesan cheese. Cook, stirring, until cheese is melted.



Gaucho-Poncho . . . apres-ski poncho slips over everything, pants, turtle-neck sweaters, skating skirts and wool dresses. Created by Hansen of New York, this fun accessory has its own Gaucho glove with swinging fringe. Both designed with hot-toned stripes on a natural background.

Don't Sit and Sulk—Discuss the Matter

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This may sound strange, but in the four years my husband and I have been married, we have never had a fight. Oh, we've had plenty of disagreements, but we have never settled any of them. When my husband is mad about something, he just sits and sulks. He won't even tell me what's wrong.

I am as bad as he is. When I'm mad, I just hold everything inside. I get a lump in my throat and tears in my eyes and I keep quiet. Sometimes I wish we could bring all our complaints out in the open and have a good old-fashioned shouting argument, but I honestly wouldn't know how to start one. Can you give me some suggestions?

NEEDS A FIGHT

DEAR NEEDS: You are wise to want to "bring your complaints out into the open." Allowing unresolved tensions to build up inside can cause one major explosion far more serious than several minor ones. No married couple can agree on everything unless one of them is a vegetable.

When something bothers you, swallow that lump in your throat, let the tears fall where they may and keep talking until you make sense. Don't spout off in anger in an effort to hurt the other, but describe your feelings honestly.

This is sure to provoke some sort of reaction in your husband. He'll either deny or affirm, defend or counter-attack, justify or apologize. And before you know it, you'll have cleared the air.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a teeth grinder. When he sleeps he grinds his teeth like you wouldn't believe. He ate three inches of lace off his pillow slip.

I can't go into another room because the beds are full of kids, so I go into the bathroom and read until my eyes are crossed. Please, help me.

RAW NERVES

DEAR RAW: If your husband won't go willingly to his dentist, bind, gag, and drag him there. Modern dental techniques have helped many a teeth grinder. Don't put it off. He is ruining not only your health, but his teeth.

P.S. And take those lace-edged pillow slips off his pillow. He could choke to death.

DEAR ABBY: A daughter who was very much concerned over her mother's sudden drinking problem wrote, "Abby, why would a loving, respected grandmother turn to alcohol after all these years?"

Had that daughter reread her own letter, she would have discovered the answer. She wrote: "Mother started drinking a few years ago when dad retired."

I know exactly how she feels. My husband is also retired, and I'd drink, too, if I could afford it.

GOING CRAZY

CONFIDENTIAL TO A VERY KIND MINISTER IN BARSTOW, CALIF.: Forgive me if I gave the impression that the apocryphal tale about the biblical Sarah and Abraham, which was sent to me by a reader, was indeed from the Old Testament.

It was not. But I will repeat, the answer to all human problems can be found between the two covers of the Bible. "Seek and ye shall find."

Vows Tangle Family Tree

TORONTO (CP) — Two Toronto boys are facing the pleasant problem of what relation they became when their father's mother married their mother's father.

The boys, Robert and William Bryce, were ushers Wednesday night at the wedding of Mrs. Edith Bryce and John Fidler. And both agree they'll leave it at that instead of getting bogged down in a tangled family tree.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Ronald Bryce, mother of the boys and Mr. Fidler's daughter, said: "I guess the wedding makes my husband and me step-brother and sister."

Her husband is Mrs. Bryce's son.

Mr. Fidler, 84, and Mrs. Bryce became engaged earlier this summer. The bride and groom each has five children. They plan a two-month honeymoon in Victoria.

Keep Maiden Name

Under a new Norwegian law, brides may keep their maiden names after marriage, but few seem to want to.

Preserve Pretty Hair With Magic Protector

By Penny Saver

The other evening, I went to a dinner party for two friends of mine who are visiting from out-of-town. I hadn't seen the couple for a number of years, and quite naturally I wanted to look my best. So down to the hairdressers I went, had my hair done in a brand-new style and felt like a million dollars when I finally arrived at the party. The new hairdo made such a hit, that when I went home that night, I wrapped it in tissue paper and scarves to preserve it.

I terrified the family at breakfast the next morning when I showed up in this weird outfit—and worst of all, it didn't keep my hair in place.

I've now found something which does protect a "do" at night, and it doesn't scare the family, either! It's a square of cloth-like synthetic material, which has the happy knack of sticking to itself.

Centre the square at the back of your head, bring the front ends forward and fold at the top. It's perfect for protecting your hair from wind—and it's wonderful on a boat, for keeping your hair away from the drying effects of sun and salt.

The turbans are available in three colors, blue, pink and white, and their adhesive qualities last for months.

The turban is dandy for hiding rollers and curlers just after you've washed your hair (it's ventilated to allow hair to dry quickly). It also saves tresses from household dirt when you're dusting or vacuuming. Price of this is $1.49.

Here's a handy tip for party-goers. Nothing looks worse than specks of dandruff, loose hair or dust on the shoulders of a dress, especially a black one. The item I've found to prevent this sells for 39 cents and it's pretty as well as practical.

The item is a tiny adhesive "brush" which has a type of glue instead of bristles to whisk away unsightly specks. The brush has an attractive tortoise-shell base and fits into its gold-toned carrying case, and the whole ensemble is small enough to tuck into an evening purse or your escort's pocket. The adhesive glue stays "sticky" for months—it just needs an occasional wiping with a lint-free cloth to keep it working.

Do these sound intriguing? Then give me a ring at 382-3131 to find out where to shop for them.

GOES OFF-BEAT AT FALL SHOW

PARIS (UPI)—Girls looked like little Lord Fauntleroys or "mod" motorcycle racers at the winter collection of Yves St. Laurent today. The youthful designer celebrated his 10th collection in his own salon with a show that was judged extra-young and amusing by the press.

Anybody want to wear black jersey dresses with either gigantic red lips over the bosom or the profile of a pink nude female body curving down one side?

After scoring a smash success last year with gowns designed after abstract Piet Mondrian paintings, St. Laurent this season borrowed a leaf from Picasso with the lip and body jersey inserts.

Historic French Tapestries Inspire Theme of Bridal Gown

Heroines of the French tapestries of the 15th century were the inspiration for the exquisite floor-length gown worn by Brenda Marjorie Buller this afternoon when she exchanged vows with Dennis Douglas Focht in St. Mary's Anglican Church. A full-length veil held by a pillbox headpiece to match the gown enhanced the creation of ribbon-appliqued duchess satin and her bouquet contained gardenias, stephanotis and white roses.

Hand-painting in delicate shades of pale green and apricot gave highlights to the gowns of her four attendants, Miss Bronwen Curtis, Washington, D.C.; Miss Janette Watson, Miss Deanne Buller and Miss Christine Focht. The full-length gowns were in eggshell shaded re-embroidered duchess satin. The attendants wore circlets of rose leaves and fern and carried bouquets of roses to complete the picture.

Parents of the principals are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Laidlaw Buller, 2795 Lincoln Road, Victoria, and Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Focht of Fair Lawn, New Jersey. Mr. Buller gave his daughter in marriage and Canon Hywel Jones officiated.

Leonard Altamura, Fair Lawn, was best man and ushers were Douglas Focht, Mark Buller and Fred Peterson, Ames, Iowa.

A reception followed at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Focht will return to Ames, Iowa, in September where Mrs. Focht will lecture at Iowa State University. The groom will be at the same university, making his final year of studies for his doctor of philosophy degree. His subject is bacteriology.

Silk Crepe And Lace

Accents of heavy Venetian lace trimmed the empire-line gown of white silk crepe worn by Marion Cecelia Potter, recently, when she became the bride of John Thomas Currier.

The floor-length skirt was styled on A-lines and the bodice featured a round neckline and three-quarter-length sleeves. Venetian lace also highlighted the watteau train. Small pearls starred her veil of silk illusion net which misted from a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried white roses and fern in her bouquet.

Baskets of yellow gladioli and chrysanthemums decorated the Church of St. George the Martyr when Canon George Biddle heard vows uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Potter, 3888 Loretta Drive, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Currier, 7242 Highcrest Terrace. Mr. Potter gave his daughter in marriage.

Sunshine yellow floral chiffon formed the gowns worn by Slater, bridesmatron Mrs. W. Hausberg, and junior bridesmaid, Wendy Watson. Their headpieces were wreaths of yellow flowers, and they carried cascade bouquets of yellow roses and fern.

Bill Currier was best man and ushering guests were Mike and Pat Currier and Ricky Sluggett.

White candles and chrysanthemums flanked the three-tier wedding cake which centred the head table at the reception following in the Red Lion Motor Inn. D. N. Scott proposed the toast to the bride.

A coat and dress ensemble of black and white hounds tooth check wool was worn by the new Mrs. Currier for travelling on honeymoon to Banff. She completed the outfit with a matching hat.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Slater of Vancouver and Mr. and Mrs. W. Hausberg of Penticton.

Holiday in East

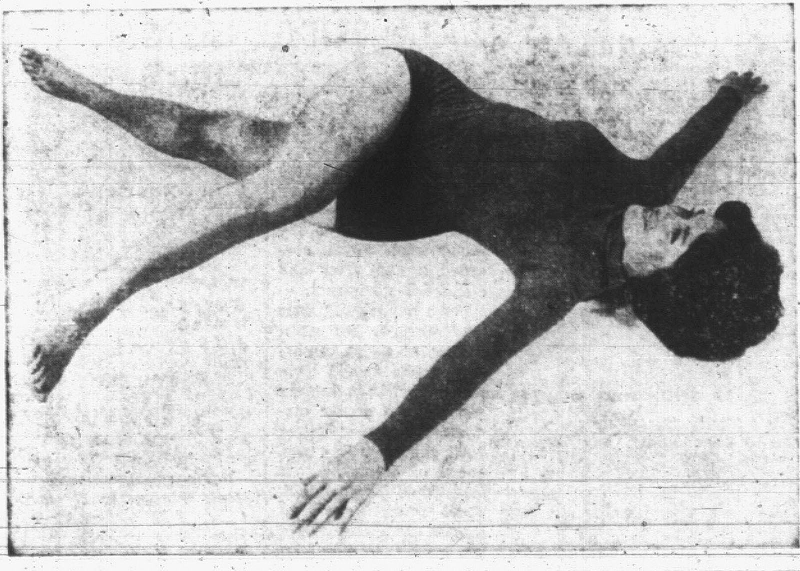
WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN



Exercise is an important part of a reducing program not only because it burns up calories, but because it can redistribute the pounds more attractively. This exercise is one which followers of my Eight Week Beauty Improvement Plan have found most effective.

This is the Double Cross which will double cross a large hipline.

Lie on the floor on your back with your arms resting on the floor and extending straight out from your shoulders, palms down. Swing your right leg over your left and try to touch the floor on the left side of your body with your right toe (knees stiff). Swing left leg to your right side and alternate. Fingertips cling to the floor.

If you want to lose 20 pounds in the next eight weeks, decrease measurements, and improve your appearance generally, you may want my Beauty Improvement Plan. If so, sent 25 cents, plus 15 cents for postage and handling, and your printed name and address, with your request for the "BIP Kit." Address Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

TEEN-AGERS UNDER FIRE

Robert or Roberta... Impossible to Tell

In today's letter, Victorian Robert J. Howard pleads with teenagers to make identification easier by leaving the wearing of longer hair to the feminine members of the set.

I've said so much that, if I may, I might as well go all the way and tell the whole of what I feel concerning those 'neath fashion's heel.

Teen-agers, too, have bent the knee to fashion's craziest decree. Girls dress like boys and boys ape girls, their hair done in effeminate curls or looking like a wornout mop. One wonders where it's going to stop! Some have it hanging from their ears. I'd like to grab a pair of shears and catch them when they are asleep . . . I'd crop them close as fresh-shorn sheep!

And, boys and girls who think they're sweet on one another walk the street with arms around each other's necks! 'Tis only thus we know the sex of one is not the same as t'other. Quite plainly they're not sis and brother, for soon they kiss and give no heed to those who watch the brazen deed. I'm not, by any means, a prude but that is just a mite too crude!

Both sexes wear the skin-tight pants, their nether contours to enhance, 'though plainly they're not fitting for the feminine posterior and do their utmost to perplex one when it comes to guessing sex. I'd label them, where one could see, with good big letters, HE or SHE.

But girls, I think, would lovelier be arrayed in femininity and boys would get their best effects if hair and clothes proclaimed their sex. Of course, they're quite within their rights . . . but why look like hermaphrodites?

Right here I'll sign off for today, 'though still there's much I'd like to say; but, if this contribution's passed, my next remarks will be my last.

SEW SIMPLE

Now shorts made to fit with pattern adjustments.

Dear Eunice Farmer:

All the shorts I make bag in front. Please tell me what is wrong. —Mrs. B.J.S.

Dear Mrs. B.J.S.:

The crotch seam was cut too low for you. The simplest way to alter a pattern to correct this is to make a fold in your pattern above the crotch seam in front and back. Add the amount you have taken out at the lower end of the legs or they will probably be too short. It's simple to make the crotch seam lower if you have cut it too high, but very difficult to make it higher after it has been cut.

Many of you have shouted for years, "Why don't they make a pants pattern that really fits?" Now they have great news for all of us.

If you haven't a perfect figure (and who has?) a master pattern maker and designer has finally come up with all the answers.

This new pattern doesn't come in standard sizes. One pattern fits everyone from 32 to 44-inch hips. The instructions are very detailed and whether you have large hips, flat hips, short crotch, small waist or whatever, you can change this one pattern to fit you.

Also, this pattern makes 11 styles of pants from bell bottoms, hip huggers, etc., to classic Jamaica or Bermudas. I know it sounds too good to be true, but you'll find that the extra expense you put into this new pattern will save you time and many dollars later. Ask for it at your favorite pattern department. (It's not made by one of the popular pattern companies.)

If you can't find it in your city, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Sew Simple, in care of this newspaper, and I will send you more information. This is the season for shorts, slacks and all types of "pants," so let's get busy today and perfect a pattern that really works.

B.C. Women In Quilt Contest

Quilt-making is far from a lost art in British Columbia, and the Women's Activities sub-committee of the Provincial Centennial Committee is out to prove it.

As one of the centennial projects of special interest to women, the sub-committee has organized a 1967 Centennial quilt competition, open to all women residents of the province.

Rules governing the competition have been approved by the British Columbia Centennial Committee, which has authorized cash prizes totalling $1,500.

Entry forms, together with rules and score sheets are being distributed to local centennial committees and are available on request.

Rules call for an applique quilt, one on which the design is imposed and sewn on the hand-quilted quilt.

The design is to be of a centennial or historical theme relative to district, province of British Columbia, or Canada.

Prizes will be awarded in 17 provincial districts. Three winners from each district will be judged for the top awards of $500, $200 and $100 at the Pacific National Exhibition at Vancouver in 1967. The winning quilt will become the property of the provincial centennial committee, and will be displayed in the provincial archives and museum at Victoria.

Hemlines Go Up—Hair Grows Longer

PARIS (UPI) — "Don't cut any more," screamed the headline in a Paris newspaper. That summed up one shock of the Paris winter fashion shows that ended Thursday — the revival of long "page boy" hair-dos.

After seasons of jagged geometric haircuts inspired by Andre Courreges, Paris hairdressers and designers conspired to put the mannequins in the style parade in more feminine coiffures.

Some houses including Dior showed the shoulder-length curled-under page boy for day, topped by a beret. At other houses the girls wore short hair with day clothes and added false page boy hair pieces for evening.

The accessories of the winter collections brought more and quicker changes to women's looks than the clothes themselves.

BRIDGE LESSON

By JACOBY and SON

Sometimes bridge players argue about success. South studied dummy for about 10 minutes before playing the first card from dummy. Then he won the trick in his own hand and played out dummy's ace and king of clubs. When both opponents followed to the second club South conceded a club trick and claimed his contract.

North remarked, "Your play worked, but as a matter of strict mathematics you should have won the spade in dummy and taken a double diamond finesse. Unless West held both king and queen of diamonds that play would have worked. There is a 76 per cent chance of finding one of two honors in the East hand. There is only a 68 per cent chance of breaking the clubs 3-2."

South replied, "The actual chance of success with the club play was 71 per cent. I don't play in a vacuum and would have abandoned clubs had they broken 5-0 but you overlook the fact that my club play gave me a considerable extra chance. Suppose East showed out on the second club. I would go after diamonds and have a 24 per cent chance of making my contract. East could hold both diamond honors. Or West might show out on the second club. Then I would still have a 52 per cent chance of success because I would make the hand if honors divided."

North and South have appealed to us for an opinion and our answer is that as a matter of strict mathematics South's line of play is superior. His combination play works out to better than 20 per cent.

LOCALS CAN'T JUMP ON BEATLE BAN WAGON

Ban the Beatles?

Who cares?

Not local disc jockeys.

Local radio stations can't very well jump on the Beatles "ban wagon" set in motion by U.S. radio station inflamed at Beatle John Lennon's controversial remarks about Jesus.

There's nothing to ban. Spokesmen for all three Victoria AM radio stations today said the furry-pated quartette had never been given air time.

"Up to now," said CJVI air staffer Doug Short our musical standard has prohibited playing the Beatles."

CFAX announcer Kirk Davis said "we play music written by the Beatles, but not the Beatles themselves."

Dave Hill, news director-announcer at CKDA, who described his station musical policy as "middle of the road" said his station played only "refinements" of the Beatles.

Loophole In B.C. Motor Act

VANCOUVER (CP) — The magistrate responsible for Vancouver motorists getting five days of ticket-free parking two months ago found another loophole in the Motor Vehicle Act Friday.

Magistrate Les Bewley dismissed a charge of failing to stop at a stop sign against Ainslie W. Bagnall of Vancouver and ruled that Section 175 of the MVA, which deals with stop signs at railway crossings, is not explicit enough.

The matistrate said the section makes it clear that a motorist must stop a minimum of 15 feet in front of a crossing but fails to mention the maximum.

"That stop may be six blocks or six miles before the crossing," Magistrate Bewley said.

"It's left to the motorist just how far ahead he should stop.

"I take it you stopped somewhere before coming to that sign?" he asked Bagnall.

"Yes," answered the accused.

On June 1, Magistrate Bewley dismissed a charge against a motorist that resulted in police banning tickets on certain traffic offences for five days.

He ruled a change in the MVA had deleted a section dealing with owner responsibility and police were told not to ticket overtime parkers and other traffic offences unless they could identify the drivers. The ban was dropped when Attorney-General Bonner said there was no need for it.

Fire Truck Mishap Mars Peach Parade

PENTICTON (CP)—A fireman was rushed to hospital Thursday after falling at the feet of Premier Bennett from a float in the Peach Festival parade.

Jerry Lunberg of Penticton fire department was treated and released from hospital after the seating on the back of the fire department's "hillbilly float" on which he was riding tumbled at the foot of the reviewing stand.

Standing on the reviewing stand at the time of the incident were Premier Bennett, Penticton Mayor Maurice Finnerty, festival president Frank McDonald, Edmonton Mayor Vince Dantzer and other guests and their wives.

Witnesses said the old fire truck turned into a float made a rush to the reviewing stand and turned away sharply, sending Lunberg and assorted decorations flying, scattering spectators.

Lunberg who was wearing a leg cast suffered minor cuts and bruises.

Accompanying "hillbilly" firemen and city workmen hurriedly cleared away the debris. The parade was not interrupted.

A man who drove his car after being warned by police not to was fined $300 for impaired driving Friday.

In addition to the fine, Robert Gust, 1042 Lodge, had his driving licence suspended.

When Gust entered his car, Constable Louis Truesdale told him he would be arrested for impaired driving if he drove away.

The accused then said he would go to a nearby restaurant for something to eat but he was warned again not to drive that night.

After circling the block in their cruiser, officers found Gust's car gone. They caught up to him on Bay Street and during the pursuit said he made a right turn without stopping at a red signal light.

Early Election Call Draws Opposition Fire

—(AP Wirephoto).

NEWLYWEDS Patrick Nugent and his bride, President Johnson's daughter Luci, leave the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington today. Wedding was followed by a big reception at the White House.

Three-Ring Ceremony As Luci, Pat Married

WASHINGTON (AP) — In one of Washington's social affairs of the age, Luci Baines Johnson became Mrs. Patrick J. Nugent today. A proud president looked on.

The vows between the 19-year-old daughter of President Lyndon B. Johnson and her 23-year-old groom were taken in the giant shrine of the Immaculate Conception, national church of Roman Catholicism. Present was a select congregation of 700, including both notables and hitherto obscure folk from Waukegan, Ill., Nugent's hometown.

Luci shook slightly as she said "I do." During the ceremony she had her gaze alternately fixed on Patrick and on a tremendous mosaic of the Saviour behind the high altar.

The exact time of the wedding was 12:42 p.m. EDT. Rev. John A. Kuzinkas of Chicago administered the vows. The couple knelt before him on white pillows at the edge of the altar platform.

The bride's long, starched illusion veil spread out behind her. Her long-sleeved gown was of white rosepoint alencon appliques, lightly embroidered with pearls.

Toward the end, before the recessional, Luci made a short detour. In a little ceremony dear to her heart, she walked to a chapel near the chancel and laid one of her two bouquets before a mosaic of St. Agatha, a patron saint of nursing.

Then the walk back down the aisle and off to the feast and reception at the White House. A big tent had been erected on the south lawn, decorated with paper pink poppies looking real. Gilt chairs, and tables bearing silver punch bowls, dotted the greensward. Giant red roses of paper were wired to holly hedges.

CAKE 7 TIERS

Inside the mansion, a seven-tiered wedding cake towered between portraits of George and Martha Washington.

It was not only a double-ring wedding — it was a triple. Luci, with slight of hand only a determined bride could perform, ended up with her engagement ring sandwiched between two wedding circlets.

She did this without ever taking off the engagement ring. The feat is performed by putting the ring fingers of right and left hands together, end to end, and sliding the engagement ring from one to the other. Patrick got only one ring.

Wedding Picketed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group protesting the war in Viet Nam began picketing the Roman Catholic National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception today hours before the scheduled noon wedding of Luci Baines Johnson.

Couple Found on Drifting Boat

RCMP Probe Deaths

RCMP are investigating the deaths of a young couple whose bodies were found aboard a drifting boat in Georgia Strait early today.

The 34-foot gillnetter was discovered at the mouth of Jervis Inlet at 2:45 a.m. today by the tugboat Monarch II from Campbell River.

A Powell River RCMP spokesman said there is no indication of foul play, but an autopsy has been ordered on the bodies of the young man and woman.

Their names and the name of the boat cannot be released until next-of-kin have been notified.

It is understood the boat is registered in Vancouver and was on its way back from the fishing grounds at Rivers Inlet.

Capt. W. J. Lebans of the Monarch II reported he came across the drifting boat while towing a log boom up-Island.

When he discovered the bodies he put a line on the boat and notified Powell River RCMP. A police boat intercepted the tug and the boat was towed to Powell River this morning.

Jetliner Pilot Dies at Controls

TOKYO (UPI)—The pilot of a KLM Royal Dutch Airways DC8 jetliner died at the controls early today seconds before the big jet was to touch down at Tokyo airport. A fast-thinking co-pilot wrested the controls from the dead man to avert an almost certain crash.

Officials said the plane, en route from Amsterdam to Manila with 56 passengers aboard, was only three to four seconds from touch down when the pilot, Capt. G. H. De Groot, died of an apparent heart attack.

LANDING ABORTED

In one lightning move, the co-pilot, C. G. De Jager, 37, applied full power and aborted the landing.

De Jager took the plane back up to 3,000 feet, had the crew pull the dead pilot from his seat and brought the big jet in for a perfect landing with the aid of the navigator.

The co-pilot said the jet had passed the final landing approach beacon and was less than 150 feet in the air when De Groot slumped across the controls.

Authorities said the pilot, who had passed a required physical examination June 27, apparently died of a heart attack.

HIROSHIMA REMEMBERS

HIROSHIMA (Reuters) — Hiroshima, a bustling city carved from shattered ruins, stopped all activity for 60 seconds today to observe in silence the 21st anniversary of the dropping of the first atomic bomb. Of an estimated 420,000 persons in the city when the nine-foot cylindrical bomb fell, only 176,987 survivors were accounted for.

Complicity In Viet Protested

OTTAWA (CP) — A group of 35, mostly university students, paraded on Parliament Hill today in what had been billed as a mass demonstration against the war in Viet Nam.

Their march began at the Supreme Court of Canada building a half-block west of Parliament Hill where organizers had a large stack of placards on hand bearing slogans of protest against the United States' intervention in the war and "Canadian complicity."

About half of the large signs had to be loaded back into a car because of the small turnout.

The demonstrators handed out pamphlets to tourists gathering for the changing of the guard.

Jeer Negroes

HOPEWELL, Va. (AP) — About 40 Negroes held a protest march and grievance meeting on the steps of Hopewell's Municipal building today amid the jeers and shouts of Ku Klux Klansmen.

There was no violence but tension ran high in the downtown area of this southside Virginia manufacturing city as the Negroes, including a sizable mumber of children, marched about two miles to city hall and mounted the steps between ranks of robed klansmen.

VOTE RECORDS TO FALL

Records in number of voters, size of legislature and election expenses are expected to be set in the Sept. 12 provincial vote.

The current registration drive — which closes officially Saturday, Aug. 13 — is expected to see the largest number of British Columbians in history recorded on the voters' lists.

●

A total of 873,140 voters were registered for the last election and 69.7 per cent of them turned out to elect 32 Socreds, 14 New Democrats and five Liberals.

At dissolution Friday, there was only one vacancy caused by the death of George McLeod (SC — North Okanagan).

There will be three more seats, to make a record 55-seat legislature, filled by the present election campaign as a result of redistribution which went into effect automatically Friday. Under it, the southern end of Vancouver Island has been altered with Victoria reduced from a three-seat to a two-seat riding.

●

The new house will mark a historic departure in which urban MLAs will outnumber those from predominately rural constituenciees.

The coming campaign also is expected to break expense records.

The drain from the public treasury is expected to soar above the 89-cents-per-voter cost that saw the total reach $539,446 in the last election, because of the massive registration drive, and the larger returning staff needed.

●

Up to 8,000 persons will be involved in supervising balloting and counting the votes, it has been estimated.

Parties are bound to spend more on campaigns because of the larger number of seats at stake. Last time the Socreds reported campaign expenditures of $292,000; Tories $83,000; Liberals $57,000; and NDP $49,000.

Bennett Sets September 12

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

Political opponents today labelled the Sept. 12 provincial general election as Premier Bennett's "unnecessary election."

The premier announced the vote—his fifth election writ since coming to power in 1952—at a press conference in the Hotel Vancouver Friday night.

New Democratic Party spokesman Alex Macdonald today blasted the call as "an unnecessary election" that proved the premier put politics first.

He lashed at the lack of any issue and claimed the administration had two more years with an uncompleted program.

The Vancouver-East MLA spoke in place of Opposition Leader Robert Strachan, who was on his way back to Nanaimo from a holiday in a remote area near 100 Mile House in the Cariboo as a result of the election call.

Liberal Leader Ray Perault and Progressive Conservative Association President Stuart Fleming also criticized the premier's election call as totally unnecessary.

Mr. Perrault said that ecent surveys show a vast majority of the people are opposed to an election at this time and they well could "give Premier Bennett a shock" with their resentment.

Most Registration Ready

Mr. Bennett, in announcing the election, said completion of most voter registration efforts in the wake of the redistribution bill, was one of the reasons for calling the election.

The election will be the fifth since Premier Bennett's Social Credit government was first elected in 1952. The last one was Sept. 30, 1963, when the Socreds elected 33, NDP 14 and Liberals five.

Mr. Bennett said that though the government could stay in office five years, it was traditional to hold an election every three years or so.

Although there has been speculation in B.C. since March that there would be an election Sept. 12, Mr. Bennett said the date was set only Friday afternoon and the proclamation of dissolution signed by Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes later Friday in Victoria, in the premier's absence.

So far, there are 25 NDP candidates nominated and 35 Liberals either nominated or about to be. No Socred or Conservative candidates have been chosen yet.

The actual campaigns are not expected to get underway until after next week.

Mr. Bennett said he would start his campaign in Campbell River at an unspecified date. Mr. Strachan is expected to announce his plans next week.

Mr. Perrault said he would open his campaign after returning from the scheduled Aug. 12-13 meeting of the four western Liberal provincial leaders in Saskatoon.

Stuart Fleming, president of the Progressive Conservative Association, did not say whether he would campaign but indicated the Tories will field only a token contingent of nominees.

"Premier Bennett has proved again that he puts politics first," Mr. Macdonald said.

'Let Province Down'

"He has called an unnecessary election in the early days of August when the people of B.C. are on holiday and enjoying the summer, while Mr. Bennett is hoping to tip-toe through the flowers into another term of office before it's too late.

"He has his majority and two years to complete a program—if he had one. Instead he's spending the people's money on an expensive election as he did when he bought a toy for the minister of highways in the form of a Lear jet."

Mr. Macdonald said Premier Bennett already has let down the province badly "by attending a strawberry social of the Socred

DR. MARTIN KING FELLED BY ROCK

Frenzied Whites Attack Negro Marchers

CHICAGO (AP)—Racial violence wracked an all-white neighborhood Friday for the second time this week and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., felled by a rock, said the eruption was fostered by the worst hate he has ever seen.

King promised the marchers would return to the area.

More than 6,000 frenzied white residents of the southwest side Chicago Lawn neighborhood rioted during and after a march by 800 civil rights demonstrators.

The civil rights group is demanding open housing. The Chicago Lawn residents say they had built up the neighborhood and that Negroes would degrade it.

A 19-year-old white youth was wounded in the shoulder by a knife thrown towards King during a march. The youth was released after hospital treatment.

Police arrested 39 white persons, including three women. Hospitals said 28 persons were brought in with injuries, including two persons on stretchers, an unconscious man, a little girl whose eyes were cut by flying glass and three policemen.

"It hurts, but it's not an injury," King shouted above the cursing, screaming, mob in Marquette Park after he fell to one knee when a rock hit his head.

"I've never seen such hostility in a demonstration before and I've been all over the south," King said.

"I have to do this—to expose myself—to bring this hate into the open," King shouted to reporters. "I have never seen such hate—not in Mississippi or Alabama—as I see here in Chicago."

King, chairman of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, got to his feet, ripped off his tie and began forming the demonstrators into a line for the march.

The violence occurred in a Polish - Irish - Lithuanian middle-class neighborhood. The residents are mostly Roman Catholic.

The demonstration began in the racially-tense area when four groups went to separate real estate offices to picket. When the demonstrators milled into Marquette Park, a scenic, recreation area, to form for the march, they were met with jeers, catcalls, curses, rocks and bottles from the white residents, mostly youths.

When the demonstrators—white and Negro men and women, priests and nuns—knelt to pray, firecrackers were thrown into the kneeling group, and the crowd screamed obscenities and waved banners.

When the Time Seems Ripe

PREMIER BENNETT HAS ended months of speculation and provocative queries as to when he would call a provincial election, but he has not yet answered the question of why.

There is no major reason why he should decide to go to the people when his five-year term is little more than half over. But it is his constitutional right to set the date of an election whenever he wishes, and September 12 must be accepted by all parties and the public — which will pay for the balloting — regardless of the lack of apparent need.

Mr. Bennett will be wise to avoid any specific issue and fight the election on the generalized theme of his party's record and his personal popularity. The more than a decade of boom conditions which this province has enjoyed coincides with the Social Credit administration's period in office. The government will naturally take credit for this, although it should rightly claim only a guiding influence on the progress of one of the most richly endowed areas on the continent. The general prosperity has been a large factor in keeping Mr. Bennett in power for the last 10 years. Provincial revenues have been so high that almost every type of public project could be given substantial appropriations — and this despite some reductions in the individual's tax burden.

It is on specific items that Mr. Bennett will run into his sharpest opposition on the hustings. His refusal to open the pressing matter of municipal financing has been a standing cause of criticism and resentment. His personalized Santa Claus technique of annual individual home-owner grants has tended to tie voters to him, but it is a poor alternative to a proper system of providing municipalities with needed funds. His open battle with hospitals needing funds for expansion and improved operation has earned him rightful criticism, as has his government's deliberate procrastination in regard to provision of mental health needs. The steadily mounting provincial debt commitments and the prolonged pouring of money into his vast hydro-power schemes raise the prospect of potential problems which Mr. Bennett's early election call may well be designed to avoid — as an election issue—for five more years.

The government's often tardy handling of welfare programs, its only partial answer to the heavy demand for educational expansion, its policy of permitting commercialization in the large public parks — such items all contain the seeds of discontent that can sprout at the polls.

But the government's main danger may lie in the hazards that afflict any regime that has been in power for fourteen years without an opposition strong enough to place its programs in doubt. Inevitably there has been a growing arrogance, as reflected in the actions of a number of Mr. Bennett's ministers; an increasing feeling among its own members that the government can do no wrong; a rising tendency to ignore public requests and public criticism on the grounds that the government knows best.

There is an indefinable point at which the public begins to feel this: a point at which the government's greatest asset — the lack of effective opposition strength — can start to become the cause of its ultimate downfall.

Mr. Bennett may be gauging this, too, in his early election call. Harder for him to assess — but perhaps most important of all — is the trend in public opinion that has been demonstrated in the last few federal and provincial elections in Canada. That is a drift toward resentment and confusion on the part of the voter at large, an illogical but nonetheless real urge to "throw the rascals out," to rebel against the status quo but also to distrust all promises, whether of the ins or the outs. Such a tendency has resulted in minority governments, stalemated polls and a loss of direction and purpose throughout the nation.

For Mr. Bennett the question is: can he outride this turbulent recalcitrance — if indeed it is as strong in British Columbia as elsewhere — in what may be his last personal appeal to the voters of this province? Or will the national trend show up in a notable loss of Social Credit seats?

Steel Sets the Pace

ADMISSION BY A FRUSTRATED President Johnson that he is powerless to roll back the latest round of steel price increases may be the signal other basic industries have been waiting for to join the higher-price parade. And the President has a diminishing arsenal of weapons with which to hit back.

At the same time it is becoming increasingly evident that the presidential guidelines on wages are not going to hold up. The airlines settlement proposal which Mr. Johnson endorsed, only to see it rejected by the union rank and file, was well over the amount suggested by administration advisers as suitable for the economy. With this example before them, other labor groups are unlikely to be willing to settle for the guideline increases.

Thus the United States, its economy swollen with a heavy domestic demand and further buying pressure from the Viet Nam war, is obviously rolling toward the heights of inflation. The remarkable period of nearly six years of unprecedented growth accompanied by comparatively stable prices is evidently at an end.

The steel price increases were a particularly bitter blow for the President since steel is so basic to the economy. The boost will be reflected in consumer goods, industrial machinery and in war material. The last time the industry attempted to move its price structure upward, eight months ago, the President, to achieve a partial roll-back, was able to use the government's steel stockpile and threats to halt government buying from firms which raised prices.

He was able to halt increases in aluminum prices, and just recently in molybdenum, by using the same techniques. But the war and domestic demand have worn the stockpiles down, and threats to cut government buying are limited when the government cannot do without vital supplies for its armaments program.

Additionally, the very modest monetary measures utilized by the administration to cool off the domestic boom have had very little effect on industry in general. Mr. Johnson's refusal to consider tax increases several months ago at a time when they would have been most effective may seem now to have been the wrong decision, one taken for political reasons despite the possible economic results.

Canadians wrestling with their own problem of cooling off a boom which threatens to become dangerously inflationary will be apprehensive about developments in the United States. Economic pressures in that country spill over into ours all too easily. It could well be that Ottawa will have to take sterner steps than it has so far to curtail consumer and industrial demand.

Excellent Appointment

APPOINTMENT OF DR. KENNETH Wright as director of the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory in Saanich, to succeed his close friend and admired colleague, the late Dr. R. M. Petrie, should be warmly approved in this community and in scientific circles throughout Canada.

His capacities have been proved on many occasions. His familiarity with the work conducted at Little Saanich Mountain stems from long association with that institution.

The selection of Dr. Wright, in addition to acknowledging his own abilities and accomplishments, should guarantee continuity in the important fields of astronomy carried out here and maintain the widely recognized value of the observatory's works.

U.S. MILITARY AID

By RICHARD PURSER

THE United States government spends the better part of a billion dollars a year on the military assistance section of its foreign aid program. The money is officially spent "to promote the foreign policy, security, and general welfare of the United States by assisting people of the world in their efforts toward internal and external security."

Purser

American legislators are of several minds about what those words mean. To some they mean fighting communism by training and equipping anti-Communist armies and police forces abroad. To others, they mean playing off foreign countries against each other through arms deals, for example by supplying arms to both Israel and Jordan, to both India and Pakistan.

To Make Program Palatable

In administration requests for funds, the military aid program has for years been included in the same bill with the economic aid program, for foreign nations. This was to make the total program more palatable to the many congressional opponents of foreign economic aid, who might vote against a purely economic aid bill but would vote for a separate military aid bill on the grounds that it, and not the other, would truly help fight communism.

This year, the administration suggested splitting the program into two bills. This was accepted by the foreign relations committee of the Senate, where support of the economic aid program (at least in principle) is strong, but not by the corresponding committee of the House of Representatives, where opposition to it is strong. The whole House has not yet acted on its committee's bill.

The Senate committee—after hiving off the economic section of the administration's aid request for separate consideration — found itself facing a $917 million dollar military aid request. (This does not count $636 million in military aid for South Viet Nam, handled under defence rather than foreign aid appropriations.) The committee knocked the figure down to $892 millions.

Sliced $100,000

Then, on July 27, the bill with the committee's already reduced figure came to the Senate floor. Sen. Frank Church (Democrat —Idaho), just two days past his 42nd birthday, rose at once and proposed an amendment in a few simple words: "Strike out '$892.000,000' and insert '$792,000,000'."

Within a few short hours despite the strongest efforts of both Democratic and Republican Senate leaders, both the Church amendment and the amended bill were overwhelmingly passed. The administration found itself with $125 million less than it felt it needed for military aid abroad, and the Senate had staged yet another successful revolt against President Johnson.

Proliferation

What was bothering the senators this time? Sen. Church, who looks even younger than he is and who has become an effective voice of moderate dissent during his ten years of Senate service, explained. The foreign relations committee, of which he is a member, has been trying for years to taper off the proliferating military aid program (this year's administration request was $39 million over last year's), yet "it continues to grow like crabgrass." At the height of the cold war in 1950, 14 countries received U.S. military aid. Now 67 countries receive it — "The policy of arming the indigent," as Dr. John Kenneth Galbraith called it in committee hearings.

This growth of military aid had little to do with opposing communism, as Sen. Church saw it. His proposal was for a modest deceleration in spending, to match the committee's proposed reduction to 40 in the number of countries receiving military aid. The $792 million would be more than ample for aiding legitimate defence needs of countries on the communist periphery, and the few real — "as distinguished from a good many imaginary" — problems of internal security in countries elsewhere.

But he hoped it would not be sufficient "to shore up regressive regimes, to burden poor countries with military establishments they cannot afford, or to contribute to regional arms races or local wars."

Sen. Church dismantled official justifications for heavy military assistance to Latin America. "Castro has been a godsend," he said, "so useful that if he did not exist, he might have to be invented." On one occasion the Pentagon sent the committee a document justifying military aid to Uruguay because of Uruguay's role in the defence of the Panama Canal.

Answered by Map

"We have not heard any more of this argument since we sent back a map."

No Latin nation has gone Communist since Castro came to power, but eight legitimate Latin governments have been overthrown by their own military. The weakest official argument is that if the U.S. doesn't give arms to Latin America, somebody else will. By "somebody else," Sen. Church cracked, "is meant Western Europe."

The senator drew wide support from his colleagues, who provided numerous examples of military aid inanities in other parts of the world, and he won the vote. It was a signal to President Johnson, Secretary McNamara and Co. to be a little choosier about the recipients of U.S. weaponry.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

At this time of the year we seem to be pestered with wasps or hornets, often called bees by children.

This little animal is perhaps one of the very few "dangerous" animals of our countryside.

The wasp is a social animal and lives in colonies; some are in the ground while others are found in trees or on bushes.

The colonies exist for only one season; the males and the workers die in the fall. The queen hibernates and starts a new colony in the spring.

Do you know that the male wasps do not sting? But as they are hard to tell from the workers it best to avoid them all.

Wasps make their nest out of paper composed of wood that is taken from posts or logs. They do not use decayed wood, but the fiber that they take is made into a paste by the action of their jaws and gradually built up to the nest we see. Wasps were possibly the first paper makers in the world.

They are first class architects and engineers, for their nest is made up of layers that form an air-conditioned home.

The combs are made of the same material and are six-sided. There is no waste space and the columns are very strong. The cells are in layers, so perhaps wasps were the first high-rise builders too.

Social wasp are predators and feed upon other insects, especially flies which they masticate and feed to their young. They are very fond of sweet things and will raid an orchard in search of decaying fruit.

If the colony should have to be enlarged they will tear away the inner layers of the nest and build new ones on the outside, or if living in the ground they will enlarge the hole.

If you are hiking along a woodland trail at this time of the year, take an onion with you and if stung apply the juice of the raw onion to the sting. It will help relieve the pain.

Reference the questions and answers under the heading Ask The Times in your issue of 1st. inst. and particularly the words "what was it (the European Common Market) formed for?"

The president of the European Common Market, Mr. Walter Hallstein, who should know, answers this question thus.

"We are not in business to promote tariff preferences or to establish a discriminatory club to form a larger market to make us richer, or a trading block to further our commercial interests. We are not in business at all, we are in politics. Any nation which comes into the common market is accepting a far-reaching political commitment."

FLEUR DE LIS AND JACK

Some acquaintance with Canadian history and with the words of the men who built Canada would do much to clear the minds and soothe the feelings of your many irate correspondents who reacted with such fury against the sentiments expressed by the youngsters from Quebec who visited Victoria recently and spoke too loudly about the many "flags of England" they saw here.

A light reading of our history would show clearly that the French element in Canada puts this country, their own nation, ahead of France, while the British element here still puts England ahead of their own country. This historical disparity of national sentiment is the source of the continuing friction between the two great cultural elements of Canada.

The disparity is not at all surprising, in the light of history. The French in Europe broke with their history, and changed their flag from the ancient fleur de lis on blue standard of France's kings to the present tricolor. The British still have their monarchy, and their flag. But note that it is the flag of ancient France that is flown in Quebec. There, it does not represent France as the Union Jack which our young visitors saw here represents England.

This is the explanation for their quite natural reaction, and for the bitter fury which they provoked. — F. B. Cahill, 2199 Neil.

A Voice From Quebec

Granby La Voix de l'Est

The provinces have adopted a favorable attitude to the meeting of the Canadian committee on fiscal matters next September. This committee met last in December, 1965, and since then has been collecting information on the expected revenues and deficits of the federal and provincial governments during the period from 1967 to 1972.

But will it be possible in the course of this meeting to work out a new formula for dividing up revenues between the federal and the provincial governments during these five years? . . .

Quebec's claims are already looked on as a manifestation of separatism in the province or as the result of a racial conflict. But this is false. Her demands are justified by the enormous expenses placed on the provincial government by the necessities of education, health, social security and road construction.

The provinces of Ontario, Manitoba and British Columbia now are following Quebec's example. They are making stronger and more urgent demands for a larger part of the fiscal pie. They hold, as does Quebec, that their constitutional responsibilities are growing and demand greater revenues.

But at the same time a stiffening has become noticeable in the attitude of the federal government towards the provinces. Its intention seems to be to modify its former conciliatory attitude, particularly in areas where expenses are shared between the provinces and the federal government.

FIRST PRINCIPLES IN SCHOOLS

Concentrating Again on Cultivation of the Intellect

By ART STOTT

UNTIL very recently British Columbia's educational system accepted, among other obligations, a certain duty to develop "the good citizen" in and through its schools. To this end programs were devised lending emphasis to the stimulation of social consciousness among pupils, with due recognition of their differences in ability, but faith in their potential to become useful and productive members of a stable society adhering to accepted concepts of community and other virtues.

When you discuss the aims and purposes of education today with provincial leaders of our school system, you sense a subtle change in attitude. The ideal of "the good citizen" is still highly respected. But ideas on the means by which children may be encouraged to achieve that status through the school system vary from those of recent practice.

Sensitive Human Beings

The authorities are always conscious of the fact that the students are not cold statistics, groups of numbers to be moved here or there, inanimate material to be shaped and formed without regard to sensitivities. They know the students are warm human beings with all the emotions of human beings.

The educators keep this in mind as they rethink the role of the school—from kindergarten to graduate studies — and try to determine just what the school should be doing and what should be left to other agencies, some of them not yet in existence.

The analysis is natural at this point in time. Our society has shown an inclination to turn over to the schools more and more of the obligations formerly shouldered by the family and other institutions whose influence on the young people has waned as the young have rejected old and often cherished values—or at least the forms those values have held.

Easy Course

Turning responsibilities over to the schools was the easy course. Schools are accessible, trustees are easily approached, the parents are voters with the ability to apply political pressures on school boards and senior administrations. These influences have certainly altered the structure of formal education in the last quarter-century.

The official educators, those in charge of the system, now seem to be returning to first principles.

"We are trying to produce educated individuals from those who enter the system at one end and leave it at the other," says a spokesman. "Our task, as we see it, is to communicate the best in modern knoweldge to the oncoming generation and teach its members to use that knowledge — teach them how to think. We are hammering away at the cultivation of the intellect, believing that an intelligent society will take realistic action for its own survival."

The provincial authorities want to "provide superlative education at the lowest possible unit cost." They are well aware of difficulties in reaching that objective. There are not enough superlative teachers for the task. There are other deficiencies, including those of finance. But even if funds were unlimited, they would not expect to purchase perfection.

They have a full understanding of the gigantic volume of knowledge available today, the need for selecting from it what is essential and of presenting the essential in a form which the individual can absorb.

"We would like to produce the cultured person," runs the current attitude, "but the image must be modern. Today we have to give our students an appreciation and some understanding of modern developments and modern techniques."

This does not mean that today's school will tailor the student to be immediately efficient in the operation of the most recently invented machine installed by industry or commerce. It should, on the other hand, through communication of a selection of basic information, concepts and methods at a level geared to the student's ability, help him to increase the use of his intellect in mental and manipulative skills.

Not Giving Answers

The purpose here is not to give the answer to a specific problem — because the problem may not yet have been posed — but to develop the intelligence to cope with the problem, or the task, when it emerges.

The significance of the new trend in official educational thinking is obvious. It is not to try to draw road maps into the unknown land of the future based solely on projections from known country of the past, but to develop the capacities and the resources to surmount the obstacles, as yet unseen, which lie ahead.

This places overwhelming faith in the cultivated intellect. And obviously not all individuals are endowed with the same intellectual equipment.

Recognition of the latter fact suggests that schools of the future will follow the course of the ungraded class. In it — and the swing is well under way in British Columbia — the child will advance at his own pace. This, in itself, requires a special stimulant to encourage the student to be a self-learner. The stimulant, it appears, will be the development of all possible appetizing elements in subject-material and presentation, involving the employment of all useful aids.

Casualties

In practice the changing attitude toward formal education will leave casualties in its wake. The classical image of the traditional scholar may fade. Much of the activity calculated to mold citizenship and social consciousness may be pushed into the background.

The emphasis appears to be on the intensive cultivation of the intellect in a way to give practical use to the assimilation of knowledge. This does not mean devotion to the "trade school," nor to the limitations of vocational education.

But it does imply concentration on the nourishment of the intellect in the conviction that a thinking individual will have the best chance of adjusting to the problems of life in the home, on the job, in the community, in the nation, in the world.

CN Men Return To Jobs

MONTREAL (CP) — Handlers of CNR express freight have ended their wildcat strike with a vote to resume work — at least for 11 days.

The strikers voted for an immediate work resumption Friday night, ending a stoppage that had started Monday and helped snarl freight traffic between Montreal and Toronto.

The men had been reported filing back to their jobs throughout Friday.

Originally 1,200 in number, 400 of them participated in the formal meeting Friday night.

They said they will stick to their CNR duties until Aug. 17, when a strike following the filing of a conciliation report on a long-standing dispute will be legally possible.

The strikers are members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Transport and General Workers (CLC).

On Aug. 10, Mr. Justice C. A. Cameron of Ottawa, federal conciliator in a dispute connected with contract negotiations involving their union, is scheduled to bring in his conciliation report.

PROTEST DELAYS

The wildcat strikers walked out in protest against alleged delays in the handing down of the report.

A strike by the union would not be legal until seven days after the report is made public.

The CNR strike had spread to other company freight handlers in Toronto, where more than half the 425 express workers at the CNR's downtown terminal were off the job Friday. A wildcat strike by them had started Thursday.

With the work resumption in Montreal, the CNR announced the lifting of all embargoes on CNR freight shipments between Montreal and Toronto.

The Maritime region, which had also been affected, was back to normal too, the railway officials said.

Noranda Seeking Piece of Brenda

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Stock Exchange has been asked to approve a deal by which Noranda Mines would purchase 1,000 shares of Brenda Mines for $8 a share, the exchange disclosed Friday.

Brenda sold in the $10 range this week.

The transaction is designed to provide cash for Brenda and would give Noranda a position in the company now developing a low-grade large-scale molybdenum-copper deposit near Peachland in the Okanagan.

As of June Brenda reported that of 5,000,000 shares authorized, 2,150,000 were issued. At that time the company reported it had $1,300,000 in the treasury.

It was reported that the Noranda deal would be conditional on acceptance of a feasibility report expected in late November or early December.

Mine Boom Boosts Trading at Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — The value of shares traded on Vancouver Stock Exchange in the first seven months of the year jumped to $233,770,751 from $139,191,945 a year ago, exchange figures disclosed today.

The increase was led by the mining section which has recorded a $79,000,000 gain in the January-July period.

The same section has also been mainly responsible for increased trading this year. At the end of July over 220,000,000 shares had changed hands as against 142,000,000 last year. Mines were the reason for 66,000,000 of this gain.

In July, value of mining stocks traded this year was double that of 1965.

Altogether 16,200,000 mining shares were moved for a value of nearly $15,000,000. In July, 1965, 8,300,000 shares traded on the mining section for a value of $5,700,000.

In the January-June period industrials traded 3,136,474 shares worth $36,889,017 compared with 2,573,441 worth $32,290,406 in the same period of 1965.

Oils traded 29,420,326 shares worth $19,522,038 in the period compared with 19,536,000 worth $8,847,040 in the January-June period of 1965.

CPA Eyes Planes

PENTICTON (CP)—Canadian Pacific Airlines is considering buying up to $25,000,000 worth of new jet aircraft for its B.C. and Yukon routes. CPA President J. C. Gilmer, said the company is at present evaluating new aircraft for its domestic routes. Included in the survey are the Douglas DC-9, the Boeing 737 and the Boeing 727.

Lower Earnings Becomes Habit And Market Prices Slip Down

By LARRY DWORKIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Industrials soured on Canada's stock markets this week as a number of large Canadian companies reported lower net earnings.

At Toronto, a slump by the industrial index to its lowest level since June, 1964, highlighted the week's trade.

The index was as low as 156.27 at mid week. It closed down 1.12 to 156.99.

Inco paced the decline, sliding 3⅜ to 92⅝. The stock touched a low of 91½ after the company announced lower net earnings for the first six months of 1966 to $73,630,000 against $75,846,000 last year.

Bell Telephone, down ¼ at 50½, touched a low of 50½ on news that second-quarter earnings dropped to $20,786,229 compared with $21,673,370 in 1965.

MOORE DROPS

Other issues to decline included Moore Corp., off 1½ to 82, Interprovincial Pipe Line and Texaco 1¼ to 76¼ and 57½.

A number of Bay Street analysts said because the New York Exchange slid below its expected floor level, investor confidence was shattered.

However, the Toronto market staged a strong rally Friday and the industrial index jumped .71.

Alcan, Canada's largest aluminum producer, sparked Friday's rally when it advanced 1⅜ on news of higher six-month earnings to $39,636,000 against $27,666,000 last year. The stock was down ⅛ to 33¾ on the week.

On the plus side of the ledger, Algoma Steel was up 1⅛ to 28⅝ and Stelco ⅜ to 23.

Western oils, paced by Home Oil, scored the largest gain of the session. The oil index was up 1.04 to 104.70.

HOME HITS HIGH

Home A increased 2⅛ to a high of 22⅜ and Home B 1¾ to 22. The company recently found a large pocket of natural gas in Yorkshire in north-central England.

JOHNSON WARNS FIRMS:

Hold Prices or Else

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Johnson has said it on the line for the nation's industries: inflationary price increases will be met with a federal buyer's strike.

Within hours of tacitly conceding defeat to the steel industry on its price increases, Johnson came back Friday with a pointed warning to other industries which might be tempted to follow suit.

RESPONSIBLE

"If we are to continue our space effort and continue to make the magnificent progress represented by our past achievements," Johnson said at a bill singing ceremony, "we can do so only if business and labor leaders will make their contribution by responsible pricing and bargaining decisions."

He made no specific mention of the industry-wide steel price increase, but he clearly had it in mind as he discussed the $5 billion space authorization bill he signed into law.

"This bill is in accord with our recommendation to the congress. I hope that we will be able to continue the program at the pace we proposed and which the congress has endorsed by this legislation.

"However, if particular segments of our economy continue to raise their prices and increase the cost of this and other programs, it will be necessary for the government to further reduce its expenditures, particularly in those areas where prices are rising in an inflationary way."

The space program would be a particularly apt vehicle for federal bargaining. It is considered desirable for, but not essential to, the nation's progress. It also carries political leverage. Many congressmen would deeply resent cutbacks in space contracts with constituents.

PULP MILL ANNOUNCED

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Premier Smallwood Friday announced a fourth pulp and paper mill for Newfoundland.

Mr. Smallwood said the $120,000,000 project would include a $10,000,000 chip plant to be built near Happy Valley on Labrador's Lake Melville.

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, AUGUST 6, 1966—PAGE 21

Arthur Mayse

The other day we got up extra early for some worthy purpose, and as a result, by 10:30 p.m. we were trading yawns at a great rate.

"Well," I suggested, "why don't we got to bed and get a good night's sleep for a change?"

So we switched off the TV, which had been babbling busily to itself while we dozed in our chairs, and turned in at least an hour and a half ahead of our usual night-owl retiring time.

We took a snack with us, and read for no longer than 10 minutes. Then we doused our lights and settled down for that good night's sleep.

I was adrift in the free-floating stage that presages slumber when the phone rang. We waited to see who would crack first. At the third ring, my wife, who is endowed with a sturdy sense of responsibility, got up and went to answer.

I had just begun to float again when she returned.

"For you," she said, a trace too cheerfully.

So I rolled out, knocking a glass of not-quite-finished milk off my night table and stubbing a toe on a chair which seemed to have shifted a yard or so from its usual position.

★

The caller was loud and hearty. There was music in the background, and someone appeared to be knocking glasses of non-milk off tables.

Where, the cheerful fellow at the other end wanted to know, would he find an old Catholic mission area beneath a Union Jack and near something to carry rain away.

I told him, amiably as the circumstances permitted, that he had scrambled his clues, and that if I had the least idea where any treasure-hunt Centennial ducats were, I'd be off like a rocket to find them.

That took care of him, but while I was on the phone, our dog had risen from his rug by the kitchen door, and tiptoed past me.

Also, we had forgotten to put our tough black cat Cleo in the basement. She rubbed against my ankles, giving me amiable little bites.

I opened the basement door to shoo her down, and our fat striped cat, Ilya, bounced up the stairs, hollering for food.

Cats, at least our two, are deliberate eaters. By the time they were finished and I was heading back for that good night's sleep, it was almost 11:30.

In the hall, I met Win. She had ushered Lancer the dog from our room, and was carrying a wadded cloth.

"I mopped up the milk," she told me. "Now, maybe we'll have better luck this time."

★

Thoroughly wakened, we read until past midnight, then turned our lights out again.

I called into play a sleep-inducer which, for me, is worth any amount of sheep-counting. There is this trout stream, a compendium of all fair waterbrooks I have ever fished. What I do is loaf along it, testing each likely pool and run.

I was well around the bend and coaxing a nice rainbow, when a car not of the newest announced itself on the drive. Our daughter Sue unlocked the front door and came in.

Our young are uninhibited door-slammers. That thunder-clap sent my trout darting for cover.

Ron came home and slammed a couple of doors.

The dog quitted the kitchen by the door Ron had forgotten to slam, settled himself on a bedside rug, and promptly began to chase a dream-racoon with eager little yips and whimperings.

Win said plaintively, "I'm hungry."

What with all the action, I was too. We got up and fixed coffee and another snack, which we ate in living room armchairs with the curtains open to the waning moonlight.

It was very peaceful. We talked for a while, and watched the lights of a distant ship move along the San Juan Island shore. Finally, with the first daylight creeping into the east, we slipped away for our good night's sleep.

VOLUNTEERS DESPERATELY NEEDED

Her Cries May Be a Cure

By CANDIDE TEMPLE

A determined, young Victoria mother is pleading for volunteers who will help teach her child to walk.

Mrs. Janet Metcalfe requires two helpers, six times a day.

They must have the love, courage and stamina to exercise the tiny limbs of 18-month-old Caitlin even though she stiffens, tenses and protests.

They'll be fighting in the front line against cerebral palsy. The battlefield is at 636 Simcoe, Caitlin's home, 385-0143.

Caitlin has a smile bright as a sunrise, and huge hazel eyes that are searching for friends.

Like most babies her age, she likes bright colors, people she knows, and her pet kitten Tigger.

But her brain damage can never be completely repaired. The best Caitlin can hope for is eventually to gain control over her muscles, so that one day she may be able to walk, draw pictures, comb her hair.

And through a revolutionary new type of therapy Caitlin could win her chance for a normal life far quicker than many other children in her plight.

Six times a day, or as often as she has helpers, Caitlin's mother, 22-year-old Janet Metcalfe places her face down on the kitchen table.

Then with two people holding a small arm and leg on each side and one holding her head, Caitlin is put through her exercise, a sort of artificial crawling.

Five Minutes

The exercise goes on for five minutes. It's not easy — her little limbs stiffen and tense, it requires three people, and it should be carried out with regularity, six times daily.

"It's simple really — we just try and get her crawling," said Mrs. Metcalfe, holding Caitlin in her arms after a "patterning" session.

"I do various other exercises with her every hour to strengthen this patterning. And since her right side is more damaged than her left, we make her use her right more."

Her chief worry is getting two other people to come to her James Bay home to form the threesome that makes patterning possible.

Limited Help

Her request has gone mostly by word of mouth and been answered by friends of friends, "but I even had a note up in our butcher's window," she smiled.

The response to her pleas so far has been "really gratifying," but she still has only limited help.

"I would never expect someone to come to help every day, but if they could just drop in for five minutes a week. . .

"If I could get a lot of people interested, like a church group, maybe — that would be fine," and her face showed hope.

"You don't have to be a trained therapist — that's the beauty of it."

If a five-minute session, or more than one, is missed in the daytime for lack of helpers, "we make up at night" — with Caitlin's father and grandmother filling in.

"But it's not the answer because at night she's too spastic, too tired. She stiffens and screams."

Janet and Eric Metcalfe have conducted a ceaseless search for a way to help their daughter, which ended with the patterning process, part of what is known as the Philadelphia method, which they first learned of from articles in national magazines.

Seminar

Since then Mrs. Metcalfe has attended a seminar on the Philadelphia method and written to Calgary, where between 50 and 60 children are on the patterning program, and to Vancouver and Seattle, where clinics are starting up.

"She may not progress at all," they say firmly, although already they think Caitlin is more limbre from her patterning.

"She may be in the small percentage that don't benefit at all from it."

But you look on the positive side — you have to, when you're the parent of a child like Caitlin.

Even if it means asking strangers to help, you do it.

Any volunteer won't be long a stranger, anyway.

SOLEMN EXPRESSION covers face of young Caitlin Metcalfe, held in her mother's arms after strenuous five-minute exercise session. Helpers are needed to give Caitlin the ability to walk.

Fines Hike Opposed

A Victoria businessman has launched a single-handed battle against a City Hall proposal to jump parking meter fines.

Harry E. Adams, advertising manager for a local grocery chain is taking a petition of protest.

He plans to present it at the next Victoria council meeting.

News that condideration is being given to boosting the usual $1 fine for over-staying a meter to $2, emanated from City Hall earlier this week. It goes to council Thursday.

It was pointed out by city manager Dennis A. Young that this would add $50,000 annually to the city treasury.

35 SIGNATURES

Mr. Adams said he got 35 signatures on his petition in a matter of hours. He hopes to obtain several hundred before submitting it.

His petition says the proposed increase is "unnecessary and uncalled for at this time or any other time, for that matter."

It adds, "We do not think Victoria is setting a good example in the fight to curb rising prices."

CONTROL PARKING

Mr. Adams says the original intention of parking meters was to control parking, not to raise revenue.

"It's not too long since the cost of parking was increased from five cents an hour to five cents for 30 minutes.

"Most parking meter violations are not because someone is trying to save five or 10 cents, but because they've been detained by an unexpected business appointment, or at a dentist's or a doctor's office," said Mr. Adams.

He said he isn't collecting his signatures because he is a constant violator but because of a sense of civic outrage.

He said he personally receives a parking ticket "only a couple of times a year."

Thieves Take $36

Thieves entered an apartment at 1301 Fort through a kitchen window Friday night and stole $36.

Mrs. Douglas McNeill told police the money was taken from a purse in her bedroom.

Expanding Viet War Forecast by Expert

An expert on Far Eastern Affairs sounded pessimistic this morning when he spoke in Victoria of the possibility of ending the war in Viet Nam.

Professor W. E. Willmott, of the University of British Columbia, said there is every likelihood the conflict will escalate and expand.

Prof. Willmott gave the opening address at a conference on Canadian responsibility in Viet Nam. The conference, held in St. John's Anglican Church parish hall, was attended by more than 200 persons.

Prof. Willmott, an associate professor of anthropology and a lecturer in Asian studies, said the war seems to be one that neither side can win.

He recalled that the last war in what was then Indo-China ended when the French were catastrophically defeated at Dienbienphu. Prof. Willmott said there is no possibility of any one battle deciding the present conflict.

POLITICAL DEFEAT

At the same time the American forces will not be able to defeat their Viet Cong opponents. Prof. Willmott said nationalism is the main inspiration of the Viet Cong and every U.S. victory therefore becomes a political defeat because it wins new support for the Viet Cong.

Prof. Willmott said the identification of the nationalist movement with the communist-led Viet Cong makes Viet Nam different from any other emerging Asian nation.

He said the U.S. claims to be fighting communism but in fact is in the position of fighting a nationalist movement.

The conference continued this afternoon.

Ask The Times

Q. I have heard Chicago has more than three universities. Is this so? P.M.

A. Chicago has in fact six degree-granting universities. They are: University of Chicago, Northwestern University, Roosevelt University, University of Illinois (Chicago campus), De Paul University and Loyola University.

Q. What is the last couplet of the poem beginning "Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?" S.P.

A. Last couplet of this Shakespeare sonnet is:

Passenger 'Insisted' Police Give Him an Answer . . . They Did

A man who interfered during a police arrest early today was fined $50 in central court when he pleaded builty to obstructing a peace officer.

Peter Fitterer, 3295 Exeter Rd., admitted challenging an officer four times after the car in which he was riding was stopped at Douglas and Bay Streets for a traffic violation.

Officers had arrested one of the other passengers for intoxication and the accused kept insisting that police tell him whether he was drunk as well.

He was ordered from the scene four times before he was arrested.

Catamaran Wins Kick-Off

PERFECT RACE WEATHER

Some 80 boats from the Pacific Northwest sailed into Esquimalt Harbor today to take part in the Royal Canadian Navy Sailing Association's annual regatta.

In perfect weather, the yachts began the first of nine races scheduled for large and small boats over the weekend.

Kick-off to the weekend was the annual long distance race from Cattle Point to Esquimalt Friday night.

Winner of the event was Ken Keith of the RCNSA in a catamaran Bearcat.

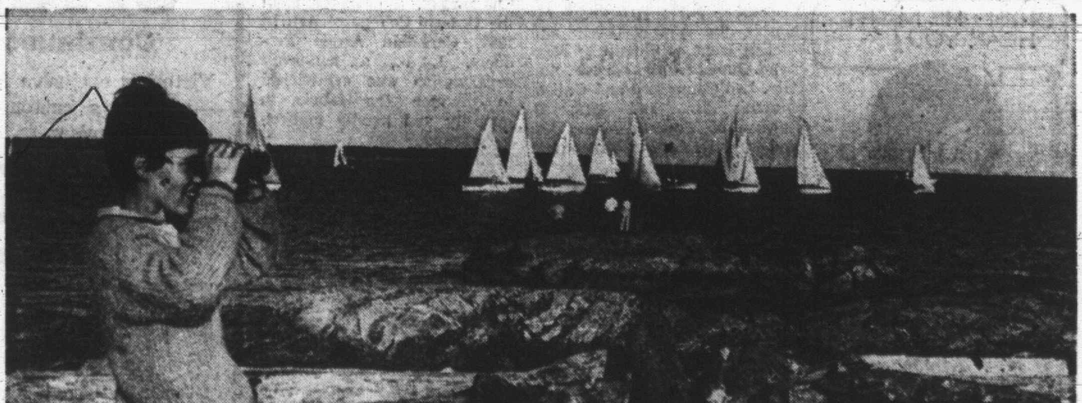
In winning the event, he established a new record, completing the 14-mile course in one hour, 52 minutes.

A second catamaran in the race wasn't quite so lucky, losing its centreboard on rocks near Trial Island.

Second man home was Dick James of Royal Victoria Yacht Club in Lalonga.

Third was E. Woodcock in Miramar.

The winner on corrected time — not yet established — will receive the HMCS Naden Trophy.



Lineup of 37 yachts await starter's gun at Cattle Point Friday night.

Three Way SC Fight

'Election Within Election' Forecast for City Seats

By ROGER STONEBANKS

A three-way fight by Social Credit MLAs for the two Victoria seats is shaping up for the September 12 provincial election.

Contacted this morning, Works Minister W. N. Chant and MLAs Waldo Skillings and J. Donald Smith all said they will allow their names to stand for monination.

But because of the government's redistribution of constituencies earlier this year, the three-member Victoria constituency will be reduced to two MLAs.

One person close to the local Social Credit scene said Works Minister Chant is well established, a cabinet minister and has an excellent chance for the nomination.

But it was a 50-50 guess who will win between Mr. Skillings and Mr. Smith.

Victoria Social Credit president Hugh Ramsay announced this morning the nomination meeting will be held Thursday Aug. 18 at McPherson Theatre.

Provincial president George Dreidigger of Vancouver will be chairman of the meeting.

Mr. Ramsay said because of restribution and the intention of the three present MLAs to seek re-nomination, the meeting will be "an election within an election." He expected a "terrific" turnout.

The speculation presumes that despite this morning's positive comments, one of the three might step down. The situation could become cloudy if other prominent Socreds decided to stand for nomination.

One person who announced he isn't a candidate is Millard Mooney, former city alderman and federal Socred candidate.

Big Scramble To Hold Meetings

Two other constituencies hold the limelight as officials of all parties scramble to call nominating meetings and get candidates for election.

They are the enlarged Oak Bay constituency and Saanich and the Islands, which extends from about the municipal hall north to include the Gulf Islands.

In Oak Bay, Liberal MLA Alan Macfarlane is expected to be a shoo-in for his party in the constituency he has held since 1960.

Long a thorn in the Socred government, particularly Premier Bennett, it is no secret the ruling party would like to unseat Mr. Macfarlane perhaps more than anyone else in B.C.

At the 1963 election, the Socreds ran live-wire Dr. Charles Ennals who was a good second to lawyer Mr. Macfarlane. The margin was about 700 votes.

Dr. Ennals said this morning he will be a candidate again for Social Credit.

The other interesting constituency is Saanich and the Islands.

Real estate salesman John Tisdalle was first elected in 1953 in the former Saanich constituency and at the last election held a 6,000-vote margin over runner-up John Windsor of the New Democratic Party.

But former New Westminster Mayor Mrs. Beth Wood has been repeatedly rumored as a candidate for the constituency. She lives on Salt Spring Island, the same island as Premier Bennett has a cottage on.

Former Mayor Still Undecided

This morning, Mrs. Wood said she has made no decision whether or not to allow her name to stand for nomination.

Mr. Tisdalle couldn't be reached for his comment but it is unlikely he would step down.

Only two candidates have been nominated on southern Vancouver Island, both in Esquimalt.

They are John Bartunus of the NDP, who is chairman of Sooke School Board, and insurance executive David Elrix for the Liberals.

The Socreds have called a nominating meeting for Aug. 15 at 7:30 p.m. in Colwood Community Hall where MLA Herb Bruch is expected to be unopposed on renomination. He was first elected in 1953 and today confirmed he will run again.

Conservative Party spokesman indicted there will not be any candidates in the two-member Victoria constituency because so far no one has offered himself.

But a spokesman for Saanich and the Islands said there will be a nominating convention.

Two rumored candidates said they are not allowing their names to stand for nomination.

They are Conservative realtor Eric Charman and IWA president Murray Drew for the NDP.

At the last election, under the old constituencies, the Socreds held the three-member Victoria constituency plus Saanich and Esquimalt by good margins over New Democratic Party candidates.

Liberals and Conservatives trailed the field.

BLOOD BANK HIGH, DRY

Red Cross is out for blood—lots of it!

Vacationing blood donors have taken their blood out of Victoria, leaving the blood bank high and dry. Victorians are being requested to bleed to combat August shortages.

Blood donor clinics will be held at Red Cross House on: Tuesday, Aug. 9, 1:30 to 4.30 p.m., 6:30 to 9:00 p.m.; Wednesday, Aug. 10, 6:30 to 9:00 p.m. A clinic will also be held in the Customs Building, 816 Government Street, Room 209, Wednesday, Aug. 10, 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon, 1:00 to 4:00 p.m.

400 Qualify For Medals

Nearly 400 "pioneers" are on the Greater Victoria Centennial Society's list for the award of pioneer medals Centennial Year, 1967.

"And we feel there are many more," said society director Jerry Gosley this morning.

A "pioneer" is defined as any person who was either born in Canada or a resident of Canada prior to Jan. 1, 1892.

Those who qualify can apply at the society office, No. 14 Centennial Square.

Medals to be awarded will be in silver finish with a ribbon of muted navy blue. On the obverse side is a likeness of Alexander Mackenzie. The reverse side has a large 100, the centennial symbol—a geometric maple leaf, and the dogwood.

Youths Drop Loot After Being Spotted

Two youths who broke into a Saanich grocery store early today dropped most of their loot when surprised by the proprietor.

Police said the pair broke a window in the front door of Squire's Grocery, 530 Gorge West, to gain entry. They took a quantity of cigarettes and a dozen bottles of pop but dropped the soft drinks when the store owner appeared.

The thieves made off in a car.

BRIDGE LESSON

By JACOBY and SON

Sometimes bridge players argue about success. South studied dummy for about 10 minutes before playing the first card from dummy. Then he won the trick in his own hand and played out dummy's ace and king of clubs. When both opponents followed to the second club South conceded a club trick and claimed his contract.

North remarked, "Your play worked, but as a matter of strict mathematics you should have won the spade in dummy and taken a double diamond finesse. Unless West held both king and queen of diamonds that play would have worked. There is a 76 per cent chance of finding one of two honors in the East hand. There is only a 68 per cent chance of breaking the clubs 3-2."

South replied, "The actual chance of success with the club play was 71 per cent. I don't play in a vacuum and would have abandoned clubs had they broken 5-0 but you overlook the fact that my club play gave me a considerable extra chance. Suppose East showed out on the second club. I would go after diamonds and have a 24 per cent chance of making my contract. East could hold both diamond honors. Or West might show out on the second club. Then I would still have a 52 per cent chance of success because I would make the hand if honors divided."

North and South have appealed to us for an opinion and our answer is that as a matter of strict mathematics South's line of play is superior. His combination play works out to better than 20 per cent.

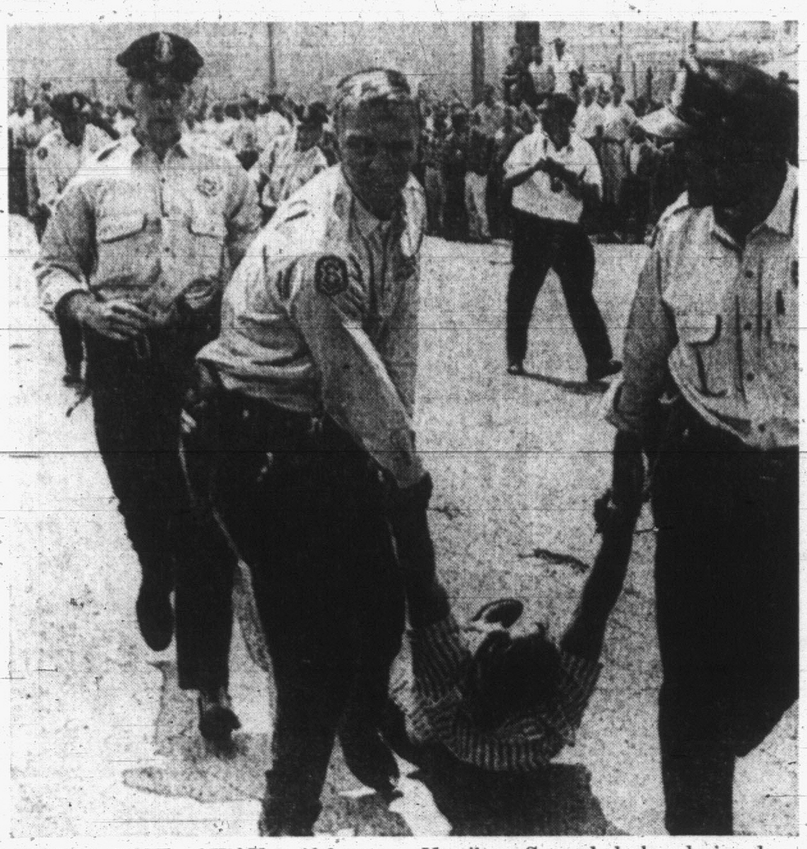
33 STRIKERS PLACED UNDER ARREST

Violence at Steel Plant



POLICE HAUL AWAY wildcat striker during violence Friday at Steel Company of Canada plant at Hamilton. Several clashes during day resulted in arrest of 29 strikers. (CP Wirephoto)

HAMILTON (CP) — Some arrested wildcat strikers threatened today to break up a mass union meeting scheduled for 10:30 a.m. Sunday unless the union seeks to have all charges dropped against 29 held after violence at the strikebound Steel Co. of Canada plant here. The 29 now are out on bail.

The number of arrests in the strike mounted to 33 early today when four men found in the company's main plant by security guards were turned over to police.

The 29 out on bail also want firm undertakings by the company that no reprisals will be made against the members of Local 1005, United Steelworkers of America (CLC).

The general membership meeting was scheduled at Civic Stadium when union leaders will ask the wildcatters to return to work. Their walkout, protesting slowness in contract negotiations, has made idle some 17,000 at Stelco and other plants.

Motions proposed at a union meeting Friday also demand that a contract be set up within seven days of any return to work or the men will walk out again.

STRIKERS SPLIT

The wildcat strikers are divided into two groups, those who think the men should return to work Monday and those who feel that the strike should continue until a new contract is signed, said a spokesman for the former group.

"We don't like this talk of violence but we can't stop the radicals from saying what they please," he said. "I don't think that they will cause a riot, although they have one disturber who could cause trouble."

A spokesman for the more radical group said the men arrested are not in themselves strong enough to begin any violence.

"However, I am sure the membership will be worked up for this meeting. It will be difficult to control them," he said. "It should be a rough session."

Meanwhile, a move is under way to form a women's auxiliary picket force which would surround all entrances to Stelco during the Sunday meeting.

The four men arrested today were charged with trespassing.

BAD DAY FRIDAY

The strikers behaved Friday night after a day of violence during which 500 fighting steelworkers battled about 70 policemen.

The strikers were released on $100 bail each. Most of them had been charged with obstructing police, creating a disturbance or assault.

The report that 15 men were arrested in the evening for throwing stones at a truck entering Canada's largest steel plant was denied by police.

To avoid any recurrence of the day's skirmishes police had their day staff work overtime to complement the night staff. By 11 p.m. when the pickets changed, about 80 policemen were on duty at the main gate of the Hilton Works, the largest plant in Stelco's vast operations.

PUB CLOSED

In another attempt to curb violence, the brightside House, which stands beside the plant, closed at 5 p.m. The spot is a handy drinking place for strikers and police advised the owner to close the bar, which he did willingly.

A crowd, estimated at 1,000, milled around the main gate late in the evening, but only about 500 were steelworkers. The remainder were spectators.

The pickets, members of the United Steelworkers of America (CLC), showed their antagonism by cursing passing motorists and walking slowly in front of traffic which the police were trying to keep moving.

By midnight, when it appeared there wouldn't be any fighting, most of the crowd went home at which time the police force was reduced to about 20 men. About 70 pickets remained.

The main clash, which flared just before 3 p.m. when a striker called a company supervisor "scab", followed these events:

- An attempt to move a train loaded with scrap metal into the plant failed when 200 strikers rushed a police line. At least two officers were knocked to the ground and five strikers were arrested.
- A mass sitdown by strikers on Burlington Street near the plant's main gate blocked traffic.
- Police arrested 11 pickets during the morning after a gap was opened in the picket line, clearing the way for supervisory and office personnel to enter the plant.

The afternoon fight started after a union official announced a general membership meeting Sunday afternoon at Hamilton's Civic Stadium in an effort to end the wildcat walkout which has put some 17,000 men out of work.

One striker said "I think we will be asked to go back to work Monday and give the company seven days to come up with a new contract.

"If we do go back, then the company will be forced to come up with the contract we demand because if they don't we will walk out again and it'll cost them millions."

A company official estimated Friday night that Stelco is losing $1,250,000 a day in sales and the workers are losing $250,000 in wages.

The contract between Stelco and the Steelworkers expired July 31 and the workers walked out Wednesday night, complaining of the slow pace of contract negotiations.

Eight Fires Doused By Victoria Crews

Area firemen doused eight grass and bush fires Friday before any reached serious proportions.

City firemen attended to bush blazes in the 700 block Moss, two at Beacon Hill Park and two Dallas Road beach fires, one near Cook and the other near Howe.

In Saanich, firemen extinguished a bush fire at 2494 Sinclair and also fought a car fire at Carey and McKenzie.

In Central Saanich a crew put out a bush fire at the intersection of the Pat Bay Highway and Keating Crossroad. Langford firemen mopped up a bush fire at Jacklin Road.

There was a marked increase during the week in outbreak of new forest fires throughout the province and the fire hazard continues to climb.

The provincial forest service reported today that of 155 new outbreaks 145 were in the Vancouver, Kamloops and Nelson forest districts. Cool, wet weather in the Prince Rupert and Prince George districts helped hold down the number of outbreaks in the north to 10. But drying conditions are expected to return in those areas.

The service said 131 fires were extinguished during the week at a cost of $25,000, bringing estimated firefighting costs so far this year to $454,000, compared with $1,494,100 for the same period last year. Of the 72 fires still burning in the province, none are of a major nature.

Salvation Army Area Commander Off to Hong Kong

Lt.-Col. and Mrs. John Nelson —a Salvation Army couple well-known in Victoria—have been posted to Hong Kong.

They will take up their new post later this month.

Col. Nelson has been divisional commander with headquarters in Vancouver. He operated the Red Shield canteen on Broad Street, Victoria, during the Second World War. He is a brother of D. H. Bert Nelson of Esquimalt.

In Hong Kong he will be officer commanding the Salvation Army corps.

Bogus Bill Handed Out By Bank

VANCOUVER (CP) — John M. Cooper, a newly-arrived British immigrant, received a quick lesson on Canadian currency Friday.

Cooper, arrested after trying to pass a counterfeit $20 at a Vancouver bank, was released when he told police he had just arrived from Britain and had received the bill in exchange for stirling at Barclays Bank in London.

He said he didn't know the money was counterfeit and that he wasn't familiar with Canadian currency.

Police said this series of counterfeit bills has been circulating all over the world.

Group Planned 220-yard Tunnel Under the Wall

BERLIN (Reuters) — A 22-year-old waiter told the East German High Court today he worked for a West Berlin organization that planned to build a 220-yard-long tunnel under the Berlin wall from the West to smuggle out East Germans.

Hans-Juergen Hanke, one of three Germans accused of working for the West, said he was arrested at the border between East and West Germany July 10.

His car was found to contain a secret compartment big enough for a refugee.

It was planned that day to smuggle a 25-year-old East German girl to the West.

He decided to abandon the attempt when his car was thoroughly searched on leaving West Belin.

But the empty secret compartment built into the car's front was found during the check at the East-West German border and he was arrested.

The waiter said he discussed a plan by the organization to build a tunnel under the wall and other plans to get East Germans to the West over the Czechoslovak and Bulgarian borders.

The East German girl, shapely blonde cosmetician Barbara Rudolf, told the court 10,000 marks ($2,500) was paid to the West Berlin organization for her escape.

Clearer Picture Expected Monday

The confusion surrounding the contractors lockout against carpenters abated for two days today.

Saturday and Sunday normally are days off.

By Monday, it is expected to be clearer just how effective and how many companies have refused to hire carpenters in the current contract dispute.

By Friday, 184 of the 322 contractors represented by the Construction Industry Joint Negotiating Committee had served the necessary 48-hour lockout notice on carpenters.

Harmac Workers Warn Of Possible Walkout

Workers at the Harmac operation of MacMillan Bloedel are prepared to walk out and stay out until they get the union of their choice.

The warning was issued Friday by Gordon Wickham, president of the uncertified local of Pulp and Paperworkers of Canada. He led a 30-man delegation attempting to see Labor Minister Leslie Peterson Friday to protest the refusal of the Labour Relations Board to certify the Canadian union.

Earlier the 400 day-shift employees at the plant had refused to go to work. After an hour's delay the men settled for the protest march.

"We had to do considerable talking to persuade them to go back to work while we came down here," Mr. Wickham said.

"The feeling back at the plant is that the workers are prepared to stay out indefinitely or until our Canadian union is recognized," he said.

The Canadian union claims the support of 98 per cent of the plant's workers. They applied May 13 for certification of the Canadian union to replace the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, Local 695.

The application was finally heard Aug. 2 and rejected on the grounds that the union had not received a charter and had not elected officers at the time of application.

"They threw us out on a technicality despite our overwhelming support by the men," Mr. Wickham charged.

"They stalled until it was too late for us to re-apply with the technicalities straightened out and then held clearly biased hearings," he said of the LRB.

"Our interests can only be protected by a Canadian-run and Canadian-controlled union with its headquarters in Canada, not in the U.S.," he insisted.

When the labor minister was unable to see them they spoke for an hour with deputy minister William Sands, the chairman of the LRB. "He listened but could do nothing," Mr. Wickham said.

As matters stand the union will be unable to re-apply until next summer for certification under the Labour Relations Act.

CN Men Return To Jobs

MONTREAL (CP) — Handlers of CNR express freight have ended their wildcat strike with a vote to resume work — at least for 11 days.

The strikers voted for an immediate work resumption Friday night, ending a stoppage that had started Monday and helped snarl freight traffic between Montreal and Toronto.

The men had been reported filing back to their jobs throughout Friday.

Originally 1,200 in number, 400 of them participated in the formal meeting Friday night.

They said they will stick to their CNR duties until Aug. 17, when a strike following the filing of a conciliation report on a long-standing dispute will be legally possible.

The strikers are members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Transport and General Workers (CLC).

On Aug. 10, Mr. Justice C. A. Cameron of Ottawa, federal conciliator in a dispute connected with contract negotiations involving their union, is scheduled to bring in his conciliation report.

PROTEST DELAYS

The wildcat strikers walked out in protest against alleged delays in the handing down of the report.

A strike by the union would not be legal until seven days after the report is made public.

The CNR strike had spread to other company freight handlers in Toronto, where more than half the 425 express workers at the CNR's downtown terminal were off the job Friday. A wildcat strike by them had started Thursday.

With the work resumption in Montreal, the CNR announced the lifting of all embargoes on CNR freight shipments between Montreal and Toronto.

The Maritime region, which had also been affected, was back to normal too, the railway officials said.

Lower Earnings Becomes Habit And Market Prices Slip Down

By LARRY DWORKIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Industrials soured on Canada's stock markets this week as a number of large Canadian companies reported lower net earnings.

At Toronto, a slump by the industrial index to its lowest level since June, 1964, highlighted the week's trade.

The index was as low as 156.27 at mid week. It closed down 1.12 to 156.99.

Inco paced the decline, sliding 3⅜ to 92⅝. The stock touched a low of 91½ after the company announced lower net earnings for the first six months of 1966 to $73,630,000 against $75,846,000 last year.

Bell Telephone, down ¼, at 50½, touched a low of 50½ on news that second-quarter earnings dropped to $20,786,229 compared with $21,673,370 in 1965.

MOORE DROPS

Other issues to decline included Moore Corp., off 1½ to 82, Interrovincial Pipe Line and Texaco 1¼ to 76¼ and 57½.

A number of Bay Street analysts said because the New York Exchange slid below its expected floor level, investor confidence was shattered.

However, the Toronto market staged a strong rally Friday and the industrial index jumped .71.

Alcan, Canada's largest aluminum producer, sparked Friday's rally when it advanced 1⅜ on news of higher six-month earnings to $39,636,000 against $27,666,000 last year. The stock was down ⅛ to 33¾ on the week.

On the plus side of the ledger, Algoma Steel was up 1⅞ to 28⅜ and Stelco ⅜ to 23.

Western oils, paced by Home Oil, scored the largest gain of the session. The oil index was up 1.04 to 104.70.

HOME HITS HIGH

Home A increased 2⅛ to a high of 22⅝ and Home B 1¾ to 22. The company recently found a large pocket of natural gas in Yorkshire in north-central England.

Noranda Seeking Piece of Brenda

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Stock Exchange has been asked to approve a deal by which Noranda Mines would purchase 1,000,000 shares of Brenda Mines for $8 a share, the exchange disclosed Friday.

Brenda sold in the $10 range this week.

The transaction is designed to provide cash for Brenda and would give Noranda a position in the company now developing a low-grade large-scale molybdenum-copper deposit near Peachland in the Okanagan.

As of June Brenda reported that of 5,000,000 shares authorized, 2,150,000 were issued. At that time the company reported it had $1,300,000 in the treasury.

It was reported that the Noranda deal would be conditional on acceptance of a feasibility report expected in late November or early December.

Mine Boom Boosts Trading at Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — The value of shares traded on Vancouver Stock Exchange in the first seven months of the year jumped to $233,770,751 from $139,191,945 a year ago, exchange figures disclosed today.

The increase was led by the mining section which has recorded a $79,000,000 gain in the January-July period.

The same section has also been mainly responsible for increased trading this year. At the end of July over 220,000,000 shares had changed hands as against 142,000,000 last year. Mines were the reason for 66,000,000 of this gain.

In July, value of mining stocks traded this year was double that of 1965.

Altogether 16,200,000 mining shares were moved for a value of nearly $15,000,000. In July, 1965, 8,300,000 shares traded on the mining section for a value of $5,700,000.

In the January-June period industrials traded 3,136,474 shares worth $36,889,017 compared with 2,573,441 worth $32,290,406 in the same period of 1965.

Oils traded 29,420,326 shares worth $19,522,038 in the period compared with 19,536,000 worth $8,847,040 in the January-June period of 1965.

CPA Eyes Planes

PENTICTON (CP)—Canadian Pacific Airlines is considering buying up to $25,000,000 worth of new jet aircraft for its B.C. and Yukon routes. CPA President J. C. Gilmer, said the company is at present evaluating new aircraft for its domestic routes. Included in the survey are the Douglas DC-9, the Boeing 737 and the Boeing 727.

JOHNSON WARNS FIRMS:

Hold Prices or Else

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Johnson has laid it on the line for the nation's industries: inflationary price increases will be met with a federal buyer's strike.

Within hours of tacitly conceding defeat to the steel industry on its price increases, Johnson came back Friday with a pointed warning to other industries which might be tempted to follow suit.

RESPONSIBLE

"If we are to continue our space effort and continue to make the magnificent progress represented by our past achievements," Johnson said at a bill singing ceremony, "we can do so only if business and labor leaders will make their contribution by responsible pricing and bargaining decisions."

He made no specific mention of the industry-wide steel price increase, but he clearly had it in mind as he discussed the $5 billion space authorization bill he signed into law.

"This bill is in accord with our recommendation to the congress. I hope that we will be able to continue the program at the pace we proposed and which the congress has endorsed by this legislation.

"However, if particular segments of our economy continue to raise their prices and increase the cost of this and other programs, it will be necessary for the government to further reduce its expenditures, particularly in those areas where prices are rising in an inflationary way."

The space program would be a particularly apt vehicle for federal bargaining. It is considered desirable for, but not essential to, the nation's progress. It also carries political leverage. Many congressmen would deeply resent cutbacks in space contracts with constituents.

PULP MILL ANNOUNCED

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Premier Smallwood Friday announced a fourth pulp and paper mill for Newfoundland.

Mr. Smallwood said the $120,000,000 project would include a $10,000,000 chip plant to be built near Happy Valley on Labrador's Lake Melville.

BRIDGE LESSON

By JACOBY and SON

Sometimes bridge players argue about success. South studied dummy for about 10 minutes before playing the first card from dummy. Then he won the trick in his own hand and played out dummy's ace and king of clubs. When both opponents followed to the second club South conceded a club trick and claimed his contract.

North remarked, "Your play worked, but as a matter of strict mathematics you should have won the spade in dummy and taken a double diamond finesse. Unless West held both king and queen of diamonds that play would have worked. There is a 76 per cent chance of finding one of two honors in the East hand. There is only a 68 per cent chance of breaking the clubs 3-2."

South replied, "The actual chance of success with the club play was 71 per cent. I don't play in a vacuum and would have abandoned clubs had they broken 5-0 but you overlook the fact that my club play gave me a considerable extra chance. Suppose East showed out on the second club. I would go after diamonds and have a 24 per cent chance of making my contract. East could hold both diamond honors. Or West might show out on the second club. Then I would still have a 52 per cent chance of success because I would make the hand if honors divided."

North and South have appealed to us for an opinion and our answer is that as a matter of strict mathematics South's line of play is superior. His combination play works out to better than 20 per cent.

Bennett Vote Call Blasted

—(AP Wirephoto).

NEWLYWEDS Patrick Nugent and his bride, President Johnson's daughter Luci, leave the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington today. Wedding was followed by a big reception at the White House.

Three-Ring Ceremony As Luci, Pat Married

WASHINGTON (AP) — In one of Washington's social affairs of the age, Luci Baines Johnson became Mrs. Patrick J. Nugent today. A proud president looked on.

The vows between the 19-year-old daughter of President Lyndon B. Johnson and her 23-year-old groom were taken in the giant shrine of the Immaculate Conception, national church of Roman Catholicism. Present was a select congregation of 700, including both notables and hitherto obscure folk from Waukegan, Ill., Nugent's hometown.

Luci shook slightly as she said "I do." During the ceremony she had her gaze alternately fixed on Patrick and on a tremendous mosaic of the Saviour behind the high altar.

The exact time of the wedding was 12:42 p.m. EDT. Rev. John A. Kuzinkas of Chicago administered the vows. The couple knelt before him on white pillows at the edge of the altar platform.

The bride's long, starched illusion veil spread out behind her. Her long-sleeved gown was of white rosepoint alencon appliques, lightly embroidered with pearls.

Toward the end, before the recessional, Luci made a short detour. In a little ceremony dear to her heart, she walked to a chapel near the chancel and laid one of her two bouquets before a mosaic of St. Agatha, a patron saint of nursing.

Then the walk back down the aisle and off to the feast and reception at the White House. A big tent had been erected on the south lawn, decorated with paper pink poppies looking real. Gilt chairs, and tables bearing silver punch bowls, dotted the greensward. Giant red roses of paper were wired to holly hedges.

CAKE 7 TIERS

Inside the mansion, a seven-tiered wedding cake towered between portraits of George and Martha Washington.

It was not only a double-ring wedding — it was a triple. Luci, with slight of hand only a determined bride could perform, ended up with her engagement ring sandwiched between two wedding circlets.

She did this without ever taking off the engagement ring. The feat is performed by putting the ring fingers of right and left hands together, end to end, and sliding the engagement ring from one to the other. Patrick got only one ring.

Wedding Picketed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group protesting the war in Viet Nam began picketing the Roman Catholic National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception today hours before the scheduled noon wedding of Luci Baines Johnson.

Couple Found on Drifting Boat

RCMP Probe Deaths

RCMP are investigating the deaths of a young couple whose bodies were found aboard a drifting boat in Georgia Strait early today.

The 34-foot gillnetter was discovered at the mouth of Jervis Inlet at 2:45 a.m. today by the tugboat Monarch II from Campbell River.

A Powell River RCMP spokesman said there is no indication of foul play, but an autopsy has been ordered on the bodies of the young man and woman.

Their names and the name of the boat cannot be released until next-of-kin have been notified.

It is understood the boat is registered in Vancouver and was on its way back from the fishing grounds at Rivers Inlet.

Capt. W. J. Lebans of the Monarch II reported he came across the drifting boat while towing a log boom up-Island.

When he discovered the bodies he put a line on the boat and notified Powell River RCMP. A police boat intercepted the tug and the boat was towed to Powell River this morning.

Jetliner Pilot Dies at Controls

TOKYO (UPI)—The pilot of a KLM Royal Dutch Airways DC8 jetliner died at the controls early today seconds before the big jet was to touch down at Tokyo airport. A fast-thinking co-pilot wrested the controls from the dead man to avert an almost certain crash.

Officials said the plane, en route from Amsterdam to Manila with 56 passengers aboard, was only three to four seconds from touch down when the pilot, Capt. G. H. De Groot, died of an apparent heart attack.

LANDING ABORTED

In one lightning move, the co-pilot, C. G. De Jager, 37, applied full power and aborted the landing.

De Jager took the plane back up to 3,000 feet, had the crew pull the dead pilot from his seat and brought the big jet in for a perfect landing with the aid of the navigator.

The co-pilot said the jet had passed the final landing approach beacon and was less than 150 feet in the air when De Groot slumped across the controls.

Authorities said the pilot, who had passed a required physical examination June 27, apparently died of a heart attack.

'VOTE RECORDS TO FALL'

Records in number of voters, size of legislature and election expenses will be set in the Sept. 12 provincial vote.

The current registration drive — which closes officially Saturday, Aug. 13 — is expected to see the largest number of British Columbians in history recorded on the voters' lists.

●

A total of 873,140 voters were registered for the last election and 69.7 per cent of them turned out to elect 32 Socreds, 14 New Democrats and five Liberals.

At dissolution Friday, there was only one vacancy, caused by the death of George McLeod (SC — North Okanagan).

There will be three more seats, to make a record 55-seat legislature, filled by the present election campaign as a result of redistribution which went into effect automatically Friday. Under it, the southern end of Vancouver Island has been altered with Victoria reduced from a three-seat to a two-seat riding.

●

The new house will mark a historic departure in which urban MLAs will outnumber those from predominately rural constituencies.

The coming campaign also is expected to break expense records.

The drain from the public treasury is expected to soar above the 89-cents-per-voter cost that saw the total reach $539,446 in the last election, because of the massive registration drive, and the larger returning staff needed.

●

Up to 8,000 persons will be involved in supervising balloting and counting the votes, it has been estimated.

Parties are bound to spend more on campaigns because of the larger number of seats at stake. Last time the Socreds reported campaign expenditures of $292,000; Tories $83,000; Liberals $57,000; and NDP $49,000.

Briton Wins Rifle Prize

SOUTH MARCH, Ont. (CP)—Tom Hills, a 31-year-old farmer from Ashore, Kent., England, won the Governor-General's event at the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association championships today with a score of 194 of a possible 200.

Sept. 12 Date Set

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

Political opponents today labelled the Sept. 12 provincial general election as Premier Bennett's "unnecessary election."

The premier announced the vote—his fifth election writ since coming to power in 1952—at a press conference in the Hotel Vancouver Friday night.

New Democratic Party spokesman Alex Macdonald today blasted the call as "an unnecessary election" that proved the premier put politics first.

He lashed at the lack of any issue and claimed the administration had two more years with an uncompleted program.

The Vancouver-East MLA spoke in place of Opposition Leader Robert Strachan, who was on his way back to Nanaimo from a holiday in a remote area near 100 Mile House in the Cariboo as a result of the election call.

Liberal Leader Ray Perrault and Pogressive Conservative Association President Stuart Fleming also criticized the premier's election call as totally unnecessary.

Mr. Perrault said that recent surveys show a vast majority of the people are opposed to an election at this time and they well could "give Premier Bennett a shock" with their resentment.

Most Registration Ready

Mr. Bennett, in announcing the election, said completion of most voter registration efforts in the wake of the redistribution bill was one of the main reasons for calling the election.

The election will be the fifth since Premier Bennett's Social Credit government was first elected in 1952. The last one was Sept. 30, 1963, when the Socreds elected 33, NDP 14 and Liberals five.

Mr. Bennett said that though the government could stay in office five years, it was traditional to hold an election every three years or so.

Although there has been speculation in B.C. since March that there would be an election Sept. 12, Mr. Bennett said the date was set only Friday afternoon and the proclamation of dissolution signed by Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes later Friday in Victoria, in the premier's absence.

So far, there are 25 NDP candidates nominated and 35 Liberals either nominated or about to be. No Socred or Conservative candidates have been chosen yet.

The actual campaigns are not expected to get underway until after next week.

Mr. Bennett said he would start his campaign in Campbell River at an unspecified date. Mr. Strachan is expected to announce his plans next week.

Mr. Perrault said he would open his campaign after returning from the scheduled Aug. 12-13 meeting of the four western Liberal provincial leaders in Saskatoon.

'Let Province Down'

Stuart Fleming, president of the Progressive Conservative Association, did not say whether he would campaign but indicated the Tories will field only a token contingent of nominees.

"Premier Bennett has proved again that he puts politics first," Mr. Macdonald said.

"He has called an unnecessary election in the early days of August when the people of B.C. are on holiday and enjoying the summer, while Mr. Bennett is hoping to tip-toe through the flowers into another term of office before it's too late.

"He has his majority and two years to complete a program—if he had one. Instead he's spending the people's money on an expensive election as he did when he bought a toy for the minister of highways in the form of a Lear jet."

Mr. Macdonald said Premier Bennett already has let down the province badly "by attending a strawberry social of the Socred

DR. MARTIN KING FELLED BY ROCK

Frenzied Whites Attack Negro Marchers

CHICAGO (AP)—Racial violence wracked an all-white neighborhood Friday for the second time this week and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., felled by a rock, said the eruption was fostered by the worst hate he has ever seen.

King promised the marchers would return to the area.

More than 6,000 frenzied white residents of the southwest side Chicago Lawn neighborhood rioted during and after a march by 800 civil rights demonstrators.

The civil rights group is demanding open housing. The Chicago Lawn residents say they had built up the neighborhood and that Negroes would degrade it.

A 19-year-old white youth was wounded in the shoulder by a knife thrown towards King during a march. The youth was released after hospital treatment.

Police arrested 39 white persons, including three women. Hospitals said 28 persons were brought in with injuries, including two persons on stretchers, an unconscious man, a little girl whose eyes were cut by flying glass and three policemen.

"It hurts, but it's not an injury," King shouted above the cursing, screaming, mob in Marquette Park after he fell to one knee when a rock hit his head.

"I've never seen such hostility in a demonstration before and I've been all over the south," King said.

"I have to do this—to expose myself—to bring this hate into the open," King shouted to reporters. "I have never seen such hate—not in Mississippi or Alabama—as I see here in Chicago."

King, chairman of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, got to his feet, ripped off his tie and began forming the demonstrators into a line for the march.

The violence occurred in a Polish - Irish - Lithuanian middle-class neighborhood. The residents are mostly Roman Catholic.

The demonstration began in the racially - tense area when four groups went to separate real estate offices to picket. When the demonstrators milled into Marquette Park, a scenic, recreation area, to form for the march, they were met with jeers, catcalls, curses, rocks and bottles from the white residents, mostly youths.

When the demonstrators—white and Negro men and women, priests and nuns—knelt to pray, firecrackers were thrown into the kneeling group, and the crowd screamed obscenities and waved banners.

Mister Bennett sez th' people should hev a chance t' speak. Does he mean that this time he'll listen?

LOCALS CAN'T JUMP ON BEATLE BAN WAGON

Ban the Beatles?
Who cares?
Not local disc jockeys.

Local radio stations can't very well jump on the Beatles "ban wagon" set in motion by U.S. radio station inflamed at Beatle John Lennon's controversial remarks about Jesus.

There's nothing to ban. Spokesmen for all three Victoria AM radio stations today said the furry-pated quartette had never been given air time.

"Up to now," said CJVI air staffer Doug Short our musical standard has prohibited playing the Beatles."

CFAX announcer Kirk Davis said "we play music written by the Beatles, but not the Beatles themselves."

Dave Hill, news director-announcer at CKDA, who described his station musical policy as "middle of the road" said his station played only "refinements" of the Beatles.

Loophole In B.C. Motor Act

VANCOUVER (CP) — The magistrate responsible for Vancouver motorists getting five days of ticket-free parking two months ago found another loophole in the Motor Vehicle Act Friday.

Magistrate Les Bewley dismissed a charge of failing to stop at a stop sign against Ainslie W. Bagnall of Vancouver and ruled that Section 175 of the MVA, which deals with stop signs at railway crossings, is not explicit enough.

The matistrate said the section makes it clear that a motorist must stop a minimum of 15 feet in front of a crossing but fails to mention the maximum.

"That stop may be six blocks or six miles before the crossing," Magistrate Bewley said.

"It's left to the motorist just how far ahead he should stop.

"I take it you stopped somewhere before coming to that sign?" he asked Bagnall.

"Yes," answered the accused.

On June 1, Magistrate Bewley dismissed a charge against a motorist that resulted in police banning tickets on certain traffic offences for five days.

He ruled a change in the MVA had deleted a section dealing with owner responsibility and police were told not to ticket overtime parkers and other traffic offences unless they could identify the drivers. The ban was dropped when Attorney-General Bonner said there was no need for it.

Fire Truck Mishap Mars Peach Parade

PENTICTON (CP)—A fireman was rushed to hospital Thursday after falling at the feet of Premier Bennett from a float in the Peach Festival parade.

Jerry Lunberg of Penticton fire department was treated and released from hospital after the seating on the back of the fire department's "hillbilly float" on which he was riding tumbled at the foot of the reviewing stand.

Standing on the reviewing stand at the time of the incident were Premier Bennett, Penticton Mayor Maurice Finnerty, festival president Frank McDonald, Edmonton Mayor Vince Dantzer and other guests and their wives.

Witnesses said the old fire truck turned into a float made a rush to the reviewing stand and turned away sharply, sending Lunberg and assorted decorations flying, scattering spectators.

Lunberg who was wearing a leg cast suffered minor cuts and bruises.

Accompanying "hillbilly" firemen and city workmen hurriedly cleared away the debris. The parade was not interrupted.
